Mr. Purchase: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the (a) direct and (b) incidental costs of processing spent fuel from advanced gas-cooled reactors. [24707]

Mr. Page: The terms for the reprocessing of spent advanced gas-cooled reactor—fuel are a commercial matter for British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.—Nuclear Electric Ltd. and Scottish Nuclear, the companies with which BNFL has contracted to do this work. The accounts for Nuclear Electric plc and Scottish Nuclear for 1994–95, the latest available year, show the amounts provided for this work.

Mr. Purchase: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the full financial liability for processing all spent advanced gas-cooled reactor fuels will fall on the owners of the advanced gas-cooled reactor stations following privatisation. [24706]

Mr. Eggar: As I have stated on numerous occasions, we have established the basic principle that assets will be followed by the associated liabilities. I can confirm that full financial liability for spent reactor fuel will fall on the owners of the reactors following privatisation.

Helms-Burton Act

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the impact of the Helms-Burton legislation on British businesses. [22614]

Mr. Nelson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 1 April 1996, Official Report, column 8.

Small Business

Ms Jowell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total number of new businesses with fewer than 100 employees established in each of the last four years, and how many were set up by women. [22793]

Mr. Page: Figures of the number of businesses registered for VAT for 1992 to 1994, the latest year for which date are available, are given in the table:

Number of VAT registrations in the United Kingdom 1992–1994

Year	VAT registrations (thousand)
1992	187
1993[1]	191
1994[1]	190

Note:
[1] Figures for 1993 and 1994 include adjustments to allow for the increase in the VAT threshold in November 1993
Source:
DTI Small Firms Statistics Unit.

About 45 per cent. of all businesses are VAT registered, so the total number of start-ups can be expected to be around double the number of new registrations.

Almost all new businesses will have fewer than 100 employees. Research by Barclays bank plc found that women accounted for 27 per cent. of start-ups in 1995, compared with around 25 per cent. earlier in the 1990s.

Mururoa Atoll

Mr Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what input the United Kingdom has into the International Atomic Energy Authority investigation of Mururoa atoll; and who will be considering, on behalf of the United Kingdom Government, the geological stability of the site. [23153]

Mr. Oppenheim: The International Atomic Energy Authority has undertaken, at the invitation of the French Government, to assess the radiological situation of the atolls of Mururoa and Fangataufa. The study will, inter alia, assess the geological stability and hydrology of the atolls. Experts from the United Kingdom will take part both in the study and in the high-level international advisory committee of scientists who will provide scientific guidance and direction to the IAEA on all matters related to the conduct of the study.

The study's findings, conclusions and recommendations will be contained in a report of the international advisory committee. This report will be published by the IAEA.

Regional Development Organisations

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has considered the business plans of the English regional development organisations; and what level of financial support he proposes to offer for 1996–97. [25117]

Mr. Eggar: I have studied the current performance and future plans of the eight English regional development organisations. I am pleased to say that they continue to make a significant contribution to the work of my Department's Invest in Britain Bureau, to the overall success of the UK in attracting inward investment, and in particular to their regions' performance. In recognition of this, I have today offered £8.68 million of grant for their inward investment promotion activities for 1996–97. I have also made available a total of £531,000 for inward investment promotion activities in the south-east and eastern regions, to be undertaken by the Government offices.

This 4.5 per cent. increase in funding is to enable the UK to remain competitive in promoting its locational advantages in the face of increasing competition for mobile inward investment projects. I have allocated the grant aid as follows.

Regional Development Organisation	1996–97 £000
Northern Development Company (NDC)	1,660
INWARD Ltd (in the north-west)	1,388
Yorkshire and Humberside development agency (YHDA)	1,410
West Midlands development agency (WMDA)	1,128.2
East Midlands Development Company Ltd. (EMDC)	810
Devon and Cornwall Development International (DCDI)	905
London First Centre	1,010
West of England development agency (WEDA)	370
Activities in the south-east and eastern regions	531

Grant is offered on an annual basis according to past performance, ability to absorb additional funding effectively, and for an agreed programme of future activities, with proper regard to value for money. It is Government policy to encourage direct inward investment to the UK because it contributes significantly to economic growth. Inward investment brings benefits both to the country as a whole and more specifically to the assisted areas.

Nuclear Power (Privatisation)

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress is being made in the preparations for the privatisation of the nuclear industry. [25120]

Mr. Eggar: I am pleased to report that significant progress is being made in the arrangements for privatising British Energy. Agreement has been reached in principle on the capital structure of the company. Details will be included in the share offer prospectus in due course.

Three further significant milestones were passed on 31 March, 1996:

an independent segregated fund, which will provide for the cost of eventual decommissioning of British Energy's nuclear power stations, was established and will come into effect on privatisation. The fund will receive an initial endowment of about £230 million from the British Energy Group; the group will initially contribute £16 million per year in real terms to the fund thereafter. An independent trust, known as the Nuclear Trust, will manage the segregated fund and will own a funding company—the Nuclear Generation Decommissioning Fund Ltd;

British Energy plc, and its operating subsidiaries Nuclear Electric Limited and Scottish Nuclear Limited, were formally vested, as was Magnox Electric plc, which will operate the magnox power stations in the public sector;

new nuclear site licences granted by the Health and Safety Executive for all British Energy and Magnox Electric nuclear power stations came into force.

Arrangements for the British Energy share offer are also on course. The offer is planned for July 1996. It will comprise on open-priced international tender offer to institutional investors and a UK public offer aimed at retail investors. The launch of the UK public offer is planned for late May. At least 30 per cent. of the shares are expected to be offered to retail investors. This proportion may be increased if retail demand is strong. Payment for the shares will be in instalments. The share price in the UK public offer will be at a discount to the international offer price. Incentives and preference in allocation will be available to individuals who register for the UK public offer through a share shop. Arrangements for share shops' participation in the UK public offer were announced on 28 March 1996.

Social Affairs Council

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EC Social Affairs Council meeting held on 29 March. [25116]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I attended the EC Social Affairs Council meeting on 29 March in Brussels with my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Social Security. There were no formal votes involving the UK.

There was an open discussion on the future of social protection, at which my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) represented the UK. He recognised the similar challenges facing member states —aging populations, affordability and efficiency—and emphasised the need to take decisions about social security at national level.

The other 14 member states agreed the directive on parental leave, subject to German parliamentary scrutiny. This directive is based on the Maastrict agreement on social policy and does not apply to the UK.

Political agreement was reached on a common position on the draft directive on the posting of workers. The UK and Portugal opposed the agreement.

There were Commission presentations on a Commission communication on Community structural policies and employment, and on a Commission communication on worker information and consultation.

The Presidency announced that there would be an interim progress report at the Florence European Council on employment matters and confirmed details of forthcoming events to consider Presdent Santer's proposed "confidence pact".

Telecommunications Council

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EC Telecommunications Council on 21 March. [25118]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The deputy UK permanent representative to the European Union represented the UK at the Telecommunications Council held in Brussels on 21 March.

Following the unanimous political agreement reached at the last Telecommunications Council, the Council agreed a common position on a series of guidelines for trans-European telecommunications networks. The Council also reached political agreement on a draft directive on interconnection in telecommunications—Ireland, Belgium and Luxembourg opposed. A short debate followed on a Commission communication on directories and other telecoms information services in a competitive environment. The Presidency adopted conclusions calling on member states and the Commission to continue to monitor developments in the sector.

The Presidency gave a progress report on discussion of a draft directive to amend the open network provision framework and leased lines directives 90/387/EEC and 92/44/EEC to a competitive environment. The Commission made a brief presentation of its communication on universal service for telecoms in a competitive environment. A draft decision for EU action on satellite personal communications services was referred back to the Committee of Permanent Representatives for further discussion. There was also an informal lunchtime discussion on the progress of multilateral negotiations in the World Trade Organisation on basic telecommunications with Sir Leon Brittan.

Computers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the problem of non-recognition by computers of the year 2000 with regard to his Department's computers and those for which it is responsible. [24400]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department is aware of the problem and has already had initial discussions with the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency—the Government centre for information systems—and our main computer services supplier. CCTA has initiated a programme of consultation and education in which we are participating and, in parallel, we are investigating the scale and complexity of the problem as it affects our own IT systems. We will proceed on the basis of the results of these exercises.

Coal Industry Pneumoconiosis Compensation Scheme

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many claims were settled under the coal industry pneumoconiosis compensation scheme from 1989 to date; when he will update the schedule of payments under the coal industry pneumoconiosis compensation scheme; if they will be back-dated; and if he will make a statement. [24830]

Mr. Page: This is a matter for the British Coal Corporation. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Assistance to Companies

Mr. Jamieson [illegible] ask the President of the Board of Trade in respect [illegible]ow many liquidated companies in the south-west w[illegible]h received financial support from his Department in each of the last eight years his Department are creditors; and what is the total owed. [20792]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 14 March 1996]: The information, in respect of recipients of support under the Department's regional, enterprise and technology schemes, is as follows:

Year of liquidation	Number of companies	Total amount owed
		£ thousand
1988	4	141
1989	10	197
1990	18	465
1991	12	290
1992	13	280
1994	8	471

All but £81,000 of the above has been written off.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what safeguards exist in his Department to ensure that conflicts of interest do not arise between employees of his Department or others giving advice in any capacity in his Department's regional offices in respect of the issuing of financial assistance to local businesses; and when they were introduced. [22566]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 25 March 1996]: The Department's conditions of service have for many years required staff to declare any conflicts of interest. Failure to do so can lead to disciplinary action against the member of staff concerned. Under the Department's standard conditions of contract for consultants, external advisers who fail to declare a conflict are exposed to the possibility of termination of contract and other legal action. This has been the position since 1992. The Department announced in February that all future contracts with external advisers will contain a clause requiring them to agree not to take up appointments with firms on which they have previously given advice in relation to regional selective assistance grant applications for a period of two years after payments to these firms have ceased. The Department is considering whether similar action should be taken in respect of other financial assistance schemes.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what checks are in operation to ensure that the conditions under which financial assistance is approved by his Department are met by the companies that have received this assistance. [22570]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 25 March 1996]: The checks vary depending on the nature of the assistance given and the risk to which the Department is exposed.

ROM-Data Corporation Ltd.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will allow immediate access by the hon. Member for Plymouth, Devonport, on a private and confidential basis, to the completed full report by his Department into events surrounding the collapse of the ROM-Data Corporation Ltd. in December 1994; and if he will make a statement. [23555]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 1 April 1996]: This report covers matters which are the subject of a current inquiry by the Serious Fraud Office and a preliminary investigation under the Department's own disciplinary proceedings. It would not accord with the requirements of employment law or the Department's own procedures, and would be unfair to those involved, to provide access to any such material until these investigations are complete and the employees concerned have had an opportunity to put their case.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the oral answer of the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Member for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkins) on 26 February. Official Report, column 576, if he will list those statutory instruments and Acts of Parliament which have been gold plated in the past five years; and what steps he is taking to amend or repeal each piece of gold plating on existing legislation. [23627]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 1 April 1996]: The Government's policy is not to add unnecessary burdens with implementing EC directives. Departments take every opportunity to review existing legislation in the light of this. Officials are currently working on revised guidance to enable Ministers to see where implementing legislation goes beyond the underlying EC directive.

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the estimated annual saving to business from the Deregulation (Wireless and Telegraphy) Order 1996. [23641]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 April 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

The deregulatory gain for the television dealer trade arising from this order is estimated to be about £10,000 a year.

Environmental Technology Industry

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of the British market demand for environmental technology was met by (a) Britain, (b) Germany, (c) the United States of America and (d) Japan in (i) 1990, (ii) 1991, (iii) 1992, (iv) 1993, (v) 1994 and (vi) 1995. [24113]

Mr. Page [holding answer 2 April 1996]: It is not possible to identify how much of the UK market is met by specific countries due to re-exporting of imported goods. Figures for manufacturer sales and exports can include imported goods.

There is no international agreed definition of the environmental technology industry. The available information for imports of pollution control and monitoring equipment is given in the table. This is based on definitions prepared by ECOTEC on behalf of the joint environmental markets unit.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of profits earned by British environmental technology industries derived from export sales in (a) 1990, (b) 1991, (c) 1992, (d) 1993, (e) 1994 and (f) 1995. [24109]

Mr. Page [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The information is not available centrally.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of British environmental technology industries derived less than (a) 10 per cent. and (b) 20 per cent. of their earnings from exports in (i) 1992, (ii) 1993, (iii) 1994 and (iv) 1995. [24110]

Mr. Page [holding answer 2 April 1996]: Information on individual company exports and production is not held centrally.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the British share of the British environmental technology market for (a) air monitoring, (b) water monitoring, (c) waste treatment, (d) water treatment, (e) energy management, (f) waste disposal and (g) air pollution treatment technologies in (i) 1990, (ii) 1991, (iii) 1992, (iv) 1993, (v) 1994 and (vi) 1995. [24114]

Mr. Page [holding answer 2 April 1996]: It is not possible to identify how much of the UK market is met by UK-produced goods due to re-exporting of imported goods. Figures for manufacturer sales and exports can include imported goods.

There is no international agreed definition of the environmental technology industry. Using as a definition of environmental products industries, ones producing "a product which enhances or prevents the deterioration of the external environment", it is estimated that in 1992 UK manufacturer sales of environmental products were £5.4 billion, exports were £850 million, imports were £495 million and the UK market was £5.1 billion. Estimates have not been made for later years.

The available information for the UK market for pollution control and monitoring equipment is given in the table. This is based on definitions prepared by ECOTEC on behalf of the joint environmental markets unit.

Patent Office

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what core functions of the Patent Office are being considered for contracting out; and if he will make a statement. [24160]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The remit placed on the Patent Office by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade in his statement of 14 December 1994 was to contract out activities wherever this was compatible with its statutory role and good value for money. In pursuit of this remit, the Patent Office, in its latest corporate plan for the next five years, foresees the employment of up to 750 civil service staff supported by about 250 contracted staff working for external suppliers. Services currently under consideration for contractorisation are the London front office, informatin technology services and the central inquiry unit.

Torture Equipment

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action the British Government take to ensure that British companies do not re-export torture equipment originating in third countries. [24274]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The Government control the export of weapons under the Export of Goods (Control) Order. It is not, however, practicable to control the export of the wide range of articles that might be misused for the purposes of torture. The Government deplore the use of torture in any circumstances and would never knowingly do anything to support its practice or any trade in instruments of torture anywhere in the world.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action Her Majesty's Government are taking to ensure that British companies do not engage in the off-shore sale of equipment which could be used for torture purposes. [24273]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The Government deplore the use of torture in any circumstances and would never knowingly do anything to support its practice, or any trade in instruments of torture anywhere in the world.

However, it is not practicable to regulate trade in the wide range of articles that might conceivably be misused for the purposes of torture. In respect of goods licensable under the Export of Goods (Control) Order, however, the Government are considering whether to cover this issue in forthcoming public consultation on a range of export control matters following Sir Richard Scott's recent report.

Defence Technology

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to develop a national strategy for defence technology. [23688]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I have been asked to reply.

In July 1995, my Department announced its intention of establishing a technology strategy for access to, and development of, defence technology. Since that time, there have been discussions with defence industry, academia and other interested parties. It is envisaged that a further round of consultations will be initiated shortly with the object of publication of the technology strategy in the autumn.

Mr. Squire: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what increase in funding has been provided for technology demonstrator programmes for defence since the 1995 report from the technology foresight panel. [23695]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I have been asked to reply.

Since the 1995 technology foresight report from the defence and aerospace panel, the defence budget has increased its funding for technology demonstrator programmes by £12.3 million over the next 10 years.

Executive Action

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those areas of Executive action where he has discretion to act in respect of an individual without giving reasons for his decision. [20533]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Comprehensive records are not kept in the form requested. My Department is committed generally to giving reasons for administrative decisions to those affected, in accordance with the code of practice on access to Government information. My Department has identified from readily available sources the statutory powers of inquiry under the Financial Services Act 1986, the Insurance Companies Act 1982 and the Companies Act 1989 where, although the Secretary of State has to have reason to exercise these powers, he does not have to give reasons for his decision to do so. Import, export and sanctions licensing is also an area where the Secretary of State has discretion to act in respect of an individual without giving reasons for his decision.

Home and Overseas Trade Committee

Sir David Steel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to establish an interdepartmental committee to oversee home and overseas trade as recommended by Sir Richard Scott. [21299]

Mr. Lang: None at present.

EC Research Council

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EC Research Council held on 25 March. [25121]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Council undertook an initial exchange of views on the Commission's proposal to increase the funding of the fourth framework programme for research and technological development by 700 mecu. Such an increase would require amendment of the financial perspectives. The UK, with five other member states, repeated its opposition to such amendment.

The Council adopted a resolution outlining a strategy for the EU's relations with third countries in research and technological development. The Council met the research Ministers of the nine associated states of central and eastern Europe and the Baltic to exchange views on the scope for strengthening their scientific and technological links with the EU.

The Council had a brief initial debate on the Commission's green paper on innovation. The Council will return to the matter in June. The UK drew attention to the contribution that the launch of EASDAQ in September 1996 would make to improving financing for high technology ventures, a key concern of the green paper.

Scott Report

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made in his examination of issues raised by the Scott report. [24177]

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the document placed in the Library of the House by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster last month entitled, "The timetable for taking forward recommendations of the Report of the Inquiry into the export of defence equipment and dual use goods to Iraq and related prosecutions".

Manufacturing Processes (Beef and Beef By-products)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all the proprietary products, additives and commonly used manufacturing processes which involve the use of beef or beef by-products which are available for sale in United Kingdom retail outlets. [24091]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 April 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not centrally recorded and cannot be provided without disproportionate cost.

HEALTH

Health Authorities (Irregular Payments)

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was received by each of the 17 persons in receipt of irregular payments from the former Yorkshire regional health authority [22732]

(2) if he will break down by recipient and health service body the £579,000 of irregular expenditure on relocation qualified in the Comptroller and Auditor General's report on the NHS—England—summarised accounts 1993–94; and in each case (a) how much was paid to each recipient and by which body; (b) how much has been recovered and (c) what action is planned to facilitate the recovery of outstanding amounts. [22733]

Mr. Malone: Irregular relocation payments, totalling £579,000, were made as follows:

Former Yorkshire RHA £	South Birmingham DHA £
19,750	131,000
55,000	—
43,750	—
5,250	—
16,250	—
7,950	—
6,000	—
49,915	—
67,200	—
10,250	—
28,750	—
4,750	—
4,500	—
13,500	—
19,455	—

The successor authorities are pursuing the recovery of these moneys. Repayment terms have been agreed in one case.

Residential Accommodation

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what rate of interest on invested capital is to be assumed by a local authority when assessing the charge to be made to a person in residential accommodation arranged by that local authority. [23401]

Mr. Bowis: The formula for calculating the contribution a resident makes from his capital between the lower and upper limits is not intended to represent any rate of return that could be obtained from investing that capital. It provides a straightforward method of calculating the weekly contribution which people with capital in between the two limits are expected to make from those resources to help meet their accommodation costs.

GP Fundholding (Wakefield)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many fundholding GPs in the Wakefield area have agreed to enter into a total fund project. [23428]

Mr. Horam: Discussions are being held with all general practitioners in Wakefield health authority about their involvement with the district wide total purchasing project. This includes the 148 existing fundholders and a further 28 GPs in their preparatory year.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has evaluated on the ability of the human immune system to fight against infection by the agent responsible for BSE in cattle and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in humans; and if he will make a statement. [24176]

Mr. Horam: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee has considered this issue and has concluded that the classical immune response is not seen in these diseases, since the human immune system does not play a major role in protection against the agents causing spongiform encephalopathies. The evidence from scrapie in sheep suggests that immuno-suppressed subjects are at no greater risk than those whose systems are intact.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish all the scientific evidence he has evaluated since 1992 on bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [24539]

Mr. Horam: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee provides the Government with expert scientific advice on BSE and CJD. In 1995, SEAC published "Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies: A Summary of Present Knowledge and Research", copies of which are available in the Library. Arrangements are in hand to publish the evidence about a previously unrecognised form of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in a scientific journal as soon as is practicable.

Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of SEAC. [24174]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is as follows:

Chairman

Professor J. R. Pattison

Dean of University College London Medical School where he is also Professor of Medical Microbiology.

Deputy Chairman

Dr. R. G. Will

Consultant neurologist at the Western General Hospital, Edinburgh and Director of the UK CJD Surveillance Unit.

Membership

Professor I. V. Allen

Neuropathologist at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast.

Professor J. Almond

Virologist and Professor of Microbiology at the University of Reading.

Professor F. Brown FRS

Virologist, Molecular Pathology, Plum Island Animal Disease Center, USA.

Mr. R. Bradley CBE

Veterinary Pathologist and Chairman of the BSE sub-group of the Scientific Veterinary Committee.

Professor J. Collinge

Head of the Prion Diseases Group at St. Mary's College Hospital, London.

Dr. W. D. Hueston

Epidemiologist at the USDA Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, Fort Collins, Colorado, USA.

Dr. R. H. Kimberlin

Independent Consultant on scrapie and related diseases

Dr. Mike Painter

Consultant in Communicable Disease Control, City of Manchester.

Mr. D. B. Pepper

Private veterinary surgeon.

Professor P. Smith

Epidemiologist at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

Dr. W. Watson

Former Director of the Central Veterinary Laboratory.

Children (Residential Care)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state (a) the approximate costs of maintaining children in residential care in local authority and voluntary charitable institutions for children of (i) primary and (ii) secondary school age, (b) the approximate total expenditure by these bodies for the latest available years and (c) the net reduction in cost to public funds for each child fully adopted at the same ages. [24414]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research his Department has carried out to assess the educational standards of residents and ex-residents of residential children's homes; and what assessment has been made of such standards, with particular reference to reading and writing skills, compared to those of other children; [24519]

(2) what research his Department has carried out to assess the offending and reoffending rates of residents and ex-residents of residential children's homes; and what assessment he has made of such rates compared with those of other children. [24518]

Mr. Bowis: No specific research has been carried out on these areas of residential care. A study which looks at a sample of 224 young people while they are in residential care and examines outcomes, including education and offending behaviour is, however, nearing completion.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are in place for (a) local authorities and (b) other bodies to monitor the educational achievements and offending rates of residents and ex-residents of residential children's homes; and what arrangements exist for action to be taken by such bodies if such rates are unsatisfactory. [24520]

Mr. Bowis: These are matters for each local authority to determine. To assist them, however, in May 1995, the Department launched a set of materials called "Looking After Children: Good Parenting, Good Outcomes". The materials form a complete package for assessing, planning and reviewing the experiences and progress of children for whom statutory agencies have taken responsibility. Specific education sections include questions not only on progress and achievements of children but on the opportunities and support being provided within the care placement to enable them to succeed educationally. Seventy-two local authorities are implementing the materials.

Matters affecting local education authorities and other arrangements for monitoring the educational achievements of these children are primarily for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment.

Relocation Support

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what conclusions the NHS executive has reached from its inquiries into irregular relocation support to staff after February 1993; and what was (a) the total cost of such support and (b) the amount to be recovered (i) in total and (ii) by health authority. [21997]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 21 March 1996]: None. The new General Council agreement on removal expenses, promulgated on 11 February 1993, allows an employing authority to meet any reasonable cost incurred in relocation.

Clinical Audits

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many clinical audits have been carried out by (a) health authorities, (b) trusts and (c) GPs in total, and for each region; [24192]

(2) how many clinical audits have been carried out for each broad group of treatments and procedures in each of the last three years. [24193]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the expenditure on clinical audit by NHS regions up to the most recent period for which information is available; and what was the cost per audit in each region and the cost per head of current population in each region. [24225]

Mr. Horam: The expenditure on clinical audit by all national health service regions in 1994–95 was estimated to be £61 million in the National Audit Office report presented to Parliament on 7 December 1995. It is not possible to disaggregate this figure to give cost per audit or per head of population.

Lateral Epicondylitus

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of people (a) discharged from hospital and (b) referred to out-patient departments with the diagnosis of lateral epicondylitus in each of the last five years. [24195]

Mr. Horam: Data available centrally do not separately identify lateral epicondylitis. The condition is one of a group under the general heading of enthesopathy of the elbow region, region, ICD9 726.3. The number of finished consultant episodes within this group, where a discharge from hospital is indicated, in each of the last five years for which figures are available, is shown in the table. Data on referrals to out-patient departments are not available centrally.

England	Number
1989–90	1,696
1990–91	3,182
1991–92	3,478
1992–93	3,789
1993–94	4,195

EDS Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what savings to date have been made by his Department as a result of out-sourcing arrangements made with the EDS computer system; what assessment he has made of the equivalent costs for carrying out this work in house; and if he will make a statement. [24228]

Mr. Horam: The Department has no out-sourcing arrangements with EDS.

Medical Research

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures he currently takes to safeguard against fraud involving medical research studies for which he is responsible; [24486]

(2) what measures he is taking to safeguard against fraud involving medical research studies for which he is responsible. [24485]

Mr. Horam: It is the responsibility of the whole medical research community and its sponsors—which includes research councils, medical charities, Government Departments and industry—to ensure good practice in the conduct of research. This operates largely on a self-regulating basis through the principles of peer review and through guidelines on good practice which are issued by a number of bodies.

This Department has had a code of practice since 1993 which sets out the principles and practices for the commissioning and management of all departmentally funded research and development.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set up a review body to address (a) the investigation of fraud and (b) the review of complaints involving medical research. [24482]

Mr. Horam: It is the responsibility of the whole medical research community and its sponsors—which includes research councils, medical charities, Government Departments and industry—to ensure good practice in the conduct of research.

This Department is committed to maintaining high standards in the commissioning and management of the research that it funds and maintains open dialogue with the wider research community on all aspects of research.

There is no intention, at present, for this Department to set up a review body for the investigation of fraud.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the formal career structure for research staff involved in medical research studies. [24483]

Mr. Horam: In February, the Department issued a first statement of a research capacity strategy for the Department and the national health service. This statement is out for consultation in the research community and the NHS until the middle of April, copies are available in the Library. This exercise—which covers a range of medical and health care professionals—will be supplemented by meetings with relevant organisations. It will also be considered by the national forum of medical research funders, prior to the publication of a further statement.

This consultation exercise recognises that responsibility for developing and maintaining a workforce capable of delivering high-quality research rests with a number of organisations, and the Department is committed to working with others to achieve that end.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning fraud involving medical research studies; and if he will make a statement. [24484]

Mr. Horam: My Department met with the president of the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists to discuss the issue of scientific fraud. My Department also maintains close contact with the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, which has set up a working group to re-examine the issue of good research practice.

Contact Orders

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to monitor the impact on the health of children of contact orders under section 8 of the Children Act 1989. [24791]

Mr. Bowis: None.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to carry out research on the impact of contact orders under section 8 of the Children Act 1989, on regular attendance by children at places of religious worship. [24790]

Mr. Bowis: None.

Accident and Emergency Services

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many designated receiving unit accident and emergency departments do not have an associated 24-hour observation ward; and what proportion of the total this represents. [24708]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received about the future of accident and emergency units in Lancashire hospitals following publication of the Audit Commission report; and if he will make a statement. [24123]

Mr. Horam: We have received three letters on this subject. Accident and emergency services in Lancashire are a matter for the county's four district health authorities. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of these authorities for more details.

Intensive Care Beds

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds there are in each intensive care unit in England; and if he will make a statement. [24637]

Mr. Horam: "Bed availability for England", a copy of which is available in the Library, contains the available information by individual national health service trusts, directly managed units and the special health authorities with summary tables for England.

Computers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the problem of non-recognition by computers of the year 2000 with regard to his Department's computers and those for which it is responsible. [24407]

Mr. Horam: Preliminary analysis of the Department of Health's own mainframe computer systems has already been undertaken to assess the likely impact of the change of millennium. A further detailed analysis is to be carried out during 1996–97 to fully assess the impact of the change.

National health service systems users and suppliers have been alerted to the problem by a series of articles published over the last year in the British Journal of Healthcare Computing and Information Management by the information management centre. The IMC will later this month be deciding what further action is necessary.

The NHS central register is in the process of installing a new computer system as part of the new NHS number programme. The specification for the system includes provision for the year 2000.

This issue is common to many organisations and the Department will be collaborating with other government and non-governmental agencies to ensure that intelligence is shared.

Waste Minimisation

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress in establishing an office waste minimisation strategy for his Department, indicating the targets set. [24516]

Mr. Horam: In common with other Departments, we will set targets for minimisation of office waste by the end of 1996.

We are currently in the process of establishing reliable baseline data on which these targets will be based.

NORTHERN IRELAND

All-party Negotiations

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if amendments can be made to the consultation paper, "Ground Rules for Substantive All-party Negotiations", following consultations with Northern Ireland political parties. [22443]

Mr. Ancram: As the hon. Member acknowledges, the paper issued on 15 March was a consultation paper. There needs to be widespread agreement on the issues covered in the paper and I am grateful for the detailed comments which have now been received from most of the recipients.

Terrorism

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all terrorist activity having taken place in the constituency of West Belfast since 10 April 1992. [23547]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Details of incidents are not recorded on a constituency basis, however, I can give the hon. Member an indication of the number of incidents which may be considered to be terrorist-related which occurred in the general area of West Belfast.

Between 10 April 1992—28 March 1996

	Number
Deaths	42
Shooting incidents	386
Bombing incidents	153
Incendiaries	11
Casualties as a result of 'punishment' shootings	147
Casualties as a result of 'punishment' assaults	116
Armed robberies	389

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease have occurred in each of the Northern Ireland parliamentary constituencies in each of the last 10 years; [23411]

(2) how many Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease-related deaths have occurred in Northern Ireland in the last 10 years. [23412]

Mr. Moss: There have been six cases, all fatal, resulting in one death in each of the years 1986, 1992, 1993 and 1995 and two deaths in 1989. Information is not available by parliamentary constituency.

Benefits (West Belfast)

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in West Belfast are currently in receipt of disability living allowance. [23413]

Mr. Moss: In August 1995, there was a total of 10,882 people in receipt of disability living allowance in the following wards; Andersonstown, Beechmount, Blackstaff, Clonard, Colin Glen, Falls, Falls Road, Glencairn, Glencolin, Glen Road, Highfield, Kilwee, Ladybrook, Shankill, Twinbrook, Upper Springfield and Whiterock.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many people from West Belfast have applied for attendance allowance in each of the last five years; and what percentage of applications have been disallowed; [23415]

(2) how many people from West Belfast have applied for invalidity benefit or incapacity benefit in each of the last five years; and what percentage of applications have been disallowed; [23417]

(3) how many people in West Belfast have applied for disability living allowance in each of the last five years; and what percentage of applications were disallowed. [23414]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not available.

Prisoners

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the case of Messrs Patrick Kane, Sean Kelly and Michael Timmons. [23548]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my response to his motion for the Adjournment of the House of 15 March 1995, Official Report, columns 872–80. I re-emphasised my right hon. and learned Friend's assurance that, pending the establishment of the criminal cases review commission, he was willing to consider most carefully any further material put to him about the cases of Messrs Kane, Timmons and Kelly. He has not received any substantive material in the meantime.

Attendance Allowance

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in West Belfast are currently in receipt of attendance allowance. [23416]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not available at present.

Incapacity Benefit

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people from West Belfast are currently in receipt of incapacity benefit. [23418]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not available at present.

Brooklands Primary School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the enrolment in each of the past five years at Brooklands primary school; what is the expected enrolment at the school in each of the next five years; what proposals there are to provide additional accommodation at the school; how many places in primary one will be available in the next academic year; how many applicants there are for places in primary one at the school for the next academic year; and if he will make a statement. [23682]

Mr. Ancram: The enrolments in each of the past five years are as follows:

Year	Number of pupils enrolled
1991–92	548 (at January 1991)
1992–93	552 (at October 1992)
1993–94	537 (at October 1993)
1994–95	558 (at October 1994)
1995–96	576 (at October 1995)

It is not possible to accurately project an enrolment figure for each of the next five years. It is estimated, however, that the long-term enrolment of the school will be 593, excluding nursery accommodation.

Provision of controlled primary school places in Dundonald is the responsibility of the South-Eastern education and library board. I understand that the board has no plans to increase the size of Brooklands primary school at present but is reviewing demand for primary school places in the Dundonald area.

The Department has approved a temporary variation to the school's admissions number to 87 for the 1996–97 school year. The school has received 92 applications.

Public Bodies (Women)

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he proposes to increase the number of women employed in senior positions in public bodies in Northern Ireland. [23970]

Sir John Wheeler: The chief executives' forum, the association of chief executive officers of public bodies in Northern Ireland, is actively seeking to encourage women to further their careers within the public services. This month, under the auspices of the women's group of chief executives within the forum, a formal network is to be established for women who have attained senior management positions within the civil service and in public bodies throughout the Province: addressing the problems experienced by women in management in the public services a conference will consider what might be done to help, support and encourage women managers in their careers. This initiative has the full support of my right hon. and learned Friend and the Baroness Denton of Wakefield, the Northern Ireland Office Minister with responsibility for womens' issues, who will address the conference.

The initiative forms part of a programme of work in the area of gender and equality of opportunity being pursued by the chief executive's forum. In December 1994 the forum and the Equal Opportunities Commission for Northern Ireland published a joint research report and a number of recommendations. The findings of the report have been accepted by all the public bodies involved and endorsed by the Government. The recommendations of the report are currently being acted upon and, 15 months after publication of the report, further work has been commissioned to ascertain progress and to identify and encourage the spread of good practice.

Peace Programme

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) women and (b) men have been appointed to each of the partnership committees established to oversee the European peace programme in Northern Ireland. [23968]

Mr. Moss: District partnerships are currently being established in each of the 26 district council areas. The composition of the partnerships is to be approved by the overseeing body, the Northern Ireland partnership board. At present the breakdown of women and men is as follows:

	Women	Men	Total
NIPB	9	14	23
Antrim	5	13	18
Ards	8	13	21
Armagh	5	12	17
Castlereagh	10	15	[1]27
Ballymena	6	18	24
Ballymoney	4	14	18
Banbridge	5	13	18
Belfast	7	14	21
Carrickfergus	6	12	18
Coleraine	7	17	24
Cookstown	5	16	21
Craigavon	8	13	21

Newry and Mourne	6	13	19
Newtownabbey	7	17	24
North Down	11	13	24
Omagh	8	10	18
South Tyrone	6	20	26
Strabane	5	17	22

[1] Some names still to be confirmed.

Making Belfast Work

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) women and (b) men have been appointed to the "Making Belfast Work" board. [23969]

Mr. Moss: "Making Belfast Work" is an interdepartmental programme focusing on the most disadvantaged areas of Belfast. "Making Belfast Work" does not have a board but its strategy is set by the Belfast special action group which comprises senior civil servants from Government Departments and is chaired by Sir David Fell, head of the Northern Ireland civil service.

Mourne Conduit Replacement Contracts

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what account he took when seeking tenders for the two Mourne conduit replacement contracts of the request on page 15 of "A Green Guide for Suppliers of Goods and Services to the Northern Ireland Civil Service" published by the Environmental Service of the Department of the Environment. [24352]

Mr. Moss: The "Green Guide" was not published by the Department's environment service until 13 October 1995, some five months after the issue of tender documents for the Mourne conduit replacements scheme.

EDS Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the savings to date to his Department and his Department's agencies from out-sourcing arrangements made with the EDS software computer system; what assessment he has made of the equivalent costs for carrying out this work in-house; and if he will make a statement. [24359]

Mr. Moss: The Northern Ireland Office, the Northern Ireland departments and their agencies have one contract with EDS. This contract resulted from EDS taking over a public sector organisation which had previously provided the relevant service. An in-house service did not therefore exist and could have been established and maintained only at a higher cost than the contract with EDS.

Hospital Contracts

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria are used by the Eastern area health and social services board in drawing up its present contracts as a customer of (i) the Royal Victoria hospital, (ii) the Belfast city hospital and (iii) the Ulster hospital, Dundonald; and what is the value of the present contracts at these three hospitals. [24377]

Mr. Moss: The criteria used by the Eastern health and social services board in contracting for services take account of: Government policy; the assessed health and social care needs of its resident population; the available resources; the services offered by providers and their effectiveness, efficiency, quality and value for money; and patient and client choice.

The value of 1995–96 contracts between the Eastern health and social services board and (i) the Royal Group of hospitals trust (ii) the Belfast City hospital trust and (iii) the Ulster North Down and Ards hospital trust are as follows:

Provider	1995–96 Contract value £
Royal Group of Hospitals Trust	48,301,000
Belfast City Hospital Trust	39,082,000
Ulster, North Down, and Ards Hospitals Trust	38,080,000

Racial Discrimination

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will introduce legislation to inhibit racial discrimination. [23804]

Mr. Ancram: I expect to issue a draft legislative proposal for an Order in Council later this year.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how (a) the policy appraisal and fair treatment guidelines and (b) targeting social need policy have been applied to ensure equality for members of ethnic minority communities. [23807]

Mr. Ancram: The policy appraisal and fair treatment guidelines, which came into effect on 1 January 1994, aim to ensure that in the development or review of policies and programmes departments and agencies do not unfairly or unnecessarily discriminate against specified sections of the community, including people of different ethnic groups. The first annual report on PAFT recorded a range of measures in support of ethnic minority groups, and in 1995 the Government announced their intention to introduce race relations legislation in Northern Ireland.

Through the targeting social need initiative the Government seek to improve social and economic conditions by targeting resources on areas and people objectively defined as being in greatest need.

Irish travellers are a minority community which experiences high levels of disadvantage. However, generally speaking, membership of an ethnic minority group in Northern Ireland does not, of itself, indicate that a person suffers socio-economic disadvantage.

Travelling People

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to improve the treatment of travelling people in Northern Ireland. [23806]

Mr. Moss: As I announced on 27 April 1995 it is the Government's intention to introduce legislation on race relations in Northern Ireland as soon as possible. The legislation will be introduced by Order in Council and will specifically refer to the Irish traveller community as an ethnic group. I expect to issue a draft of the legislative proposal later this year.

The Northern Ireland Department of Environment has published a review of Government policies affecting travellers in Northern Ireland. Interested parties have been consulted and Government's response to the recommendations will be published later in the year.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action has been taken to meet the accommodation needs of travellers; and how many sites (a) have been provided and (b) are planned. [23809]

Mr. Moss: To date 10 sites have been provided, one is nearing completion and a further two sites are planned.

Waste Minimisation

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress in establishing an office waste minimisation strategy for his Department, indicating the targets set. [24515]

Mr. Moss: Office waste minimisation is a key aspect of the green housekeeping strategy of Northern Ireland departments. A strategy for office waste minimisation, containing precise targets, will now be drawn up.

Gas Supply Licences

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy that no licence to operate gas supply in Northern Ireland be granted within three months of the coming into operation of article 8(8) of the Gas (Northern Ireland) Order 1996. [23906]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 1 April 1996]: No. A gas market in Northern Ireland offers many benefits and it is the intention to encourage rapid and extensive development of such a market. The purpose of articles 8(8) is to enable the development of the new gas market to commence on the earliest possible date.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy that no licence be granted under articles 8 and 9 of the Gas (Northern Ireland) Order which will give monopoly of supply at the expense of competition. [23908]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 1 April 1996]: No. The ability to grant exclusive rights under articles 8 and 9 reflects the very significant commercial risks associated with the development of a new gas industry in Northern Ireland entirely from scratch. Any applications for exclusive rights will be considered on their merits.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that licences granted under the Gas (Northern Ireland) Order contain a requirement that domestic gas be supplied to the whole of the Province. [23904]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 1 April 1996]: The development of a natural gas industry in Northern Ireland will be undertaken by the private sector on grounds of commercial viability. It would not be appropriate for any licence holder to be compelled to supply gas to domestic consumers throughout the Province.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that licences granted under the Gas (Northern Ireland) Order will require immediate open access and full transparency of charges for use of gas supply networks. [23905]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 1 April 1996]: No. Periods of exclusivity may be appropriate because of the commercial risks attaching to the development of the new natural gas industry in Northern Ireland. Once any exclusivity period had ended, there would be third party access to the network on the basis of regulated charges.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy that no licence will be issued under article 8(8) of the Gas (Northern Ireland) Order 1996 without an evaluation of all licence applications and their area of operation and a full public consultation. [23907]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 1 April 1996]: When issuing a licence for any area the Department of Economic Development and the Regulator will have regard for their general duties under article 5 of the order. The purpose of article 8(8) is to enable the development of the new gas market to commence on the earliest possible date.

Unlawful Industrial Action Commissioner

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the costs of operating the Northern Ireland commissioner for protection against unlawful industrial action; who is the current commissioner; how many applications for assistance have been made over the last two years; and if he will give the equivalent data for its Great Britain counterpart. [23787]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The Northern Ireland Commissioner for Protection Against Unlawful Industrial Action is Mrs. Margaret Ann Dinsmore. The Northern Ireland post was established on 1 October 1995.

The other information requested is as follows:

	Operating costs 1995–96	Number of applications for assistance
		1994–95	1995–96
NI Commissioner for Protection Against Unlawful Industrial Action	[1]£12,000	n/a	none
(Great Britain) Commissioner for Protection Against Unlawful Industrial Action	£92,771	none	3

[1] Apportioned costs. Administration of NI Commissioner for Protection Against Unlawful Industrial Action is shared with NI Commissioner for the Rights of Trade Union Members.
n/a = not applicable.

Bridges

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) the daily vehicle traffic flow and (b) the projected flows in the originating plans for (i) the new bridge on the A2 Bangor road into the Belfast harbour estate and (ii) the new Foyle bridge in Londonderry. [23783]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The information is as follows:

	A2 Bangor road bridge	Foyle bridge
Daily traffic flow	1,581	20,617
Projected traffic flow in originating plans	The new bridge on the A2 was constructed by the Belfast Harbour Commissioners. The Department does not have details of the projected flow in the originating plans	20,000

Training (Irish Republic)

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what reciprocal financial arrangements exists in respect of (a) nursing studentships and (b) other professional training positions between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic; [24436]

(2) what reciprocal financial arrangements exist in respect of third level education between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic. [24434]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 2 April 1996]: None in respect of nursing studentships or awards administered by the Department of Education and the education and library boards.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the number of professional training positions, with special reference to nursing studentships, provided during each of the past five years for students from the Irish Republic; and what has been the cost to relevant Northern Ireland Departments. [24435]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The information is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Gentleman when it becomes available and place it in the Library of the House.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what has been the number of students from Northern Ireland who have received their third level education in the Irish Republic during each of the past five years; and what has been the cost of (a) their tuition fees and (b) their maintenance grants to the Department of Education for Northern Ireland; [24433]

(2) what has been the number of students from the Irish Republic who, under current European regulations, have received their third level education in Northern Ireland during each of the past five years; and what has ben the cost of their tuition fees to the Department of Education for Northern Ireland. [24432]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The information is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Gentleman when it becomes available and place it in the library of the House.

Maryfield Secretariat

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what has been the total cost to his Department for each of the years 1986 to 1995 of maintaining the Maryfield secretariat in terms of (a) salaries and (b) travel and miscellaneous expenses; [24437]

(2) what has been the total cost to his Department for each year from 1986 to 1995 of maintenance costs and running cost for the Maryfield building; and what has been the contribution, in each of those years, from the Government of the Irish Republic. [24438]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The information is as follows:

1. Other running costs comprise costs of training and conferences, hospitality, uniforms and protective clothing, telecomms, stationery printing etc., publications, office equipment, publicity and advertising, postage, vehicles, accommodation charges and running costs.
2. Maintenance costs comprise costs of estate management DOE(NI) and Non-DOE(NI), maintenance and minor works DOE(NI) and non-DOE(NI).
3. Receipts from Government of Republic of Ireland for 1992–93 included a contribution towards the cost of political talks.

Beef Industry

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in how many beef herds in Northern Ireland BSE has been identified; and how many beef cattle from these herds have been slaughtered in each year since 1986. [24209]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 2 April 1996]: BSE has been identified in 229 beef herds in Northern Ireland.

BSE was made notifiable in Northern Ireland in November 1988 when recording of cases of the disease commenced. The number of cattle from beef herds which have been slaughtered since then is:

1990: 15

1991: 26

1992: 47

1993: 53

1994: 80

1995: 42

1996: 6.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated total number of beef cattle in Northern Ireland at present; and how many beef cattle there were in Northern Ireland in each year since 1986. [24210]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The information is given in the table:

Year	Numbers of beef cattle at December (000)
1986	1,090
1987	1,046
1988	1,084
1989	1,123
1990	1,136
1991	1,177
1992	1,183
1993	1,224
1994	1,235
1995	1,236

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how frequently animals are recorded in cow farm herd record books checked against computerised records of beef herds held by the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland. [24211]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 2 April 1996]: Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland computerised animal records for all herds are checked at least once a year.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the advantages of requiring animal feed manufacturers to contribute to the cost of compensating farmers where outbreaks of BSE in beef cattle in suckler herds and beef producing herds can be traced to the supply of contaminated livestock feed since 1986. [24213]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 2 April 1996]: No such assessment has been made.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Competitive Tendering (Contracts)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many contracts for goods or services have been awarded in each of the last three financial years by his Department and its executive agencies after competitive tendering; and what was the total combined value of these contracts. [21040]

Mr. Boswell: From records held centrally, over the last three financial years the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and its executive agencies have let a minimum of 1,600 contracts following competitive tender. These have a combined total value of £199,556,000.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many companies dealing with the transportation of livestock have been prosecuted for failing to provide adequate rest stops in each of the last five years. [21227]

Mrs. Browning: This information is not kept centrally.

Intervention Beef

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of (a) the amount of beef held in cold stores under European Union intervention rules, (b) the amount of that beef which is from animals fed pre-1989 protein feed and (c) the amount of intervention beef which has been distributed to the most needy in the United Kingdom in each year since 1989. [23154]

Mr. Baldry: The answers to these questions are as follows:

(a) As at the end of February, the latest date for which EU figures are currently available, beef held in cold stores under EU intervention rules totalled, 5,458 tonnes.

(b) Exact information on the amount of beef currently held in intervention stores derived from animals fed pre-1989 ruminant protein feed is not available. In the UK, however, the figure is likely to be negligible on the basis that upwards of 99 per cent. of the animals in question would have been born after 1989, and the majority of those born before that date would have been finished on grass.

(c) The amount of beef taken from intervention for distribution to the most needy in the United Kingdom in each year since 1989 is shown in the table. The greater part of this was processed into canned beef for distribution.

Year	Beef (tonnes) taken from intervention for distribution to the needy in the UK
1989	2,975
1990	3,000
1991	3,000
1992	2,965
1993	6,200
1994	6,480
1995	7,700

Organophosphate Poisoning

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are being taken by his Department to educate doctors about organophosphate poisoning; and if he will make a statement. [23178]

Mrs. Browning: I refer to the reply given by the Under-Secretary of State for Health, my hon. Friend the Member for Orpington (Mr. Horam) on 1 April, Official Report, column 47.

EDS Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what out-sourcing contracts his agencies have with the EDS software computer system; what is the current cost; when the contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [23738]

Mr. Boswell: Centrally held records show that neither the Ministry nor any of its agencies hold out-sourcing contracts with EDS. Consequently, there are no current costs; contract end dates; or potential penalty fees. Fees for early discharge of contractual arrangements are a matter for negotiation between the Ministry and its suppliers.

Irradiated Food

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the incidence of irradiated food products being supplied in the United Kingdom in the (a) retail, (b) wholesale and (c) import sector without complying with food labelling legislation. [24197]

Mrs. Browning: Local authorities are responsible for enforcing food labelling legislation. However, as validated tests are now available for a number of irradiated foods we intend to initiate a surveillance programme on this in the near future.

Ms Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will notify enforcement authorities of those companies submitting food products for irradiation treatment. [24198]

Mrs. Browning: As required under the Food (Control of Irradiation) Regulations 1991, details of any licence issued to irradiate food are published in the London and Edinburgh Gazettes and announced in a press release.

Currently only one company, Isotron plc of Swindon, is licensed to irradiate herbs and spices.

Munitions Dumps

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 12 March, Official Report, columns 510–11, if radioactive waste was dumped by British ships in the English channel after 1966. [24221]

Mr. Baldry: Radioactive waste was last dumped in the English channel, at the Hurd deep dump site, in 1963. Details of UK sea-disposal operations are given in the 1984 "Report of the Independent Review of Disposal of Radioactive Waste in the North East Atlantic", a copy of which is in the Library.

Wheat and Barley

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set out the margin per acre achieved by growers of wheat and barley for each of the last 15 years in (a) constant and (b) current prices, setting out the definition used by his Department of margin or margins where more than one classification is appropriate. [24279]

Mr. Baldry: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 18 March 1996, Official Report, column 27. The 1994–95 edition of "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom", referred to in that earlier answer, has now been published. A description of the composition of and uses for gross margins is contained in chapter 3 of "Farm Incomes in the UK 1992–93". Copies of these publications are available in the Library of the House.

Computers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the problem of non-recognition by computers of the year 2000 with regard to his Department's computers and those for which it is responsible. [24396]

Mr. Boswell: In January this year the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's information technology directorate initiated a project with the aim of ensuring that, by the end of 1998, all existing and planned computer systems for which the Ministry is responsible will be in a position effectively to manage the century date change on 1 January 2000.

Night Shooting Licences

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 180, if any further night shooting licences have been issued; how many deer have been shot on the new licences and by which licence; and if he will make a statement. [24496]

Mrs. Browning: Following my reply of 21 February, no further notices to shoot deer at night have been issued by MAFF.

Deer and Fox Hunts

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the cost to the Forestry Commission of supervising deer and fox hunts in the New forest by (a) keeps and (b) administrative costs. [24497]

Mr. Boswell: The Forestry Commission spends some £11,000 per annum on supervising deer and fox hunts in the New forest. This includes keepers' wages, the costs of vehicles, and other administration charges.

Disease Eradication Fund

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the amount of money expended in the United Kingdom from the EU disease eradication fund; [23336]

(2) which farmers in the United Kingdom have benefited from the EU disease eradication fund; [23337]

(3) which projects are currently being funded by the EU disease eradication scheme. [23335]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: Northern Ireland has been approved funding in 1996 of 50 per cent. of the laboratory costs associated with the testing of samples taken under the Aujeszky's disease eradication scheme, up to a maximum of 100,000 ecus—approximately £84,000.

Information on projects currently funded in other member states is not available except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the United Kingdom contribution to the EU disease eradication fund since its inception. [23334]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: The United Kingdom contributes to the European Community budget as a whole. Details can be found in the annual White Paper statements on the EC budget. For 1996, the United Kingdom is forecast to contribute 15 per cent. to the EU budget before the Fontainebleau abatement is taken into account and 11 per cent. after abatement.

Regulations

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which of the 1,000 regulations identified for repeal or amendment by the Prime Minister are the responsibility of his Department; of those which (a) have been repealed or amended and (b) are planned to have been repealed or amended by the end of the 1995–96 parliamentary session; and if he will list those whose repeal has saved business more than £1 million per annum. [23648]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 2 April 1996]: I refer to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 2 April, Official Report, column 85.

Slaughterhouses (Hygiene)

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest assessment of the hygiene standards in red meat slaughterhouses in England and Wales. [24446]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 2 April 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Meat Hygiene Service to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from J. McNeill to Mr. Henry McLeish, dated 3 April 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS), your questions regarding hygiene standards in red meat slaughterhouses in England, Scotland and Wales have been passed to me for reply.[24446]

Since early 1994 the Hygiene Assessment System (HAS) has been operating in red meat slaughterhouses. HAS is the method developed by the State Veterinary Service to assess and monitor hygiene standards in slaughterhouses. HAS looks at the specific aspects of performance within five main categories—ante-mortem, slaughter and dressing, personnel and practices, maintenance and hygiene of premises and general conditions and management.

As you may know, the MHS took over responsibility for inspection in licensed fresh meat premises in England, Scotland and Wales on 1 April 1995. This work was previously undertaken by local authorities. One of the targets set by Ministers for the MHS in 1995/96 was to establish a benchmark of HAS scores in licensed slaughterhouses. Information on the benchmark scores will be published in the MHS annual report, due to be published later this year. Copies of that report will be placed in the Library of the House.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total number of staff involved in the Meat Hygiene Service in each year since 1989–90; what are the planned numbers of staff for each of the years 1996–97 to 1998–99. [24448]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 2 April 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Meat Hygiene Service to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from J. McNeill to Mr. Henry McLeish, dated 3 April 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) your question concerning the number of staff employed by the MHS has been passed to me for reply.[24448]

The Meat Hygiene Service was launched on 1 April 1995 as an Executive Agency of MAFF. It took over from some 300 local authorities responsibility for enforcement of the hygiene and welfare at slaughter legislation in licensed meat premises in England, Scotland and Wales. Consequently there are no MHS staff numbers prior to that date.

The MHS currently employs 509 red meat and 163 poultry meat inspectors on a full time basis. In addition it utilises 69 inspectors (62 red meat; 7 white) on fixed term contracts of 100 weeks duration. There is also a pool of 222 staff (203 red; 19 white) used on a casual basis. As you will appreciate, these last two sets of figures in particular fluctuate according to demand.

These meat inspection staff are supervised by Official Veterinary Surgeons (OVSs). The MHS directly employs 39 OVSs and in addition contracts out work to 110 full time equivalent vets to supplement them. 3 vets are also utilised on a casual basis.

Staff numbers for future years will depend on the actual number of plants operating at the time and any policy developments, as recently on SBO controls. No definitive figures are available at this time.

Set-aside Land

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to allow farmers affected by the crisis in the beef industry to graze cattle on set-aside land until it is possible to market them. [23846]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 April 1996]: EU rules do not currently allow the grazing of cattle on set-aside land between 15 January and 31 August. In light of the exceptional and unforeseen difficulties facing UK producers in marketing their cattle, we are discussing urgently with the Commission the possibility of varying this requirement on a temporary basis.

Beef (Labelling)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to require food processors and producers to clearly label products which involve the use of beef or beef by-products. [24090]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 2 April 1996, Official Report, columns 196–97.

We have no plans to impose further labelling requirements. Food suppliers may, of course, display additional information in relation to their products, provided that it is true and not misleading.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Executive Agencies

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each site in Tyne and Wear, apart from local retail offices, at which staff of (a) the Contributions Agency, (b) the Benefits Agency and (c) the Information Technology Services Agency are employed; and if he will give the numbers employed by each agency in (i) actual numbers are (ii) whole-time equivalent numbers at (1) 31 December 1994 and (2) 31 December 1995. [13283]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested.

Such information as is available is in the table.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total cost of answering parliamentary questions in each parliamentary Session since 1989–90. [22897]

Mr. Burt: This Department does not calculate the data requested and it could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

State Earnings-related Pension Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cost of the new contracted-out SERPS rebate which will take effect from April 1997 for each of the next 10 years. [21440]

Mr. Heald: The contracted-out rebate is set for a maximum of five years only. Estimated costs for the financial years 1997–98 to 2001–2, in terms of national insurance fund revenue forgone, are set out in the table.

Cost of contracted-out rebate for 1997–98 to 2001–2

Year	£ billion (rounded)
1997–98	7.7
1998–99	7.8
1999–01	7.9
2000–01	8.0
2001–02	8.1

1. Costs are estimated on the basis of the levels of contracting out and other assumptions used for the Government Actuary's report on the Pensions Bill 1994, Cm 2714.
2. The amounts shown are the costs in respect of each financial year and have been rounded to one decimal place. In some cases, the costs will not fall in the financial year to which they relate. In particular, payments by the DSS to appropriate personal pensions and occupational money purchase schemes will not fall due until the following financial year.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for how long after the date of commencement of the Pensions Act 1995 state scheme premiums may be paid in respect of earners who were employed in

Isle of Wight (Expenditure)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 4 March 1996, Official Report, columns 77–78, what information his Department collates in respect of its expenditure on the Isle of Wight. [20072]

Mr. Burt: With the exception of housing benefit and council tax benefit expenditure as it relates to local authorities, the Department does not routinely collate any expenditure information on specific areas of Great Britain.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many questions were tabled to his Department in each Session since 1987–88; how many were not answered on grounds of disproportionate cost; what percentage of the total number of questions this represented; how many were not answered on the grounds that the information was not centrally available; and what percentage of the total number of questions this represented. [21146]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table:

contracted-out employment which occurred before that date in order to buy them back into the state earnings-related pension scheme for that period. [23126]

Mr. Heald: No specific time limit has been prescribed within which payment of state scheme premiums outstanding at 6 April 1997 should be made.

Occupational Pension Schemes

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what priority is to be given under the transitional arrangements applicable to the wind-up of occupational pension schemes which have insufficient assets to meet liabilities in full to (a) refunds of contributions to active members with fewer than two years' pensionable service and (b) increases to pensioners of pensions in payment guaranteed under scheme rules. [23162]

Mr. Heald: Draft regulations containing our proposals for the transitional arrangements which will operate for 10 years from April 1997 were issued for consultation on 22 January 1996. The consultation period ended on 4 March. We are considering the comments that we received.

The priority order of liabilities set out in the draft regulations under the transitional arrangements are:

(a) any liability attributable to the payment of voluntary contributions;

(b) any liability for pensions, excluding increases, where entitlement to payment has arisen;

(c) (i) any liability for accrued contracted-out rights in the scheme, which will be the whole of any accrual after April 1997 in a contracted-out scheme, excluding increases and any contribution equivalent premium to buy rights back into the state scheme; or

(ii) the return of contributions to members with less than two years pensionable service where that period of service has not given the member any accrued rights under the scheme;

(d) any liability for increases to pensions referred to in paragraph (b);

(e) any liability for increases to pensions referred to in paragraph (c);

(f) any liability for non-contracted out accrued rights together with any increases.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) by what date his Department will make available to (a) employers and (b) occupational pension scheme administrators, the documentation required to be completed in relation to the contracting arrangements under the Pensions Act 1995; [23157]

(2) what advice his Department has issued as to the date by which employers should decide what (a) their future pensions arrangements and (b) their future contracting-out status should be to enable them to comply with the conditions of the new contracting-out provision. [23164]

Mr. Heald: The administration of national insurance is the responsibility of Mrs. Faith Boardman, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from George Bertram to Mr. John Denham, dated 2 April 1996:

As the Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency is away from the office on annual leave, I have responsibility for answering questions about operational matters relating to the Agency and the National Insurance (NI) scheme in her absence.

I have been asked to reply to your questions relating to the advice and documentation arrangements for employers and occupational pension scheme administrators under the Pensions Act 1995. In view of the nature of the questions I have combined the response.

Guidance on the contracting-out arrangements for employers and occupational pension schemes is currently being prepared and consultation with the pensions industry will commence shortly. The guidance will be available by Autumn 1996 and will include examples of the documentation to be used.

New contracting-out arrangements for Contracted-Out Salary Related Schemes come into effect from April 1997, although there will be a transitional period to enable employers to complete the re-election exercise. The Agency will shortly issue information to schemes about the general handling and timetable. Employers' future pension arrangements are a matter for them, they will however need to ensure they take decisions on their contracting-out status in time to comply with this.

I hope you will find this reply helpful.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what evidence he has that there are sufficient designers of pensions information systems software to enable contracted-out schemes to design and test their own software between the date at which his Department makes the detail of such an information system available to employers and occupational scheme administrators and the date of coming into force of the contracting-out provisions of the Pensions Act 1995. [23163]

Mr. Heald: The Department of Social Security has consulted pensions interests extensively throughout the process of developing the proposals contained in the Pensions Act 1995 and associated secondary legislation, so the broad structure of the new system is already well-known. The main regulations which impact on scheme administration will be laid before Parliament in the next few weeks; those on the new flexibilities for mixed benefit schemes will follow soon after. The Contributions Agency will shortly release draft guidance on the contracting-out arrangements from 6 April 1997, with the final guidance to be issued in the autumn. The guidance will include specimen forms.

We believe that this gives all concerned enough time to make the arrangements needed for contracting out from April 1997.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, following the commencement of the contracting-out provisions of the Pensions Act 1995, he will immediately withdraw a contracting-out certificate if it comes to his notice that (a) a contracted-out occupational scheme exceeds the limits on employer-related investments as a result of an increase in the value of the equity of the sponsoring employer as a result of a takeover bid, (b) that a contracted-out occupational pension scheme has inadvertently breached the conditions for contracting out or (c) that an occupational scheme used for contracting out exceeds the limit of employer-related investments as a result of a transaction between the sponsoring company and the company in whose equity the occupational scheme has invested. [23165]

Mr. Heald: From April 1997, contracting-out occupational pension schemes will be asked to provide an assurance, periodically, that the scheme complies with any prescribed restrictions on employer related investment.

The Contributions Agency, acting on behalf of the Secretary of State, will have the power to cancel a contracting-out certificate where any condition relating to the issue of that certificate is no longer satisfied. It is intended that there will be liaison between CA and the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority, once either agency becomes aware of a scheme that has breached any restriction in employer related investment. The purpose of this liaison will be to provide both bodies with the information necessary to carry out their tasks and to ensure a co-ordinated and consistent approach in any necessary investigation and/or action.

In-work Benefits

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total cost for each of the last five years of benefit payments made to employed claimants earning (a) less than £4,000 per annum, (b) £4,000 to £6,000 per annum and (c) £6,000 to £8,000 per annum. [21423]

Mr. Roger Evans: The available information in respect of the in-work benefits is in the tables. Annual earnings figures are not available. The tables provide information on benefit costs for claimants in weekly earnings bands corresponding approximately to the annual amounts requested, as recorded at the time of claim.

Office Closures

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) the location and (b) the number of job losses or relocation of employees for each (i) Contributions Agency office and (ii) Benefits Agency office which has closed in Scotland since 1990. [21571]

Mr. Heald: The information requested is in the tables:

Departmental Contractors and Suppliers

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures his Department is taking to ensure that its contractors and suppliers (a) pay their employees a wage which ensures such employees do not need supplementary welfare payments via various state benefits and (b) meet workplace health and safety regulations; and if he will make a statement. [21462]

Mr. Burt: Wage levels are considered along with other information which collectively allows the Department to determine a contractor's ability to provide a work force at the required skills level. However, terms and conditions of employment, including wages, are a matter between the contractor or supplier and his employees, subject of course to any relevant legal requirements. Compliance with health and safety requirements is a legal requirement for the contractor or supplier. The Department always seeks assurances that contractors are fully aware of their obligations in this matter.

National Insurance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would have been the cumulative loss of revenue to the national insurance fund if the employee contribution rates for 1978–79 had remained in force up to 1996–97. [21697]

Mr. Heald: If the employees' contribution structure, rates and level of contracted-out rebates in force in 1978–79 remained in force from 1988–89 up to 1996–97, about £26.5 billion less would have been paid into the national insurance fund. There is insufficient data to provide a reliable estimate in respect of the period prior to 1988–89.

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost to the Exchequer of enabling those of retirement age to claim their retirement pensions on the date of attainment of pension age rather than the following Monday. [22100]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 19 March, Official Report, column 181.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the extra cost to public funds in the current year of paying the state pension from the date of the birthday on which the person attains pensionable age. [22532]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 19 March, Official Report, column 181.

Benefits Agency Offices (Wales)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Benefits Agency offices in Wales are located in rural districts; and if he will list them. [22378]

Mr. Roger Evans: As the interpretation of "rural districts" is subjective, we are unable to give a definitive reply on what constitutes a rural district.

There are a total of 75 benefit offices located in Wales, 34 of which are main benefit processing sites and 41 of which are public caller outlets. They are as follows:

Yorkshire Regional Health Authority

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ask the Contributions Agency investigation and fraud teams to inquire into the evasion of national insurance contributions by former chairmen and non-executive directors of Yorkshire regional health authority. [22933]

Mr. Heald: The administration of the Contributions Agency is a matter for Mrs. Faith Boardman, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from George Bertram to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 2 April 1996:

As the Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency is away from the office on annual leave, I have responsibility for answering questions about operational matters relating to the Agency in her absence.

I have been asked to reply to your question to the Secretary of State if he will ask the Contributions Agency investigation and fraud teams to inquire into evasion of National Insurance contributions by former Chairmen and non executive Directors of Yorkshire Regional Health Authority.

Together with the Inland Revenue under our general rules of confidentiality I cannot discuss individual cases.

It may be helpful if I explain that most National Insurance contributions are collected by the Inland Revenue on behalf of the Contributions Agency. Investigations into PAYE and National Insurance compliance may be carried out by either Department when there is evidence of irregularities.

Child Support Agency (Computer Systems)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what computer system enhancements have taken place to allow the Child Support Agency to handle the departures scheme; who supplied the enhancements; what they cost; and to what extent they were based on existing computer packages. [23330]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 2 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency computer system.

The existing Child Support Computer System (CSCS) has been upgraded to incorporate the new functions associated with the Departures scheme. The enhancements were supplied by the existing CSCS supplier, EDS, working as part of a joint development team of Child Support Agency, Information Technology Services Agency and EDS staff.

The total cost of the enhancements are "commercial in confidence".

A number of Departmental approved computer packages, which form part of the Departments IT infrastructure, have been used to integrate with the mainframe CSCS. These are Windows, ABC Flowcharter and Autoroute. No enhancements were made to these products. The enhancements to the CSCS are being developed through Rapid Application Development techniques by use of the Huron product.

I hope this is helpful.

Advice Lines

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what use was made of the 0800 advice service across north Staffordshire in 1995–96; what was the cost of the service; what mechanism he has adopted to assess the value of the service to claimants; and if he will make a statement as to the continued availability of this service. [23723]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ursula Brennan to Ms Joan Walley, dated 2 April 1996:

As Peter Mathison is on leave at the moment, the Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what use was made of the 0800 advice service across North Staffordshire in 1995–96; what costs were involved; what mechanism he has adopted to assess the value of the service to claimants; and if he will make a statement as to the continued availability of this service.

The information is not available in the form requested, this is because the Freeline, Social Security service is operated on a national basis. Since November 1994 customers dialling the Freeline number can be connected to any one of the Freeline Centres across the country.

Annex A gives the national details for the number of calls answered and the cost.

Freeline, Social Security is covered in the Benefits Agency national customer survey. The National Freeline Co-ordinators Office also conduct their own annual customer survey and they have a formal complaints procedure.

A review of the service is currently looking at options for handing these types of enquiries within the overall benefit advice service.

I hope you find this reply useful.

Annex A: National Freeline—Performance/costs 1995–96

3.2 million	£6.6 million[1]

[1] Staff/running costs (including telecomms). Figures are provisional and subject to change.

Figures are rounded to nearest 100,000.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many calls the Benefits Agency's freeline benefit advice line receives on average per year; how many calls it received for each year of its operation; and how many calls he estimates will be received in the next two years. [23819]

Mr. Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ursula Brennan to Mr. Frank Field, dated 2 April 1996:

As Peter Mathison is on leave at the moment, the Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many calls the Benefits Agency's (BA's) freeline benefit advice line receives on average per year; how many calls it received for each year of its operation; and how many calls he estimates will be received in the next two years.

Freeline, Social Security has been operating since 1984, however information about the number of calls is available only from 1993. The number of calls received has been taken to mean the number of calls answered by an advisor.

The average number of calls received is approximately 2.4 million per year and the number of calls received is shown in the list below:

1993–94: 1.5 million

1994–95: 2.6 million

1995–96: 3.2 million.

These figures are rounded to the nearest 100,000.

The target set for the number of calls to be answered for 1996–97 has been set at 3.4 million, a target has not been set for 1997–98. However a review of the service is currently underway.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Lump Sum Widow's Payment

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost to the Exchequer of (a) increasing the lump sum widow's payment to £1,500 and (b) thereafter uprating this new payment annually in line with the retail price index. [23587]

Mr. Heald: The extra cost of increasing the widow's payment to £1,500 would be approximately £21 million in 1996–97 and £22 million in 1997–98[1].

Uprating in 1997–98 would cost approximately £650,000 per 1 per cent. increase.

Carpal Tunnel Syndrome

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will extend industrial disease No. A12 to include frequent and repeated movements of the hand and wrist as a cause of carpal tunnel syndrome, in addition to the use of hand-held vibrating tools. [23972]

Mr. Roger Evans: There are no plans at present to extend the current terms of prescription in respect of carpal tunnel syndrome.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases of carpal tunnel syndrome were granted compensation under industrial injuries legislation in each of the last five years. [23971]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Carpal tunnel syndrome in respect of hand-held vibrating tools was added only in April 1993 to the list of prescribed diseases for which industrial injuries disablement benefit can be paid. The available information is set out in the table:

Results of initial medical assessments where carpel tunnel syndrome is diagnosed from 19 April 1993 to 30 September 1995

[1] Cases where there is no loss of faculty or it is assessed at less than 1 per cent.

[2] Benefit is normally paid only for assessments of 14 per cent. or more. Entitlement to benefit could arise if an assessment in this range could be aggregated with one or more other assessments to reach 14 per cent.

1. Based on 100 per cent. count of cases.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will postpone his decision to introduce the withdrawal of reduced earning allowance to women who have reached the age of 60 years until it has been subjected to parliamentary scrutiny. [24253]

Mr. Roger Evans: No. Parliament agreed, in passing the 1988 Social Security Act, that compensation for loss of earnings through reduced earnings allowance should continue past pension age only for those men and women who continued in regular employment. Otherwise it should cease and be replaced by retirement allowance payable at 25 per cent. of rate of reduced earnings allowance.

Computers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the problem of non-recognition by computers of the year 2000 with regard to his Department's computers and those for which it is responsible. [24401]

Mr. Burt: The Department is currently assessing the impact of the millenium on its information technology systems and will work closely with suppliers to ensure that any necessary changes to our benefits delivery system are carried out well in advance of the change of the century.

One-parent Benefit

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what savings his Department expects to make by freezing one-parent benefit and lone-parent premium. [22728]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Some £15 million per year from 1996–97.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his time scale for the phasing out of one-parent benefit and lone-parent premium. [22725]

Mr. Mitchell: Over time, the intention is to narrow the existing gap between benefits which go to lone parents and those which go to couples. Decisions on the pace and time scale of this process will be taken from year to year. Draft regulations to implement our proposals to restructure family benefits have been referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee. Subject to completion of the statutory consultation procedures and to Parliamentary approval, the draft regulations are expected to be laid in May/June and to come into force in April 1997.

Retention and Regeneration Packages

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to establish retaining and regeneration packages to assist staff and locations affected by proposed run-downs in his Department's employment after 1 April. [23701]

Mr. Burt: It is inevitable that Departmental efficiencies will result in staff reductions. However, it is too early to assess the possible impact of this on staff or particular localities.

Lowered Standard of Occupation Allowance

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the number of persons in receipt of the allowance for lowered standard of occupation in each year for the past 10 years. [24050]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table:

Numbers in receipt of allowance for lowered standard of occupation at 31 December

Year	Number
1986	10,886
1987	10,827
1988	10,670
1989	10,523
1990	10,395
1991	10,487
1992	10,866
1993	11,876
1994	13,437
1995	14,200

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the annual cost of the allowance for lowered standard of occupation for the past 10 years and the estimated cost for the coming financial year. [24052]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested.

The estimated cost for 1996–97, rounded to the nearest £5 million, will be around £25 million at cash prices.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what provision exists for an appeal against the withdrawal of the allowance for lowered standard of occupation. [24054]

Mr. Heald: There is no right of appeal against a decision on behalf of the Secretary of State on a war pension supplementary allowance. Such decisions may be formally challenged only by judicial review.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons in receipt of allowances for lowered standard of occupation have been offered re-engagement in the regular or reserve forces. [24049]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many persons have had their allowance for lowered standard of occupation cancelled on the grounds that their pensioned disablement does not prevent them from carrying out their service occupation; [24051]

(2) how many persons were given a medical examination prior to the decision being taken in deciding to revoke the allowance for lowered standard of occupation. [24053]

Mr. Heald: A total of 1,301 pensioners are to have their allowance cancelled on the ground that the war pensioned disablement does not prevent them following their regular service occupation. In order to determine their entitlement to a war disablement pension or gratuity under the war pensions scheme, a medical or audiometric examination is normally necessary. Records of these examinations were available when eligibility for the allowance for lowered standard of occupation was reviewed.

Waste Minimisation

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on progress in establishing an office waste minimisation strategy for his Department, indicating the targets set. [24514]

Mr. Roger Evans: At their meeting on 29 January 1996, green ministers agreed that the Department of the Environment would complete its waste measurement pilot scheme and by 31 March 1996 set realistic targets for future waste minimisation. Departments would use this information and the Department of the Environment's waste minimisation target figures to establish their own waste minimisation targets by the end of 1996.

Within the Department of Social Security, a pilot scheme is currently operating in selected Benefits Agency offices to examine a number of key environmental issues including waste minimisation. Findings will be reported later this year, when areas for improvement and targets for waste minimisation will be considered.

EU Initiative to Combat Poverty and Social Exclusion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his written answer to the hon. Member for Gateshead, East (Ms Quin) on 6 February, Official Report, column 178, if the European Commission has provided a justification for expenditure without legal authority following the Government's inquiry about the legal basis of their funding for projects seeking to combat social exclusion. [25182]

Mr. Lilley: The European Commission has not provided a legal justification for these particular expenditure plans, made without the approval of the Council of Ministers. The Government have therefore this week made an application to the European Court of Justice challenging the legal basis of this expenditure. We believe that other member states share our concern. Commission proposals for a further Community spending programme on social exclusion projects were previously blocked in the Council of Ministers by Germany and the UK.

The challenge is not aimed at stopping sensibly planned funding in support of disadvantaged people. The Government are already funding many projects to combat social exclusion in the UK through inner city challenge, adult training, health care, housing and literacy programmes.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Waste Minimisation

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on progress in establishing an office waste minimisation strategy for his Department indicating the targets set. [24501]

Mr. Freeman: My Department supports fully the Government's waste strategy set out in the White Paper, "Making Waste Work," Cm 3040. In accordance with the aim of the White Paper, my Department is working towards setting waste minimisation targets by the end of 1996.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on progress in establishing an office waste minimisation strategy for his Department, indicating the targets set. [24507]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Environmental Impact Assessment

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what action his Department is taking to assess the environmental impact of its policies and programmes. [25337]

Mr. Freeman: Procedures within my Department provide for the environmental impact of policies and programmes to be assessed on a regular basis.

Sustainable Development

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if the promotion of sustainable development is one of his Department's objectives; [25335]

(2) what action his Department is taking to promote sustainable development. [25336]

Mr. Freeman: The objective of promoting sustainable development is an integral part of my Department's environmental strategy, which is supported by a comprehensive departmental action plan. The main elements of that plan are to:

- maximise the efficiency of energy usage;
- minimise wastage in the use of goods and products, and maximise recycling of waste materials;
- maximise procurement of goods and supplies which avoid dependence in their production on non-renewable resources or pollutant substances; and
- maximise the purchase of products based on recycled materials.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints the prisons ombudsman has received in connection with Doncaster prison since it opened; what were the nature of the complaints; and if he will list those complaints that have been upheld. [24487]

Miss Widdecombe: Since the prisons ombudsman began to take complaints from prisoners on 24 October 1994, he has received 26 complaints from Doncaster. Twenty-two of these were ineligible—21 because the prisoner had not exhausted the internal request/complaint system and one because it came from a third party. Investigations were started on the remaining four cases. One complaint was later withdrawn by the prisoner, two complaints were not upheld and one complaint was upheld. Of the complaints received, 10 involved complaints about transfers, seven were about property and five concerned home leave. The remaining four involved a medical matter, an assault, visits and an adjudication.

I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 28 November 1995, Official Report, column 661, which gave details of the one complaint about Doncaster the prisons ombudsman has upheld.

Prisoners' Brains

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the routine removal of brains and other body organs in post mortems and the arrangements for their return to the body; and if he will make a statement. [24463]

Mr. Sackville: The removal of the brain, or other body organs, is a standard procedure in many post mortem examinations, in accordance with Royal College of Pathology guidelines and the clinical judgment of the pathologist. The procedure may be essential for determining the medical cause of death, even in cases where this may not at first appear connected with the condition of the organs in question. We therefore have no plans for a specific review, but these issues will be raised as part of wider discussions with the Department of Health later this year.

Prisons (Dye Stamping)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons in England and Wales that use dye stamping on the hands of visitors when visiting prisons and their reasons for using this system. [24557]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 16 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about prisons that use dye stamping on the hands of visitors visiting prisons in England and Wales.

The most recent date for which centrally held information is available on the use of dye stamping on the hands of visitors is August 1995. This information is given in the attached table.

The system, which uses ultra violet marker dye, is designed to enable staff to differentiate between visitors and prisoners and to prevent prisoners leaving the visits room or prison either with, or in the place of, a visitor.

Other establishments use alternative methods such as biometric identification, but dye marking is the cheapest and most easily operated system of visitor identification available.

Smoke Detectors

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fires in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland, (c) Northern Ireland, (d) England and (e) the United Kingdom occurred in buildings which did not have smoke detectors in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [24615]

Mr. Sackville: The information prior to 1994 is not available. From 1994, information was collected for the first time. Data from this new collection have not been fully processed.

Fire Service

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fire officers were injured in the course of their duty in 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24602]

Mr. Sackville: In England and Wales in the financial year 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available, one fire officer died and 737 were seriously injured in the line of duty. Serious injuries are defined as those which result in absence from duty for at least one month or two weeks or more of hospitalisation.

Detainees

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of (a) men and (b) women being held in detention centres in England and Wales on issues relating to immigration on 30 March. [24556]

Mr. Kirkhope: There were 312 males and 55 females detained solely under Immigration Act powers in Immigration Service detention centres in England and Wales on 30 March. These figures exclude persons detained in Prison Service establishments and police cells.

Liquor Licences

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many premises are licensed to sell intoxicating liquor in (a) England and Wales and (b) Scotland. [23663]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested, with respect to England and Wales, is contained in table 1 of the Home Office statistical bulletin "Liquor Licensing Statistics, England and Wales, July 1994—June 1995", a copy of which is in the Library. Information on the number of licensed premises in Scotland is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of funding to be made available through the private finance initiative to his Department for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [24886]

Mr. Howard: My latest estimates of capital funding generated by the private finance initiative—PFI—are as follows:

1995–96	20.0
1996–97	99.5
1997–98	229.5

Taken with the transfer to the private sector of the risk in development and operations involved in PFI projects, the expected private funding will make a valuable contribution to my Department's work.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his Department's proposals for section 11 funding for 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [24960]

Mr. Kirkhope: With the exception of a very small number of projects which reached the end of their planned life on 31 March, all approved projects have continued into the 1996–97 financial year. Notifications of allocations for 1996–97 were issued to all grant recipients on 26 February. The figures included adjustments to reflect the fact that there have been movements in costs.

Consultancy Contract (Probation Qualification)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the circumstances surrounding the award of a consultancy contract to KPMG to advise on the development of the new probation qualification; and if it was awarded after competition. [25339]

Mr. Sackville: A contract was awarded to KPMG in January 1996 to advise on the competences required for probation officers on appointment. The contract followed a competitive procurement. The Central Probation Council and the Association of Chief Officers of Probation were invited to participate in the procurement, but declined to do so.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many compliance cost assessments were produced by his Department in 1995; and if he will place copies in the Library. [25273]

Mr. Howard: Three compliance cost assessments were produced by my Department in 1995. Copies are available in the Library.

Charity Commission

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current remuneration of the chair of the Charity Commission; how often he meets representatives of the Charity Commission; and who sets the Charity Commission's terms of reference. [25251]

Mr. Sackville: The Charity Commission is a non-ministerial department whose powers and duties are set out in the Charities Act 1993. The head of the department is the Chief Charity Commissioner who, with his fellow commissioners, is appointed by, and accountable for, the commission's general efficiency to my right hon. and learned Friend. The post of Chief Charity Commissioner is currently held by Mr. Richard Fries, appointed by the then Home Secretary in 1992. His current salary is £69,783 per annum. He, other commissioners and commission staff meet Ministers to discuss particular topics when the occasion requires.

As explained by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minster in answer to the hon. Member for Hexham (Mr. Atkinson) on 1 April, Official Report, column 1, ministerial responsibility in relation to the Charity Commission is being transferred to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for National Heritage as soon as the necessary financial and other arrangements can be made.

Volcano (Montserrat)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements have been made for people from Montserrat to enter the United Kingdom in the event of a natural disaster; and if he will make a statement. [25486]

Mr. Kirkhope: The potential immigration implications are being kept under review.

EC (Civil Service Employment)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the implications of the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 1991 for service in the police and prison services. [22918]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 28 March 1996]: The European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 1991 makes it possible for the Prison Service in England and Wales to appoint suitable candidates who are nationals of other European Union member states. The order does not apply to the police service.

Fire Service Funding

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will meet with the chairman of North Wales fire authority to discuss fire service funding. [23432]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 29 March 1996]: My right hon. and noble Friend wrote to the hon. Member today to explain that she would be happy to meet the North Wales fire authority.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the oral answer of the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Member for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkin) on 26 February, Official Report, column 576, if he will list those statutory instruments and Acts of Parliament which have been gold plated in the past five years; and what steps he is taking to amend or repeal each piece of gold plating on existing legislation. [23628]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 1 April 1996]: The Government's policy is not to add unnecessary burdens when implementing European Community directives. Departments take every opportunity to review existing legislation in the light of this. Officials are currently working on revised guidance to enable Ministers to see where implementing legislation goes beyond the underlying European Community directive.

Waste Minimisation

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in establishing an office waste minimisation strategy for his Department, indicating the targets set. [24510]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 3 April 1996]: Work on waste minimisation strategy for the Home Office is to begin shortly.

Suicides

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 March, Official Report, column 2, at assessment he has made of the reasons for the (a) rise in male suicides and (b) fall in female suicides. [24136]

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

The suicide rate among young men under the age of 25 rose during the 1970s and 1980s but has since stabilised and that for some groups of older men has declined. The suicide rate in older women is also declining, and that in young women is remaining steady. The overall rate of suicide has declined by 4 per cent. between 1990 and 1994.

The reasons for these trends is being explored. Meanwhile, in pursuing "The Health of the Nation" target of reducing the rate of suicide by 15 per cent. by 2000, we are undertaking a number of initiatives, including focusing on particular occupational and demographic groups which appear to be at higher risk of suicide.

TREASURY

Works of Art

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the register of conditionally exempt works of art. [22558]

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 20 June 1995, Official Report, column 149. The Inland Revenue is considering a technical feasibility study, which it has just received, with the aim of making the register available on the Internet.

Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance his Department has given to public service schemes, on the application of equal treatment requirements, to guaranteed minimum pensions accruing from pensionable service completed between 17 May 1990 and 5 April 1997. [23584]

Mr. Waldegrave: None.

Land (Access)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how members of the public can ascertain what land is accessible under the tax-exempted arrangement. [23815]

Mr. Jack: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Sherwood (Mr. Tipping) on 29 March, Official Report, columns 776–77.

Manufactured Goods

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of (a) imports and (b) exports of manufactured goods in the fourth quarter of 1995. [24825]

Mrs. Angela Knight: In the year to 1995, fourth quarter, the volume of exports of manufactured goods rose by 3¼ per cent. while the volume of imports of manufactured goods fell by ¾ per cent.

Drug Imports

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the totals of class A and class B drugs confiscated at the United Kingdom's borders in each of the past five years; and what estimate he has made of the percentage these figures constitute of the totals imported into the United Kingdom. [24839]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: HM Customs and Excise has primary responsibility for preventing and detecting the illegal importation and exportation of controlled drugs. Customs seizes illicit consignments both at the United Kingdom's borders and inland, the latter frequently resulting from controlled deliveries or following an initial border seizure. The Department does not hold at the centre information broken down between border and inland seizures, but the following information on total seizures may be helpful.

The weights of drugs seized in each of the past five calendar years and their estimated street level value when they were seized were:

Year	Class A (kg)	Value (£)	Class B (kg)	Value (£)
1995	2,604	254,579,620	53,039	202,945,811
1994	3,301	298,730,928	47,761	251,691,927
1993	1,549	121,761,673	52,633	244,852,477
1992	2,702	403,908,338	44,673	141,149,414
1991	1,763	218,660,819	27,463	89,266,608

The proportion of the total quantity of illicit drugs targeted on the UK which is intercepted by Customs cannot, by the very nature of the trade, be estimated with any degree of confidence. While there has been academic research into the size of the UK drugs market, this has largely been based on an extrapolation from the numbers of registered heroin addicts. Similar use data are not available for other drug types. This research does not provide a sound basis on which any reliable performance indicator could be developed by Customs. It is, however, known that for each kilogram of drugs sized, more is prevented from entering the United Kingdom by the subsequent investigation of the trafficking organisation responsible for the smuggling attempt, the arrest of those involved and the confiscation of their drug-related assets.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what compliance cost assessment has been produced for the White Paper, "Better Accounting for the Taxpayer's Money"; if it is publicly available; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [25269]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No compliance cost assessment has been produced for the White Paper, "Better Accounting for the Taxpayer's Money".

Labour Statistics

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (i) male and (ii) female employees in the west midlands were in (a) full-time, (b) part-time, (c) temporary and (d) permanent employment in each year since 1979. [24999]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested can be obtained via the Quantime Labour Force Survey service available in the Library.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in the west midlands were employed in manufacturing industry in each year since 1979; and for each year what was the percentage change over the previous year. [25176]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information showing the number of jobs is provided in the table. Comparable information prior to 1981 is not available.

Employees in manufacturing in the west midlands region: December[1]

Company Directors

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers are company directors according to information supplied on form X of the Inland Revenue survey of personal incomes; and what is the average income from dividends from shares in United Kingdom companies and unit trusts of those taxpayers who are directors. [24929]

Mr. Jack: Based on the survey of personal incomes for 1993–94, the number of company directors liable to income tax is 550,000. Their average income from dividends from shares in UK companies and unit trusts in around £4,700.

Convergence Programme

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to update the convergence programme produced by the United Kingdom in March 1995. [25539]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: An updated convergence programme is today being submitted to the European Commission. Copies of the programme are being placed in the Libraries of the House.

Investment Tax Allowance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the annual cost to the Exchequer of introducing an investment tax allowance of £200,000 per annum for companies. [22828]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 26 March 1996]: A 100 per cent. first-year allowance of £200,000 for investment in plant and machinery by companies and unincorporated businesses, introduced from December 1996, has an estimated small initial cost of about £100 million in 1997–98 and would then cost approximately £1.3 billion in 1998–99. The cost would decline subsequently. For companies in groups, it is assumed that the limit is applied to the whole group and not each separate company.

Kenya

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make statement about the proposed International Monetary Fund—enhanced structural adjustment facility for Kenya. [23150]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 1 April 1996]: Last month, the Government of Kenya launched a framework for the economic reform agenda for the next three years on which they have worked with the IMF and World bank. A programme under the IMF's enhanced structural adjustment facility, designed to support these reform efforts, is expected to be considered by the IMF's executive board later this month.

Vocational Education Courses

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to (a) cease and (b) reduce the tax relief available for certain vocational education courses. [24146]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 1 April 1996]: The Finance Bill being considered by Parliament extends vocational training relief so that tax relief may be given on fees paid for a course which is full time, lasts more than four weeks but less than a year and is aimed at learning or practising knowledge or skills for gainful employment. This tax relief is available to trainees aged 30 or over. We have no plans to change other forms of tax relief for vocational education courses.

Government Spending

Mr. Walden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of Government spending was spent in the years 1988 and 1995 on (a) defence, (b) education and (c) mortgage tax relief. [24015]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 1 April 1996]: Figures for public expenditure on defence, education and mortgage tax relief expressed as a percentage of general Government expenditure are as follows:

	1988–89 Outturn Per cent.	1995–96 Estimated outturn Per cent.
Defence	10.7	7.0
Education	12.3	11.9
Mortgage tax relief paid to non-taxpayers	0.1	0.1

Total mortgage tax relief amounted to £5.4 billion in 1988–89 and £2.7 billion in 1995–96, of which £260 million in 1988–89 and £180 million in 1995–96 paid to non-taxpayers is classified as public expenditure.

No. 11 Downing Street

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the non-official or party receptions and functions which have been held at No. 11 Downing street since November 1990; [24268]

(2) if he will list all (a) charity, (b) voluntary organisations, (c) non-official and (d) party receptions and functions which have been held at No. 11 Downing street since November 1990; [24270]

(3) on which occasions he has used No. 11 Downing street for the purpose of raising funds for the Conservative party since November 1990. [24269]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 2 April 1996]: No. 11 Downing street is the home of my wife and I in London and I pay tax on it as a benefit in kind. I am not accountable to Parliament for private functions held there on which no public funds are expended.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Violent Crime

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom citizens were victims of violent crime abroad in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [24597]

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of British citizens reported murdered, raped, assaulted or violently robbed abroad in each of the last five years are as follows:

1991: 145

1992: 196

1993: 231

1994: 257

1995: 174

Scott Report

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department first evaluated the information on the Iraqi nuclear programme cited on pages 608 and 609 of the Scott report. [24832]

Mr. Hanley: During February 1989.

Export Bans

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions and the circumstances of all European Commission bans upon the export of a product by an individual member state; and if he will indicate how many of these occasions were against the wishes of the member state. [24578]

Mr. David Davis: The information requested is not held centrally. There are a number of bans on the export of certain products from certain member states. Examples are the current ban on live cattle and certain products derived from cattle in the UK, and a ban on pigs for slaughter from certain parts of Germany affected by classical swine fever.

Land Mines

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) his officials have had with Britain's allies concerning banning the manufacture, supply and export of land mines. [25179]

Mr. Hanley: In preparation for the final session of the UN weaponry convention review conference in Geneva on 22 April to 3 May, we have recently discussed within the western group the questions on which agreement was not possible at the first session of the review conference in September–October 1995. Appropriate NATO and EU experts' groups have also discussed preparations for the conference.

Bhutan

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conditions on aid have been applied to Bhutan in the last year. [25407]

Mr. Hanley: We do not have an aid programme in Bhutan.

Bhutanese Refugees

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to representatives of the Indian Government regarding the recent arrest and detention of Bhutanese refugees voluntarily returning to their country; and what future representations are planned concerning this matter. [25408]

Mr. Hanley: We are aware of these arrests and detentions. We have made no representations to the Indian Government, but continue to monitor the situation closely with our EU partners.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what humanitarian aid and assistance the Government are currently providing for Bhutanese refugees in Nepal. [25410]

Mr. Hanley: In the last financial year, we provided £100,000 for projects to assist Bhutanese refugees in Nepal. No application for funding has yet been made for this financial year.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what future meetings and discussions the Government are planning to hold with the Governments of Bhutan, Nepal and India regarding the situation of Bhutanese refugees. [25406]

Mr. Hanley: We have no plans to hold discussions with the Governments of Bhutan, Nepal and India regarding the Bhutanese refugee situation. We believe that the problem is best solved through bilateral negotiation between Bhutan and Nepal.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings have been held with representatives of the Bhutanese refugees currently exiled in camps in Nepal. [25409]

Mr. Hanley: Our ambassador in Kathmandu visited the Bhutanese refugee camps in Jhapa last month and talked to representatives of the refugees. A representative of the refugees also called on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 22 March.

"A Partnership of Nations"

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of "A Partnership of Nations" White Paper. [25290]

Mr. David Davis: The policies in the White Paper, "A Partnership of Nations", do not have significant environmental implications. It would not be appropriate to monitor their environmental impact.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what alternative courses of action from those detailed in "A Partnership of Nations" White Paper were considered in environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department. [25288]

Mr. Davis: No alternative courses of action were considered as a result of environmental appraisals. Such appraisals would not have been relevant to the policies outlined in the White Paper, "A Partnership of Nations".

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by the Department of the Environment to "A Partnership of Nations" White Paper has been subject; and if he will publish the appraisal. [25287]

Mr. Davis: "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" provides guidance on environmental appraisal of domestic policies which will have significant environmental implications. It is not relevant to the policies outlined in the White Paper, "A Partnership of Nations".

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how "A Partnership of Nations" White Paper was modified by the results of environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department. [25289]

Mr. Davis: The policies outlined in the White Paper, "A Partnership of Nations", do not have significant environmental implications. It would not have been appropriate to carry out an environmental appraisal.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Medical Research Fraud

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the cases of fraud involving medical research studies in the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years, and the costs to public funds of prosecuting them. [24481]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service does not maintain a central record enabling all cases of the description given by the hon. Member to be identified. The information sought could be obtained only by a scrutiny of all CPS files over the past 10 years and would involve disproportionate cost.

ENVIRONMENT

Pollution (Abandoned Mines)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions are made by (a) his Department, (b) the Coal Authority and (c) the Environment Agency to monitor the incidence and effects of pollution from abandoned mines. [24804]

Mr. Clappison: The responsibility for monitoring pollution from abandoned mines lies with the Environment Agency and, where appropriate, the Coal Authority or other owner or operator.

The Coal Authority monitors pumping at 11 pumping stations, mainly in County Durham. It also measures underground water levels at a number of locations throughout the country. It has carried out pumping trials at more than one location.

The Environment Agency has an extensive chemical and microbiological monitoring programme for the general assessment of the quality of surface waters in England and Wales. Some 60,000 samples are taken each year for chemical analysis. River stretches affected by minewater discharges will be identified and assessed within this programme, each stretch being sampled 12 times per annum. In parallel with the system for the monitoring of controlled waters, the routine sampling of major discharges takes place approximately four times a year.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what treatment methods other than pumping are currently in use to deal with polluted minewater from abandoned mines; where each is in use; how long it has been in use; and what assessment has been made of its effectiveness. [24803]

Mr. Clappison: There are around 10 small-scale pilot treatment projects in England and Wales, which use chemical and physical methods to treat minewaters. These include those on the River Pelenna in south Wales, at Woolley colliery near Barnsley, and at the Wheal Jane tin mine in Cornwall. The Coal Authority is also looking at best practice in the use of treatment methods.

The Environment Agency routinely monitors the principal discharges from these treatment projects, but is too early to make a precise assessment of the effectiveness of the methods used.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the measures which the Environment Agency is evaluating to deal with pollution from abandoned mines. [24801]

Mr. Clappison: The agency monitors surface waters and principal discharges from abandoned mines and undertakes environmental assessments. It is currently funding research, and monitoring the research of others, into a range of treatment methods.

The measures in the Environment Act 1995 relating to abandoned mines will enhance the agency's ability to ensure that this aspect of water pollution is addressed.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the regulations on the six-month notification period for the abandonment of mines. [24797]

Mr. Clappison: My Department is in discussion with the Environment Agency and other interested parties on the content of these regulations. It is intended that a consultation paper on the regulations will be issued very soon.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money has been set aside by (a) the Coal Authority and (b) the Environment Agency for pumping of minewater from abandoned mines in the current financial year and for the next three years. [24799]

Mr. Clappison: In the current year, the Coal Authority has set aside £1.2 million for the costs of electricity for pumping and £0.66 million for maintenance of pumping stations, amounting to a total of £1.9 million. It is likely that the budget for future years will be of a similar order, but will depend on future liabilities or potential savings.

The agency has resources of up to £2 million per annum to cover the cost of pumping and treatment of minewater from Wheal Jane, and expects to spend around £6 million over the three years 1996–97 to 1998–99. It has made no other financial provision for dealing with pumping costs, which would normally be borne by the relevant owner or operator.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each abandoned mine where pumping of minewater is currently taking place in order to prevent pollution and the date that the mine was abandoned. [24802]

Mr. Clappison: The mines where pumping of minewater is taking place to prevent pollution of controlled waters are as follows:

Name of mine	Date of abandonment
Kimblesworth	1968
Kibblesworth	1976
Ushaw Moor	1961
Vinovium	pre 1947
Chester Moor	1968
Nicholson	pre 1947
Lumley 6th	1966
Sherburn Hill	1966
Wooley	1987
Mid Cannock	1967
Wheal Jane	1991

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each abandoned mine where pumping of minewater ceased and was subsequently reinstated, with the dates of cessation and reinstatement. [24798]

Mr. Clappison: The mines where intentional cessation and reinstatement of pumping has taken place are as follows:

Mid Cannock—pumping ceased on 16 May 1995, and was restarted on 13 September 1995

Ushaw Moor—pumping ceased on 10 October 1995, and was restarted on 18 January 1996

These were temporary cessations which formed part of a process of information gathering by the Coal Authority, and were implemented in consultation with the former National Rivers Authority.

Contaminated Land

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he will publish the ministerial guidance on contaminated land; [24805]

(2) when the contaminated land provisions of the Environment Act 1995 will come into effect. [24806]

Mr. Clappison: Informal consultations are taking place on a working draft of the statutory guidance on contaminated land, being prepared under section 57 of the Environment Act 1995. I envisage a further round of informal consultations. The formal draft will be published in time to allow three months for consultation before those parts of the final guidance requiring parliamentary consideration are laid before Parliament at the start of the new Session.

The contaminated land provisions will not be brought into force until the guidance has been formally issued.

Departmental Staff

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the numbers of staff in each grade in the (a) local development group, (b) local government finance policy (i) local taxation, (ii) local capital, (iii) local authority statistics, (iv) local authority grants and (v) local authority grants and revenue and (c) local government (1) structure, (2) sponsorship and superannuation and (3) competition sections of his Department. [24644]

Sir Paul Beresford: The table lists the numbers of staff in each grade in all of the directorates, divisions and units that comprise the Department's new local development group. Within the local government directorate, LG1 division on local government reorganisations works on structure, LG2 division on local government sponsorship and the local government pensions unit works on sponsorship and superannuation, and LG3 division on local authority contracting out and competition in providing services works on competition.

Castle Cement

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what grounds Castle Cement is appealing against the most recent notice served by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in respect of the works at Clitheroe; and if he will make a statement. [24966]

Mr. Clappison: Castle Cement has appealed against variation notice, AR 9435 issued by HMIP under section 10 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 on 23 January 1996. The company contends that the notice is null and void, and also appeals against six specific conditions of authorisation.

HMIP became part of the Environment Agency on 1 April 1996 and a full copy of Castle Cement's grounds of appeal is available for inspection by the public in the register maintained at the agency's office in Bamber Bridge, Preston. It will also be available in the register maintained by Ribble Valley borough council.

Biodiversity Project (Dog Whelk)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the biodiversity project announced at the Darwin initiative seminar will include a study of the dog whelk. [24936]

Mr. Clappison: None of the 34 Darwin initiative projects announced at last month's seminar to help developing countries protect biodiversity include such a study. "Biodiversity: The UK Steering Group Report," published in December 1995, recommends that the dog whelk should be among 1,253 species whose conservation status should be monitored. The Government expect to publish their response to the report in the late spring of 1996.

Public Paths and Byways

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to alter the obligation to reclassify roads used as public paths as byways open to all traffic if vehicular rights are shown ever to have existed. [24962]

Mr. Clappison: We have no plans to alter the obligation to reclassify RUPPs as BOATs where vehicular rights exist. However, as the Government announced in the rural White Paper, Cm 3016, we intend to discuss with interested parties the issue of restricting the use of byways by motorised vehicles.

Nitrates

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the implications of the research by Aberdeen university in 1995 into dietary nitrate intake on the efficacy of European Commission directives on nitrates in water supplies. [25025]

Mr. Clappison: My right hon. Friend has received inquiries from two correspondents and letters from five hon. Members on behalf of three correspondents.

Open Space

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications he has received during the most recent 12 month period for which information is available for permission to compulsorily purchase metropolitan open space in accordance with section 19 of the Acquisition of Land Act 1981; how many certificates he has given; and if he will make a statement. [24950]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: During the year ended 31 March 1996, Government offices received 12 requests for certificates under section 19 of the Acquisition of Land Act 1981, relating to compulsory purchase of open space. They issued seven certificates during the same period.

Section 19 sets out a scheme of special protection for commons, open space and certain allotments which ensures that the national stock of such special land is not eroded through piecemeal compulsory purchase.

Rights of Way

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish a best practice guide regarding management of the use of motorised vehicles on rights of way. [24963]

Mr. Clappison: We intend to publish a best practice guide in the summer.

Green Lanes

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many cases of deterioration of green lanes by vehicular use have been brought to his attention in the last year for which figures are available. [24961]

Mr. Clappison: Neither my Department nor the Department of Transport keeps statistics of this sort. Few cases of deterioration of green lanes are brought to our attention. Research currently in hand includes an attempt to assess the scale of the problem.

Asylum Seekers

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what expenditure threshold will trigger local authorities to entitlement to 80 per cent. compensation for unavoidable costs incurred as a result of obligations to asylum seekers. [24976]

Mr. Clappison: No decisions have been taken yet on the threshold.

Stormgate Mining Ltd.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to obtain information about Stormgate Mining Ltd., with special reference to employers liability insurance cover; and if he will make a statement. [25002]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Executive has served a statutory notice on the Stormgate Mining Co. Ltd., requiring it to produce a current certificate of employers' liability compulsory insurance in relation to its Whittle colliery, Northumberland.

Outdoor Advertising

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) to what environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by his Department, "Outdoor Advertisement Control—Areas of Special Control of Advertisements"—ASCAs—consultation paper has been subjected; and if he will publish the appraisal; [25262]

(2) how "Outdoor Advertisement Control—Areas of Special Control of Advertisements"—ASCAs—consultation paper was modified by the results of environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department; [25264]

(3) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in "Outdoor Advertisement Control—Areas of Special Control of Advertisements"—ASCAs—consultation paper were considered in environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department; [25263]

(4) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of "Outdoor Advertisement Control—Areas of Special Control of Advertisements"—ASCAs—consultation paper. [25265]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave on 11 March, Official Report, column 418.

Local Government Ombudsman

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the review of the local government ombudsman service consultation paper; [25286]

(2) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in the review of the local government ombudsman service consultation paper were considered in environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department; [25284]

(3) what environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by his Department the review of the local government ombudsman service consultation paper has been subject to; and if he will publish the appraisal; [25283]

(4) how the review of the local government ombudsman service consultation paper was modified by the results of environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department. [25285]

Mr. Clappison: Sir Geoffrey Chipperfield's independent report on his prior options review of the Commission for Local Administration, or local government ombudsman service, considered whether the functions presently undertaken by the commission were necessary. It did not in itself have any direct impact on the environment and no environmental appraisal was undertaken.

Council Tax

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the percentage increase for band D council tax for (a) each unitary local authority and (b) each district council in England for the year 1996–97 over the year 1995–96. [25250]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) on 20 March 1996, Official Report, column 213.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what compliance cost assessment has been produced for the Housing Bill; if it is publicly available; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [25266]

Mr. Clappison: A compliance cost assessment has been produced for the Housing Bill; it is publicly available and a copy was placed in the Library of the House on 29 January 1996.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what compliance cost assessment has been produced for the guidance to the Environment Agency; if it is publicly available; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [25268]

Mr. Clappison: A compliance cost assessment was produced when the Environment Bill setting up the Environment Agency was introduced, as indicated in the explanatory and financial memorandum to the Bill. A copy of the CCA is available in the Library.

There was no need to produce a further CCA for the guidance, which is intended to assist the agency with respect to its objectives and the contribution it is to make towards achieving sustainable development.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many compliance cost assessments were produced by his Department in 1995; and if he will place copies in the Library. [25267]

Sir Paul Beresford: Seven compliance cost assessments were produced by my Department during 1995. Copies have been placed in the Library.

"Capital Challenge"

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the "Capital Challenge" consultation paper; [25282]

(2) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in the "Capital Challenge" consultation paper were considered in any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [25280]

(3) what environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by his Department the "Capital Challenge" consultation paper has been subject to; and if he will publish the appraisal; [25279]

(4) how the "Capital Challenge" consultation paper was modified by the results of any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [25281]

Mr. Clappison: Our proposals for a capital challenge fund set out a new mechanism for supporting local authority capital expenditure. The mechanism proposed will not of itself have any direct impact on the environment and no environmental appraisal was undertaken. It is more relevant to focus on the environmental impact of spending proposals approved. I am determined that all local authority capital spending proposals, whether brought forward under capital challenge or under the existing capital finance system, should take proper account of the environmental impact of projects. I therefore intend that, should our proposed pilot scheme go ahead, all bidders would be required to provide a clear assessment of the environmental impact of their proposals. We will also look in particular for projects which reflect the Government's objectives for the promotion of sustainable development.

Transitional Relief, Waltham Forest

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the figures relating to transitional relief paid to Waltham Forest in the same form and for the same periods as in parts (b) to (d) of his answer to the hon. Member for North-West Durham (Ms Armstrong) of 7 March, Official Report, columns 304–5. [25399]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Total amount of transitional relief

1994–95: £111,283,108

1995–96: £27,178,179[1]

(b) Amount of transitional relief paid to London Borough of Waltham Forest

1993–94: £582,601

1994–95: £67,544

1995–96: £9,046[1]

(c) Percentage of total amount of transitional relief paid to London Borough of Waltham Forest

1993–94: 0.15 per cent.

1994–95: 0.06 per cent.

1995–96: 0.03 per cent.[1]

(d) Amount paid per chargeable dwelling in London Borough of Waltham Forest

1993–94: £6.45

1995–96: £0.10[1].

These figures are averages. The actual amount of transitional relief varied according to a household's council tax banding, its composition and its previous liability for community charge.

[1]Information for 1995–96 is provisional and is subject to final grant claims to be made during 1996–97.

Town and Country Planning Act

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the amounts received by (a) the Corporation of London, (b) the inner London boroughs, (c) the outer London boroughs, (d) shire authorities and (e) metropolitan districts, under the provisions of section 106 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 in each year since the implementation of the Act, together with the total in each year for English authorities as a whole. [25480]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Under section 12 of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991, planning obligations must be registered as a local land charge and are therefore available for the public to see.

Local Government Reorganisation

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 15 February to the hon. Member for Bridlington (Mr. Townend), Official Report, column 663, if he will publish the revised estimates of expenditure on the transitional cost of reorganisation in 1996–97, submitted by the councils of East Riding, Yorkshire, Hull city, Bristol city, Bath and North East Somerset and York district. [25460]

Sir Paul Beresford: The revised estimates of expenditure on the transitional costs of reorganisation in 1996–97 submitted by the councils of the East Riding of Yorkshire, Hull city, Bristol city, Bath and North East Somerset and York district were as follows:

Authority	£ thousands rounded 1996–97
East Riding of Yorkshire council	[1]14,140
Hull city council	7,759
Bristol city council	11,089
Bath and North East Somerset council	9,525
York district council	8,321

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate she has made of the annual partnership funding requirement from the private and corporate sectors for lottery awards from the good cause bodies other than the National Lottery Charities Board up to 2000. [22013]

Mr. Sproat: The information currently available to the Department does not distinguish between sources of partnership funding. The following table shows the figures for those distributing bodies currently able to provide estimates.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the balance of private and corporate sponsorship available as lottery partnership funding (a) to national institutions and (b) to regional and local projects. [22014]

Mr. Sproat: The information currently available to the Department does not distinguish between sources of partnership funding. The following table shows the breakdown for partnership funding to date for those distributing bodies currently able to provide figures.

Balance of Partnership Funding

PRIME MINISTER

EU Legislation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 12 March, Official Report, column 535, if he will list each regulation and the Department which takes responsibility for it in the past three years. [23709]

The Prime Minister: Information about individual Council and Commission regulations adopted in the last three years can be obtained from the Commission's CELEX database of Community legislation. Information on which Department leads on each individual measure could be assembled only at disproportionate cost.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 16 April. [23788]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 16 April. [23789]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

No. 10 Downing Street

Mr. Hall: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list all the functions, and the dates on which they took place, which were held at No. 10 Downing street where the costs have been met by political parties and organisations for the purpose of providing financial support to political parties since November 1990. [23556]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 April 1996]: There have been so such functions.

Mr. Hall: To ask the Prime Minister what charges are levied on (a) charities, (b) voluntary organisations and (c) non-official or party function organisers permitted to use the invitations secretary as the responding address for invitations to functions at No. 10 Downing street. [23557]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 April 1996]: When charitable or other non-official events are held at No. 10 Downing street, the organisers are responsible for all catering and staff costs, as well as other miscellaneous direct costs. As under previous Administrations, invitations are normally handled by the invitations secretary. This is necessary to ensure that the appropriate security procedures are followed. No charge is levied for this.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Volcano (Montserrat)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effects of the active volcano on the population of Montserrat; and if he will make a statement. [25484]

Mr. Hanley: Assessments of both the eruptive state of the volcano and the effects of the resulting forecasts have been continuous since last July. An ODA mission was in Montserrat last week to reassess needs, following the latest relocation of the people into the north of the island on 3 April. A range of relief actions was agreed with the Governor and the Government of Montserrat and is now being implemented.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what resources have been made available in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97 for emergency relief in Montserrat; and if she will make a statement. [25485]

Mr. Hanley: Relief commitments by Her Majesty's Government totalled £4.5 million in 1995–96. No specific allocations have been made for 1996–97 as future needs cannot yet be foreseen. Discussions will also take place in Brussels this week to encourage support from the European Commission.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with the Governments of islands neighbouring Montserrat concerning assistance in the event of a volcanic eruption. [25487]

Mr. Hanley: Productive discussions have been held with the Government of Antigua for off-island evacuation; with the French authorities on Guadeloupe for evacuation and for rapid support on Montserrat in time of crisis; with certain Governments with interests and assets in the area, notably the American, Dutch and Venezuelan Governments; and with other Governments through the Caribbean Disaster Emergency Response Agency.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Schools (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State Education and Employment if she will list total capital expenditure on schools in cash and real terms for each year since 1974–75. [20570]

Mrs. Gillan: The table gives the total expenditure on schools capital between 1974–75 and 1994–95—the latest date for which figures are available—in cash and 1994–95 price terms.

The hon. Gentleman has chosen the base year with care. It should be noted that capital expenditure was higher in real terms before 1974–75 under the Conservative Administration. The level of expenditure in the 1970s reflects both the rise in the school population, as a result of demographic changes and the raising of the school leaving age, and the building work required by comprehensive schools. The fall in expenditure in real terms after 1974–75 was partly the result of the Labour Government having to deal with the International Monetary Fund crisis.

Between 1979–80 and 1994–95, capital expenditure increased in real terms by over 19 per cent. The introduction of the private finance initiative in the schools sector now offers new opportunities for bolstering capital expenditure on schools by levering in investment from the private sector.

Capital expenditure on schools 1974–75 to 1994–95

Year	Total[1]	1994–95 prices
1974–75	346.7	1,818.5
1975–76	369.6	1,545.3
1976–77	362.2	1,334.3
1977–78	315.0	1,021.5
1978–79	296.7	865.3
1979–80	325.1	812.4
1980–81	391.1	826.0
1981–82	314.4	605.5
1982–83	327.8	589.4
1983–84	343.1	589.4
1984–85	368.6	602.9
1985–86	396.5	614.9
1986–87	420.2	632.5
1987–88	470.3	672.2
1988–89	628.6	842.1
1989–90	782.3	979.6
1990–91	779.2	903.2
1991–92	795.4	867.9
1992–93	809.1	848.4
1993–94	894.5	911.3

Up to 1992–93 figures include sixth form colleges; in 1993–94 sixth form colleges became the responsibility of the FEFC.

[1] The totals include local education authority schools capital expenditure; Government grant aid to voluntary aided and special agreement schools; governors' contributions to capital cots at VA/SA schools; grant-maintained schools capital grant; Government grants to and private sponsorship of technology colleges and city technology colleges. They do not include provision for repairs at VA/SA schools.

Figures for sponsorship of city technology colleges amount to £37 million up to 1994–95. However, only £31 million of this is included in the table; information held centrally does not enable the remaining £6 million to be apportioned to specific financial years.

[2] Includes provisional figures for LEA outturn expenditure.

Barnsley and Doncaster Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many days were taken to carry out (a) quality and safety and (b) financial control audits at Barnsley and Doncaster TEC; what were the costs in each case; and if she will make a statement. [24491]

Mr. Paice: In 1995–96, five staff days were spent on a health and safety compliance audit, 25 staff days on a total quality assurance supplier management compliance audit and 85 staff days on financial control audits at Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council. Information on the costs of these audits is not available.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice she has given to the Further Education Funding Council in relation to ensuring access to free further education tuition for asylum seekers who are not eligible for income support because of their asylum status but would pass the means test for a state benefit if they were United Kingdom citizens. [24823]

Mr. Paice: None.

Modern Apprenticeships

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total public expenditure on publicity for the accelerated modern apprenticeships. [24575]

Mr. Paice: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) on 13 February 1996, Official Report, column 532.

No public money has been allocated by this Department specifically for the publicity of accelerated modern apprenticeships.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people started accelerated modern apprenticeships. [24576]

Mr. Paice: As at December 1995, there were 400 young people on accelerated modern apprenticeships in England and Wales.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was her Department's original forecast of the number of places that would be available on accelerated modern apprenticeships. [24574]

Mr. Paice: Resources were originally made available to support around 9000 places for accelerated Modern Apprenticeships in 1995–96. Feedback from training and enterprise councils and industry training organisations indicated that the needs of the young people involved could be better met by mainstream modern apprenticeships, and the Government agreed to merge accelerated modern apprenticeships and modern apprenticeships from the start of April this year.

Self-employment

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assistance is available from her Department for unemployed persons wishing (a) to start their own business and (b) to become self-employed. [24814]

Mr. Paice: Help for unemployed people wishing to become self-employed or to start their own business is provided through training for work. The Department also contributes to the work of the Prince's Youth Business Trust which helps disadvantaged young people aged 18 to 29 to set up in business through the provision of grants and loans.

School Premises

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on (a) the discretion of governors in charging outside bodies for the use of schools' premises and (b) guidelines she has issued in respect of minimum or maximum amounts to be charged. [24631]

Mrs. Gillan: Guidance on charging outside bodies for the use of school premises is contained in "Our School—Your School", published by the Department for Education and Employment and sent to all schools and local education authorities on 24 October 1995. There are no specific guidelines on minimum or maximum amounts to be charged. Subject to any directions issued by a local education authority might place on its own schools, school governors are free to negotiate charges with users, so long as they at least break even overall. Schools can apply whatever income they earn for the purposes of the school.

Publication Costs

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total cost of (a) her Department's departmental report for 1996 and (b) "Department for Education and Employment: Action in London", broken down to show the cost of (i) compilation and (ii) printing and distribution. [24627]

Mr. Robin Squire: The total cost of the Department's departmental report, published in March 1996, was £60,500. This comprised: (i) compilation, £29,500; (ii) printing and distribution, £31,000.

The total cost of "Department for Education and Employment: Action in London" was £17,400. This comprised: (i) compilation, £7,900; (ii) printing and distribution, £9,500.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if his Department will accept an average of the annual amount of guided learning hours calculated over the number of weeks in which there are any such hours as a weekly figure when deciding whether students on courses funded by the Further Education Funding Council for Wales are part-time for the purposes of the jobseeker's allowance. [24812]

Mr. Forth: The jobseeker's allowance regulations provide that a person who undertakes a course funded or part-funded by the Further Education Funding Council for Wales will be considered to be a part-time student if a document signed on behalf of the establishment which is funded by the FEFC for Wales for the delivery of the course says that the course involves 16 guided learning hours or less a week.

In the case of courses funded by the Secretary of State for Scotland at a college of further education, a student will be considered to be part-time if a document signed on behalf of the college says that the course involves 16 hours or less a week of classroom or workshop-based programmed learning under the direct guidance of teaching staff; or 21 hours or less a week, made up of 16 hours or less of classroom or workshop-based programme learning under the direct guidance of teaching staff and additional hours using structured learning packages with the support of teaching staff.

In both cases, the Employment Service will accept these documents as evidence of whether or not a person is a part-time student. In the case of courses funded by the FEFC for Wales, the number of hours per week will be calculated on the basis of a weekly average of the number of guided learning hours for the course. In the case of courses funded by the Secretary of State for Scotland at a college of further education, the number of hours of study per week will be calculated in the same way.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if part-time students in receipt of the jobseeker's allowance will be deemed to have restricted their availability for work where they have paid a fee for the course. [24813]

Mr. Forth: People who receive jobseeker's allowance and study part time must remain available for work. Independent adjudication officers will determine whether or not a person is available for work, taking into account all the relevant circumstances of the case: payment of a fee for a course will not automatically mean that a person will be considered to have restricted his or her availability for work.

For certain jobseekers, the Jobseekers' Allowance Regulations 1996 have the effect that payment of a fee should not be taken into account. For people who have, broadly, been unemployed for three months in the last six no matter relating to their course will be taken into account when determining whether they are available for work providing they are willing and able to rearrange the hours of their course to take a job within the hours they have agreed they are available for work in their jobseeker's agreement.

Student Grants

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average grant received by students in (a) 1985, (b) 1990, (c) 1992, (d) 1993, (e) 1994 and (f) 1995; and if she will make a statement. [24617]

Mr. Forth: The average net maintenance grants after means-testing received by mandatory award holders in England and Wales in the academic years 1984–85, 1989–90, 1991–92 to 1994–95, the latest year for which data are available, are set out in the table. Since 1990–91, eligible students have also had access to non-means-tested student loans.

Average net maintenance grants to holders of mandatory awards England and Wales

1989–90	1,390
1991–92	1,550
1992–93	1,610
1993–94	1,670
1994–95[2]	1,520

[1] To the nearest £10.[2] 1994–95 data are provisional.

Graduates

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of (a) Welsh, (b) Scottish, (c) Northern Irish and (d) English graduates secured full-time employment within one year of graduation in (i) 1985, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1992, (iv) 1994 and (v) 1995; and if she will make a statement. [24614]

Mr. Forth: The available information based on graduates' employment position six months after graduation is as follows:

Percentage of graduates in employment six months after graduating, Great Britain

Year of qualification	Percentage
1985	63
1990	60
1992	52
1994	57

Separate figures for each country are not readily available.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many graduates left university and took up careers in industry in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [24608]

Mr. Forth: The available information is given in the following table.

Graduates employed in industry six months after graduating, Great Britain

Year of qualification	Numbers	As a percentage of all graduates with known destination
1990	16,200	15.1
1991	12,600	11.1
1992	11,800	9.6
1993	13,200	9.5
1994	16,800	10.7

Centre for Health and Academic-related Research, Sheffield

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) which institutions funded the Sheffield centre for health and academic-related research; and who was responsible for negotiating its funding agreements over the last three years; [24632]

(2) if she will list the staff employed by the university of Sheffield in the Sheffield centre for health and academic-related research, indicating those formerly in the employment of Trent regional health authority; if she will make a statement on the academic research experience of the staff; if she will list the salary levels of these staff; and which bodies are responsible for paying these salaries. [24633]

Mr. Forth: The information requested is not held centrally. Universities are responsible for their own staffing matters.

Part-time Studies

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the impact of the 1996–97 settlement to universities on the opportunities for part-time studies. [23707]

Mr. Forth: The November 1995 Budget settlement confirmed the 1994 plans for higher education recurrent expenditure, but planned capital expenditure was reduced reflecting the policy that capital should, wherever possible, be financed through private finance schemes. I understand that, in response to the Secretary of State's guidance, the Higher Education Funding Council for England has recently decided to allocate extra resources for part-time students in science and engineering in 1996–97.

Discretionary Awards

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of local authority budgets for education was spent on discretionary awards for each year since 1990. [24125]

Mr. Forth: Information is not available in the form requested. The following table shows total local education authority expenditure in England on discretionary awards in the academic years 1990–91 to 1994–95 and total net recurrent local authority expenditure on education in the financial years 1990–91 to 1994–95. Because the figures for discretionary awards expenditure and net recurrent expenditure are not directly comparable, it not possible to calculate the percentage of total expenditure which is attributable to discretionary awards.

Expenditure by local education authorities: England

Academic year	Expenditure on discretionary awards[1] £m (cash terms)	Financial year	Total expenditure on education[1, 2] £m (cash terms)
1990–91	198	1990–91	17,230
1991–92	222	1991–92	19,451
1992–93	219	1992–93	20,892
1993–94	173	1993–94	18,635
1994–95[3]	132	[3]1994–95	18,392

Notes:
[2] Net recurrent expenditure, ie., total recurrent expenditure, excluding joint arrangements, minus customer and client receipts and revenue from LEAs for pupils and students educated by other authorities.
[3] Provisional.

Special Needs

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of average local authority costs incurred in the statementing procedure for a child; and how many children were statemented in the last year for which figures are available. [24126]

Mrs. Gillan: In 1994, the latest year for which information is currently available, local education authorities' returns indicate that statements were issued for the first time in respect of some 45,800 children. The Department does not collect information on the average cost of statutory assessments.

Devon and Cornwall Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the membership of the business and Education board of the Devon and Cornwall training and enterprise council since 1987 by (a) name, (b) dates of birth and (c) remuneration given. [24648]

Mr. Paice: Membership of the main board and training and enterprise council area boards of Devon and Cornwall TEC is listed in the annual review report of the TEC, which was established in 1990. Board directors are appointed within the eligibility criteria set out in the Department's contract with the TEC. The appointments are made by the TEC. No remuneration is given. The hon. Member will need to contact the TEC for the further information that he seeks about the dates of birth of board directors.

Student Unions

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many representations she has received on making membership of students' unions voluntary; and if she will make a statement. [25009]

Mr. Forth: Membership of students' unions was made voluntary by the Education Act 1994, which gave students the right not to belong to their students' union. Since September 1994, when this provision came into force, there has been one representation that membership should be on an opt-in basis.

Nursery Places, Lancashire

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children are currently in nursery places in Lancashire; what percentage this is of the children of nursery age; and what estimate she has made of the change in each case from the introduction of the nursery voucher scheme. [24876]

Mr. Robin Squire: In January 1995, the latest date for which information is available, 8,130 or 21 per cent. of children aged three and four were being taught in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools in Lancashire Local Education Authority area. In addition, 12,867 or 33 per cent. of children aged three and four were being taught in infant classes in maintained primary schools.

The number of additional places for four-year-olds created through the nursery voucher scheme in any local authority area will depend on the response of providers to parental demand. I am confident that providers of all types, either alone or in partnership, will satisfy parental demand over time.

After-school Care

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current number of places available for after-school care; and what plans she has to increase aid provision. [24877]

Mrs. Gillan: Since the out-of-school child care initiative started in April 1993, 57,145 places have been created in England up to the end of February 1996. Further funding of £12.5 million has been made available to extend the initiative for a further three years from April 1996.

"Lifelong Learning"

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures she plans to introduce as a result of the consultation process on the "Lifelong Learning" document. [25172]

Mr. Paice: There has been a tremendous interest in the consultation exercise, which is now being analysed. It would be premature to make any announcements at this stage. The Government will be responding in due course. The Department already has many successful measures in place to support lifetime learning.

Aggregate Schools Budget, Liverpool

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the 1996–97 aggregate schools budget for Liverpool local education authority. [24923]

Mr. Robin Squire: Liverpool's aggregated schools budget for 1996–97 is £140,991,000. This figure is taken from budget statement published by the local education authority under section 42 of the Education Reform Act, 1988.

Security Guards (Schools)

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the use of private security guards in schools. [24884]

Mr. Robin Squire: Whether or not to employ security guards is a matter for schools and local education authorities to decide in the light of their assessment of security risks and the range of measures which can be taken to reduce those risks in the circumstances of each school. I am aware that some schools do employ such staff, mainly for security patrols outside school hours. The Department produces guidance on a range of security measures for schools, including the use of security guards.

Merseyside Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress Merseyside TEC is making in meeting the criteria for the award of a three-year licence. [25371]

Mr. Paice: I am pleased to announce the award of a three-year licence to Merseyside TEC, which has now completed the process of meeting the rigorous standards that we set.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many compliance cost assessments were produced by her Department in 1995; and if she will place copies in the Library. [25260]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department for Education and Employment or its predecessors produced two compliance cost assessments in 1995:

(a) for the Activities Centres (Young Person's Safety) Bill; and

(b) for the employment code of practice under the Disability Discrimination Act 1985.

Copies are available in the Library.

Dance and Drama Students

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she plans to make a statement on alternative funding proposals for students of dance and drama. [25248]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has no plans to make such a statement.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent assessment she has made of the number of local education authorities that currently make discretionary awards to students of dance and drama. [25249]

Mr. Forth: Discretionary awards are a matter for local education authorities. No recent assessment of the distribution of such awards by subject has been made.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will conduct a survey of the teacher training institutions to establish what strategies they have in place to enable new teachers to assist left-handed pupils with their writing. [25367]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Office for Standards in Education publishes reports following its inspections of initial teacher training courses. The Teacher Training Agency accredits course providers to ensure that they meet the Secretary of State's criteria. These criteria require new teachers to be able to identify and to respond appropriately to relevant individual differences between pupils. Despite being left-handed, I see no need for further information from providers in this respect.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action the Government are taking within the Council of Ministers to end age discrimination in Europe. [25330]

Mrs. Gillan: The Government's policy is to tackle age discrimination through this Department's campaign for older workers. The campaign, which I head, operates through persuasion and education. It aims to persuade employers of the business benefits in recruiting, retraining and retaining workers on merit; to raise awareness of the importance of older workers; and to support older workers in remaining active in the labour market.

On the 29 June 1995, the Council of Ministers adopted the resolution on the employment of older workers, reference 8258/95 SOC 201. A copy has been deposited in the House of Commons Library. The resolution recognises the significance of older workers as an employment issue. Equally, it recognises the importance of member states following their own policies in combating this problem.

Schools Statistics

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list in rank order for each local education authority the number and percentage of pupils obtaining five GCSEs at grade C or above in the latest year for which figures are available together with (a) the number and percentage of pupils obtaining three A–level passes, (b) the average primary school class size, (c) the average secondary school class size, (d) expenditure per primary pupil and (e) expenditure per secondary pupil; and if she will indicate in each of (a) to (e) the local education authority's rank order. [24030]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The following table lists in rank order for each local education authority the number and percentage of pupils obtaining five GCSEs at grade C or above in 1994–95 together with (a) the number and percentage of pupils obtaining three or more GCE A–level or AS equivalent passes in 1994–95, (b) the average primary school class size, (c) the average secondary school class size, (d) expenditure per primary pupil and (e) expenditure per secondary pupil. In each case, the local education authority's rank order is indicated.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Challenge Programme

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when his Department's challenge programme was introduced; and when it will be completed. [24196]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department runs a number of challenge programmes. The regional challenge was launched in February 1995 and the winners were announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Energy last December. Following the success of that round, we intend to launch a second round, probably early next year. In July 1995, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced details of the export challenge to trade associations and the winners of this challenge were announced by my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade in March. The technology foresight challenge was launched in September 1995. The final results of this challenge are expected to be announced in May or June. In February 1996, we announced at the launch of our information society initiative—the first of a number of challenges designed to encourage business support organisations to participate in the initiative. The results of this first challenge, which is for trade associations, will be announced in June 1996. Details of the further challenges under the initiative will be given later in the year. Finally, my Department has also jointly funded the skills challenge with the Department for Education and Employment. The results of the second round of this challenge were announced recently. The Department continues to look for new areas that would benefit from the introduction of challenge funding.

Industry Council

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EC Industry Council meeting held on 28 March. [25119]

Mr. Eggar: The Council adopted resolutions on the co-ordination of activities in favour of small and medium-sized enterprises—SMEs—and on an industrial policy for the EU pharmaceutical industry. The Council also agreed conclusions on a Commission communication on the impact of international developments on the textile and clothing sector.

The Commission made oral presentations on its proposal for a new SME multi-annual programme for the period 1997 to 2000, on its green paper on innovation and the work of the research/industry task forces on its communication on the challenges facing the EU defence-related industry and on its communication on the competitiveness of EU maritime industries.

The Council debated the issue of how many separate directives should be adopted on food for particular nutritional uses—"dietary foodstuffs". It did not prove possible to reach a common position on the basis of the presidency's compromise proposal, which is expected to be discussed further at the Internal Market Council on 28 May.

Shipbuilding was raised under other business. The Commission indicated that it would produce a proposal for extending the existing directive on aid to shipbuilding, in the event of further delays in the ratification of the OECD agreement. Denmark circulated a short paper on the need to strengthen EU monitoring of shipbuilding aid rules. Finally, the Commission provided information on the Bremer Vulcan aid case and made clear that it would take firm action. Germany acknowledged that the case represented a misuse of public funds.

The presidency outlined its plans for an EU-Mediterranean conference of Industry Ministers on 21 May.

No votes were taken at the Council.

Coal Mining

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will discuss with the Coal Authority, as early as possible, arrangements to establish a register of all companies involved in mining operations in the United Kingdom and to ensure the deposit of a copy of each company's current employers liability insurance certificate. [25003]

Mr. Page: In accordance with the provisions of section 35 of the Coal Industry Act 1994, a register of licences granted for the carrying out of coal mining operations has been established by the Coal Authority. The enforcement of legislative requirements on employers' liability insurance is a matter for the Health and Safety Executive.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the measures which the Coal Authority (a) has taken to date and (b) proposes to take to deal with pollution from abandoned mines. [24800]

Mr. Page: This is a matter for the Coal Authority. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Oil and Gas Exploration

Dr. Godman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent discussions he has held with Amoco (UK) exploration company concerning the future decommissioning of the north-west Hutton installation; and when the company submitted an abandonment programme for the structure. [24368]

Mr. Page: Neither my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade nor any other DTI Minister has had discussions with Amoco about decommissioning the north-west Hutton installation. The owners of the installation have not yet been directed to submit a decommissioning programme.

Work Force Representatives

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how work force representatives will be elected for the purposes of Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 requirements; how this process will be monitored; what challenge and appeal safeguards are included; what will be the time scale for elections; how the electorate will be (a) determined and (b) monitored; and what will be the term of office for those elected. [24124]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981, as amended, an employer is required to provide, long enough before the transfer of an undertaking for consultation to take place, information to appropriate representatives of any employees who may be affected by the transfer. Appropriate representatives may be representatives of an independent trade union recognised by the employer in respect of those employees or representatives elected by the employees themselves, whether specifically for that purpose or for some other relevant purpose.

The regulations do not specify detailed rules for the election by the affected employees of representatives or the term of their office, but provision is made for complaints to be made to an industrial tribunal about an employer's failure to consult appropriate representatives. If the elected representatives or a recognised trade union consider that the employer has not consulted them as required, or the employees affected have not been given a proper opportunity to elect representatives, they may present a complaint to an industrial tribunal.

Company General Meetings

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will be publishing a consultative document on the Companies Act provisions under which shareholders may table resolutions for discussion at the annual general meeting. [25354]

Mr. Oppenheim: I have today published a consultative document seeking views on the provisions of the Companies Act relating to the circulation of shareholders' resolutions. This follows up the Government's undertaking to consult on the recommendation of the former Employment Committee in its report, "The Remuneration of Directors and Chief Executives of Privatised Utilities" that the Companies Act should be amended to require shareholders' resolutions, where they are supported by a sufficient number of shareholders and are limited in length, to be circulated by the company to all shareholders without cost.

The consultative document seeks views on whether the existing rules operate effectively. It considers whether good practice in circulating shareholders' resolutions without charge should be incorporated into a statutory requirement and whether a tightening up of the rules would be appropriate. It also examines some related questions concerning the wider issue of communication between shareholders and the board.

Copies of the consultative document "Shareholder Communications at the Annual General Meeting" have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Home Accident Prevention Initiatives

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to make the provision of home accident prevention initiatives a mandatory function of local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [24939]

Mr. John M. Taylor: There are no plans to make home accident prevention initiatives a mandatory function of local authorities. Many local authorities already participate in home accident prevention, underpinned by the wide range of free home safety awareness literature provided by my Department's consumer safety unit. However, it is important that local authorities are free to balance this activity alongside other competing priorities.

Mr. Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to provide specific funding for local authorities to provide home accident prevention initiatives; and if he will make a statement. [24938]

Mr. Taylor: There are no plans for specific funding for local authorities to provide home accident prevention initiatives. However, my Department makes a wide range of free home safety literature available to local authorities and provides a grant in aid to the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents, which is used to support four regional home safety officers who work closely with accident prevention staff in local authorities.

Mr. Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many accidents in the home necessitated hospital treatment for each year for which records are available; and if he will make a statement. [24899]

Mr. Taylor: The number of home accident victims treated in accident and emergency units in the United Kingdom in 1994 is estimated at 2.9 million—according to one report of the home accident surveillance system, HASS, for 1994.

Estimates for earlier years—1977 onwards—are given in the appropriate HASS reports, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Prior to 1987, the estimates refer to England and Wales only.

Nuclear Power Industry (Privatisation)

Mr. Merchant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are his proposals for employees and pensioners of the nuclear electricity industry to participate in the forthcoming British Energy share offer; and if he will make a statement. [25353]

Mr. Eggar: The Government strongly believe in the positive effects of employee share ownership and I welcome the excellent opportunity which privatisation of British Energy provides for its employees to claim a significant stake in the future of their company. This package is comparable to those offered to employees during previous Government flotations and is in line with out intention of extending share ownership as widely as possible.

I am confident that British Energy's employees will be keen to take advantage of the offer and I look forward to seeing high levels of take-up.

Employees of the British Energy Group will be offered free shares to a fully paid value of about £160, plus shares at a fully paid value of about £2 for every year of continuous service within the electricity supply industry on the day before the prospectus is issued.

Employees will also be offered two free fully paid shares for every share bought at the offer price on a matching basis up to a maximum fully paid value of about £500-worth of free shares. Under this element of the package, if an employee bought shares with a fully paid value of £250, he would receive additional free shares to a fully paid value of £500.

These free and matching shares will be available to employees who have completed at least six months' continuous service within the British Energy Group or, where applicable, Nuclear Electric plc, on the day before the prospectus is issued.

In addition, employees will be able to buy shares up to a maximum fully paid value of about £1,400 of additional shares at a discount of 20 per cent. from the public offer price.

Employees applying for shares will be treated on a priority basis, over the general public, up to an individual fully paid limit of shares worth about £18,000.

These discount and priority shares will be available to each person employed by the British Energy Group on the day before the prospectus is issued.

Magnox Electric employees have been part of the effort by the industry which has brought it to the point where the more modern part can be privatised. The co-operation of Magnox has been vital in the run-up to the restructuring of the industry, which took effect at the end of March. In recognition of this co-operation, special arrangements have been made for employees of Magnox Electric to participate in the British Energy share offer.

Employees of Magnox Electric will be able to buy shares in British Energy up to a maximum fully paid value of about £1,400 of additional shares at a discount of 20 per cent. from the public offer price. Employees applying for shares will be treated on a priority basis, over the general public, up to an individual fully paid limit of shares worth about £18,000. The discount and priority shares will be available to each person employed by Magnox Electric on the day before the prospectus is issued.

Pensioners of both the British Energy Group and Magnox Electric will be able to apply on a priority basis, over the general public, for shares up to a fully paid limit of about £16,600.

The extent to which employees and pensioners will be able to apply for shares on a priority basis, over the general public, may be subject to scaling down if the number of shares applied for by employees and pensioners exceeds a prescribed proportion of the total number on offer.

Further details of the share offer arrangements will be made available individually to employees and pensioners in due course. These will include, where applicable, the requirements of the Inland Revenue as they apply to these offers.

Environmental Technology and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much was spent on promoting exports in the environmental technology and services industry in 1995–96; [24640]

(2) what is the budget for the year 1995–96 of the joint environmental markets units; and what amount of that budget was spent on export services. [24641]

Mr. Page: The full range of the Government's export promotion and support services were available to the UK environmental technology and services industry in 1995–96. In addition, the joint environmental markets unit—JEMU—and the UK technology partnership initiative—TPI—were also specifically concerned with promoting UK environmental technology and services overseas. The forecast outturn for general export services, excluding staff and overheads, in 1995–96 is approximately £53 million, though it is not possible separately to identify how much was spent promoting exports for the environmental sector. The 1995–96 forecast outturn for JEMU-TPI, excluding staff and overheads, is £431,000, much of which has supported export-related activity either directly or indirectly. In addition, in many cases, TPI funds have leveraged local resources to promote UK technologies and services.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what account was taken of the effects on environmental technology manufacturers when his Department recommended that the Department of the Environment postpone the upgrading deadlines in the process guidance notes; and if a full cost-benefit analysis was obtained. [24643]

Mr. Page: The decision to postpone the upgrading deadlines in the process guidance notes did not result from a recommendation by my Department. It is for the Department of the Environment, as lead Department, to assess the costs and benefits to the environment and to all those affected by any decision relating to environmental policy.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will take into account the economic cost to environmental technology manufacturers when he makes representations to the Department of the Environment concerning the four-year revision of all chief inspectors evidence notes and process guidance notes. [24642]

Mr. Page: The costs and benefits to all parties with an interest in the revision of these guidance notes will be considered by the Department of the Environment, as the lead Department, at the appropriate time.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what proposals he has developed a specific export strategy for the environmental technology and services industry; [24638]

(2) what plans his Department has to encourage exports in the environmental technology and services industry. [24639]

Mr. Page: The full range of the Government's export promotion and support services are available to UK suppliers of environmental technologies and services. In addition, in 1992 the Government established a joint environmental markets unit—JEMU—bringing together resources from my Department and the Department of the Environment to ensure that UK firms are informed of the large and growing environmental market opportunities and to help them exploit these opportunities.

As part of a developing strategy, JEMU commissioned a report on the strengths and weaknesses of the UK industry and its global competitiveness, "The UK Environmental Industry: Succeeding in the Changing Global Market". Following this report, the unit has been working closely with the Government's overseas trade services—OTS—including British embassies and high commissions overseas to identify key markets for UK environmental goods and expertise. As a result, environmental technology and services is currently targeted as a priority in 48 of the top 80 UK export markets. JEMU and OTS are also working with industry, trade associations and others to promote export opportunities and to raise the profile of the UK industry abroad.

In addition, JEMU manages the UK technology partnership initiative—TPI—which provides information to business in rapidly industrialising and developing countries on UK environmental technology and expertise. TPI publishes regular information and sponsors overseas seminars about UK capabilities. It has recently reviewed its strategy and is currently producing a directory of 1,000 UK environmental supply companies active or keen to be active in some 37 priority markets. It also aims to expand its network of 3,500 active overseas business multipliers.

As part of its lead sponsorship role, JEMU is currently working with the UK environmental industry to assist it in identifying the factors which affect the industry's competitiveness and in developing a strategy for improved performance. This will include a focus on responding to export opportunities.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many compliance cost assessments were produced by his Department in 1995; and if he will place copies in the Library. [25275]

Mr. Lang: My Department published 20 compliance cost assessments in 1995. Copies have already been placed in the Library of the House.

Domestic Gas and Electricity Bills

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the projected average (a) gas and (b) electricity bill per household on a regional basis for 1996–97; what were the equivalent figures in 1995–96; and what is the percentage change in each case. [24927]

Mr. Eggar: For the financial year 1995–96, the average regional household electricity bills excluding VAT are given in the table. In England and Wales, the regions represent those covered by the regional electricity companies.

Region	Average electricity bill[1] during the financial year 1995–96, excluding VAT (£)
Eastern	264.94
East Midlands	275.78
London	277.26
Manchester and North Wales (MANWEB)	297.99
West Midlands	272.10
Northern	282.09
North West (NORWEB)	255.16
South East (SEEBOARD)	260.50
Southern	270.30
South Wales	311.64
South West	294.69
Yorkshire	272.02
Scotland	272.10
Northern Ireland	326.66
UK average	275.33

[1] Average for a typical domestic consumer with consumption of 3,300 kWh of electricity a year. Calculated from published tariffs and standing charges. The average bill represents the amount paid by a typical household in the financial year including any rebates received by the households.

In addition, domestic electricity customers in England and Wales will have received a £50 discount on their bills in the first quarter of 1996, following the flotation of the National Grid.

For gas, there was no regional difference in pricing to households in the financial year 1995–96. The average household gas bill for a typical customer with consumption of 17,600 kWh per year in 1995–96 was £305.44 excluding VAT.

My Department does not make projections of electricity or gas prices.

British Coal Enterprise

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what sums have been received from the sale of British Coal Enterprise. [25131]

Mr. Page: The sale of British Coal Enterprise, BCE, is a matter for British Coal. I understand that the corporation has not yet completed the sale of all of the activities of BCE.

Public Interest Disclosure Bill

Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many representations his Department has received since 26 February on the Public Interest Disclosure Bill; and (a) how many of these were in favour of the Bill and (b) how many indicated that the Bill would pose an undue burden on business. [25333]

Mr. John M. Taylor: In the period 26 February to 10 April, my Department received 10 letters expressing support for the Bill and none expressing opposition.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what public consultations his Department intends to take in respect of the Public Interest Disclosure Bill. [25332]

Mr. Taylor: None.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations his Department undertook on the Public Interest Disclosure Bill during March. [25331]

Mr. Taylor: None.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Clerk to the Justices (Middlesex Petty Session)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how often, over the last three years, in each of the Middlesex area petty session courts the clerk to the justices has clerked cases. [25154]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Magistrates courts are locally managed by magistrates courts committees under the provisions of the Justices of the Peace Act 1979. The sort of information requested is not kept centrally and it is not the sort of information the Department would expect to receive from individuals MCCs.

Clerk to the Justices (Brent)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what salary the clerk to the justices in Brent receives as chief executive in addition to his salary as clerk. [25156]

Mr. Evans: Under the provisions of section 26A of the Justices of the Peace Act 1979, justices' chief executives and justices clerks are employed under contract by magistrates courts committees, on terms which the courts committees decide. I do not have access to individual contracts.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what were the costs to public funds arising from the recent successful appeal by the Brent court clerk to an industrial tribunal against her dismissal; if he will provide a breakdown of the costs; and if he will make a statement about the circumstances that led to this case. [25160]

Mr. Evans: Magistrates courts are locally managed by magistrates courts committees under the provisions of the Justices of the Peace Act 1979. The Department has not been notified of either the amount of the legal costs incurred by the magistrates courts committee, or the amount of the agreed settlement, made in 1994, between the magistrates courts committee and the former employee.

These amounts would have been paid from locally held funds, and no request for additional cash-limited grant was made to cover these payments.

Court Administration Costs (Middlesex)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what, over the last three years, have been the administrative costs of each of the petty sessional courts in the Middlesex area. [25155]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The areas of eight magistrates courts committees fall within the Middlesex area. Expenditure information is collected and held by this Department at committee and not petty sessional court level. The audited gross revenue expenditure for these eight committees for the three most recent available financial years, as reported to this Department by the responsible local authorities to those magistrates courts committees is:

Committee	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Barnet	1,692,643	1,852,997	1,906,629
Brent	2,509,038	2,620,844	2,799,017
Ealing	1,689,984	1,996,810	1,984,330
Enfield	1,642,974	1,698,950	1,800,809
Haringey	1,714,042	1,781,759	2,197,974
Harrow	720,115	761,579	802,260
Hillingdon	1,542,868	1,636,486	1,748,196
Hounslow	1,895,440	1,963,763	2,076,765

Brent Court

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the chief inspector of magistrates courts services last conducted an inspection into the efficiency of the Brent court; when the court will next be inspected; and what assessment he has made of the efficiency of the Brent court. [25161]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The magistrates courts service inspectorate was established in January 1993 with the appointment of the chief inspector, Mrs. Rosemary Melling, to inspect and report on the administration and organisation of all the 100 magistrates courts committees. The inspectorate is still carrying out its first inspection cycle. The inspection of the Brent MCC area is due to take place in November 1996. The subsequent inspection report will be published no later than May 1997.

Licensed Premises (Children's Certificates)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what estimate he has made of the cost of administering children's certificates for licensed premises, broken down by (a) inspections, (b) magistrates' time and (c) printing costs. [23662]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: At the time of the policy assessment, it was considered that there would be an initial surge of work in the magistrates courts but that this would then level off and be cost neutral. Since the introduction of children's certificates, there has been no evidence to suggest that this assessment was wrong.

Courts (Wales)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department: how many magistrates courts there were in Wales in (a) 1979, (b) 1989, (c) 1993 and (d) at the latest available date; and if he will make a statement. [24623]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The provision of courthouses is a matter for the magistrates courts committee in conjunction with the paying authority. The Lord Chancellor is involved only when there is an appeal by a local authority against a proposed closure. Information is therefore not collected centrally.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what was the cost of administering (a) county courts and (b) Crown courts in Wales in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [24598]

Mr. Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer. I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 16 April 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the cost of administering Crown and county courts in Wales.

The table below sets out the cost to the Wales and Chester Circuit since 1990. The figures are in respect of the Circuit as a whole and therefore includes areas of Cheshire. It is not possible to give a separate breakdown for Welsh courts alone. Figures for 1995/96 have not yet been finalised.

£ million

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
County	10.153	12.158	14.251	15.160	16.274
Crown	6.210	8.525	10.321	10.093	10.727
Total	16.363	20.683	24.572	25.253	27.001

Legal Aid Board

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has for the Legal Aid Board to contract out its visits systems to solicitors' offices; and what is the estimated cost to the Legal Aid Board of the franchise audit operation. [24777]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There are no plans for the Legal Aid Board to contract out its system of franchise audit visits to solicitors' offices. The audit costs are not currently separable from the overall administrative cost of franchising, which was £3.2 million in 1995–96. This included the cost of auditing and related costs such as the recruitment and training of auditors.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he now has to ensure that remand prisoners are brought to trial within a reasonable time. [24794]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Cases where defendants are on remand are treated as a priority in the magistrates courts and Crown court. In the Crown court, with the national introduction of plea and directions hearings, defendants who are remanded in custody are brought before the court within four weeks of committal, and a date is given for the trial, unless there is a good reason for not doing so. For both the Crown court and the magistrates courts, a sub-group of the trials issues group is considering the operation of current time guidelines and in particular the extent of compliance with those guidelines.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in how many cases in each of the last three years for which figures are available courts in England and Wales met the 70-day limit in magistrates courts and 112 days in Crown courts for bringing remand prisoners to trial. [24795]

Mr. Evans: For the Crown court, defendants on remand were brought to trial within 112 days as follows: 1993: 16,579 (77 per cent), 1994: 17,632 (74 per cent), 1995: 19,373 (77 per cent). Figures are not collected in the magistrates' courts on the same basis. However, sample figures indicate that the proportion of defendants remanded in custody throughout, whose proceedings within the magistrates' courts were completed within 70 days is as follows: 1993: 81 per cent, 1994: 84 per cent, 1995: 81 per cent.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Compassion in World Farming Exhibition

Mr. Morley: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he will consider an application for an exhibition relating to Compassion in World Farming to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall. [24646]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 17 June to Friday 21 June 1996.

Arts Council Exhibition

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the Arts Council to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall. [25449]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 15 July to Friday 19 July 1996.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what date his Department will make available (a) to employers and (b) to occupation pension scheme administrators, definite details of the Contributions Agency's NIRS 2—national insurance recording system—information system. [23158]

Mr. Heald: The administration of the Contributions Agency is a matter for Mrs. Faith Boardman, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from George Bertram to Mr. John Denham, dated 4 April 1996:

As the Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency is away from the office on annual leave, I have responsibility for answering questions about operational matters relating to the Agency and the National Insurance (NI) scheme in her absence.

I have been asked to reply to your question regarding the availability of details of the Agency's NIRS2 Information system to employers and occupational pension scheme administrators.

The NIRS2 information system will replace the current National Insurance Recording System (NIRS) and will be designed to ensure that current burdens on employers and Occupational Pensions Schemes are decreased. The first details of the new system will appear in the information pack issued to Employers starting in February 1997.

Details of the contracted our arrangements from 6 April 1997 will be issued in draft shortly, with final guidance to be issued to Occupational Pension Schemes in the Autumn.

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to explain the position.

Industrial Injuries Benefit

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many adjudicating medical decisions awarding industrial injuries disablement benefit have been made; and how many reviews of existing benefits have been instigated at the request of the Benefits Agency; [23765]

(2) how many applications for industrial injuries disablement benefit are outstanding; what is the waiting time for processing them; and what is the total value of the payments currently suspended, subject to review. [23766]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of industrial injuries disablement benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will reply to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Ursula Brennan to Ms Joan Walley, dated 3 April 1996:

As Peter Mathison is on leave at present, the Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many adjudicating medical decisions awarding Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit (IIDB) have been made; how many reviews of existing benefits have been instigated at the request of the Benefits Agency; how many applications for IIDB are outstanding; what is the waiting time for processing them; and what is the total value of the payments currently suspended, subject to review.

The number of adjudicating medical decisions in the period 1 March 1995 to 29 February 1996 was 24,467, the latest information available.

Information about the number of reviews of existing benefit instigated at the request of the Benefits Agency is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The number of claims outstanding at the end of February 1996, was 25,813. These were made up of 10,253 claims in respect of industrial accidents and 15,560 claims in respect of prescribed diseases.

Annex A gives details of the current claims clearance targets.

Information on the number of outstanding applications and the number of cases where payment is currently suspended subject to review is unavailable and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Annex A

	Target set for 1995–96	Target achieved 1 April 1995 to 29 February 1996
Industrial Accidents	60 per cent. in 70 days	62.6 per cent. in 70 days
	90 per cent. in 150 days	92.4 per cent. in 150 days
Prescribed Diseases	63 per cent. in 100 days	73 per cent. in 100 days
	90 per cent. in 200 days	94.5 per cent. in 200 days

These figures are provisional and subject to change.

Severe Hardship Payments

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the number of young people claiming severe hardship payments currently (a) nationally, (b) in London, (c) in Waltham Forest, (d) in Redbridge and (e) in Leyton. [24137]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ursula Brennan to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 3 April 1996:

As Peter Mathison is on leave at present, the Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking what are the number of young people claiming severe hardship payments currently (a) nationally, (b) in London, (c) in Waltham Forest, (d) in Redbridge and (e) in Leyton.

The information is not available in the form requested. Statistics are not kept for specific geographical areas, but for Benefits Agency (BA) Districts.

The number of young people who claimed severe hardship in November 1995 nationally, England, Scotland and Wales, was 9977. The number claiming in the BA Districts which include the London postal area was 571. However this will include some claims from people living outside London, see Annex. The number claiming from Lea Roding District was 60. The Lea Roding District comprises of Ilford, Leytonstone and Walthamstow offices, which includes Waltham Forest, Redbridge and Leyton. These figures are provisional and may be subject to change.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people (a) had social security benefits withdrawn and (b) were ruled ineligible for such benefits due to the changes in social security regulations for asylum seekers, in the first four weeks following implementation of the regulations. [24422]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. In the four weeks beginning 4 March, the Benefits Agency was notified by the Home Office of 702 negative decisions on asylum status involving social security benefit claims.

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security who will be responsible for the funding of free school meals to the children of asylum seekers who would hitherto have qualified for means-tested state benefits. [24977]

Mr. Evans: Free school meals remain available only to those pupils whose parents are in receipt of income support.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the (a) original and (b) revised target dates for the announcement of decisions on PFI deals for his Department's site changes in Tyne and Wear; and if he will give the reasons for the change in target dates. [23700]

Mr. Heald: The administration of the Contributions Agency is a matter for Mrs. Faith Boardman, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter for George Bertram to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 4 April 1996:

As the Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency is away from the office on annual leave, I have responsibility for answering questions about administration matters relating to the Agency in her absence.

I have been asked to reply to your question regarding the target dates for the announcement of decisions on PFI deals for Agency's site changes in Tyne and Wear.

The original date for making an announcement of the decision on the Newcastle Estate Development PFI was April 1996. The revised date for making an announcement is now June 1996.

The change in the target date is to allow the opportunity for clarification of parts of each company's Best and Final offer to be sought. In consultation with our advisors, central departments, the Private Finance Panel Executive and the bidders, the evaluation process has been adjourned. The Newcastle Estate project is a complex one with many facets which need to be addressed. As a pathfinder project within PFI it is breaking new ground and establishing guidelines for future projects.

I am confident that this additional information will enable the best decision to be made.

Money Purchase Pensions

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what kind of pension guarantees a money purchase pension scheme offers the employee; and if he will make a statement. [24822]

Mr. Heald: Occupational money purchase pension schemes do not offer pension guarantees. Contributions to the scheme by employees and members are invested in a fund, the value of which is used either to provide a pension or to purchase an annuity from an insurance company on retirement. The rate of pension is therefore dependant on the level of contributions made, the investment performance of the resulting fund and, where an annuity is purchased, the prevailing annuity rates at the time of retirement.

With money purchase schemes which are contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme, SERPS, employers must guarantee to make contributions which at least equal the value of the reduction in national insurance contributions that they and their employees enjoy.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what advice he has made available to employers and unions since 1988 about the quality of a good money purchase scheme; and what steps he has taken to ensure such schemes have a level of predictability. [24820]

Mr. Heald: The Department produced two guides in 1988, the year in which employers were first able to set up money purchase schemes contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme, SERPS. Both the NP41, "New Pension Choices for Employees" and the NP42, "New Pension Choices for Employers" explain how money purchase schemes work, the difference between contracted-out money purchase, COMP, and salary-related pension schemes, the factors which affect the eventual rate of pension payable and the legal requirements which employers have to satisfy to be able to establish such schemes.

From April 1997, the Government are introducing age-related rebates for COMP schemes. The rebates are designed to ensure that the value of the final pension reflects more closely the value of the benefit forgone by contracting out of SERPS.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to ensure that older employees will not be disadvantaged if their employer switches from a salary scheme to a money purchase scheme; and if the measures will be retrospective to 1988. [24821]

Mr. Heald: Employers set up occupational pension schemes voluntarily and the decision to switch from one type of provision to another is a matter for them. Where an occupational scheme is contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme, SERPS, certain specific conditions have to be met if the nature of the provision is altered—the accrued rights of all members have to be secured, interested parties such as trades unions have to be consulted and members must be kept fully informed about the change. Scheme members in such situations should consider seeking independent financial advice on their pension position.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the proportion of occupational pension schemes that are currently money purchase schemes; and what is the approximate number of employees covered by such schemes. [24819]

Mr. Heald: In 1991, the latest year for which data[1] are available, it is estimated that 71 per cent. of occupational pension schemes[2], covering around 900,000 members, were arranged on a money purchase basis[3].

The figures are based on information from both contracted-in and contracted-out occupational schemes.

Notes:

[1] 1991 survey on occupational pension schemes by the Government Actuary's Department.

[2] This figure should be treated with a degree of uncertainty due to the limitations of the sampling method for small occupational schemes.

[3] This figure includes hybrid schemes where the main benefits are defined by the accumulation of the contributions paid.

Industrial Deafness

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of claimants awarded a five-year provisional disablement assessment for industrial deafness lose it after the initial five-year period; and what is the main reason given for discontinuing it. [24817]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not readily available in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The number of all re-assessments in respect of occupational deafness, including those following the initial five-year assessment, and those re-assessed to less than 20 per cent. for the latest years available, is set out in the table. In the case of occupational deafness, entitlement to industrial injuries disablement benefit ceases if the percentage assessment of disability is less than 20 per cent.

Occupational deafness re-assessments

Period	Number referred for re-assessment	Number re-assessed to less than 20 per cent.
1990	1,192	126
1991	1,169	145
1992	1,098	182
1993	1,136	177
1994	896	122

Based on 100 per cent. count of cases.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the proportion of occupational pension schemes that are currently money purchase schemes; and what is the approximate number of employees covered by such schemes. [24819]

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if people who were claiming unemployment benefit before 7 October will still be covered by the current part-time earnings rules during their period on transitional protection. [24793]

Mr. Roger Evans: Yes.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who failed the incapacity benefit all-work test have had their benefit reinstated on appeal. [25136]

Mr. Burt: Up to the end of February 1996, 2,111 claimants who had been found capable of work following the all-work test had the decision reversed on appeal.

Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what regulations have been made under section 45(5) of the Social Security (Contributions and Benefits)

Act 1992 defining the years to be disregarded in calculating the earnings-related component of the retirement pension; what further regulations he plans to make; and what categories of persons are affected by them. [25312]

Mr. Heald: No regulations have been made under section 45(5) of the Social Security (Contributions and Benefits) Act 1992. We made it clear in the White Paper "Equality in State Pension Age" that the regulations would be made at the appropriate time.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ensure that the relevant maintenance payments are made without any further delay to Mr. S. Sadler (CSA Reference PBU/JHR/1012755 177). [24302]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The Child Support Agency can pass on only payments of maintenance which have been made by an absent parent. The chief executive of the Child Support Agency, Miss Ann Chant, will write to the hon. Member separately detailing the enforcement action the agency has been taking and updating him on recent details of this case.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what new proposals he has to improve the Child Support Agency; and when he expects to present them to Parliament. [24837]

Mr. Mitchell: On 2 April, the Government published their response to the second report in the 1995–96 Session of the Social Security Committee and a report on a review of the good cause provisions of the Child Support Act 1995. These described a number of new measures which should improve aspects of the system.

In addition, I recently announced plans for the recruitment of an independent complaints examiner, improvements to the agency's compensation scheme and the introduction of interest payments on maintenance collected but not transferred promptly to the parent with care.

These measures build on major legislative changes introduced by the Child Support Act 1995. As the Government have consistently made clear, we keep all aspects of child support under close scrutiny and make changes whenever necessary.

Lone Parents

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to help lone parents to work. [24840]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Successive improvements in family credit have been designed to assist lone parents to take work. The reduction in the qualifying hours to 16, the introduction of a maintenance disregard, the introduction of help with child care costs in family credit and the other in-work benefits are measures of particular importance to lone parents. Around 200,000 lone parents have moved from income support to family credit since 1992.

From this month, the child care disregard in the in-work benefits has been increased from £40 to £60 a week. Out-of-school child care provision will be extended by a further 18,000 places on top of the nearly 60,000 generated in the last three years. The back-to-work bonus and the child maintenance bonus will be introduced in October 1996 and April 1997 respectively. They will encourage part-time work and provide opportunities to build up a tax-free lump sum on leaving benefit for work. Also in April 1997, a major new pilot will commence, providing training and employment opportunities to up to 25,000 lone parents.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many landlords in the last available financial year received direct payments of housing benefit totalling (a) more than £500,000, (b) between £250,000 and £500,000 and (c) between £100,000 and £250,000. [25382]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available centrally as housing benefit is administered by local authorities.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 22 February, Official Report, column 313, if he will provide the figures on housing benefit in London 1994–95. [25381]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the tables.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many compliance cost assessments were produced by his Department in 1995; and if he will place copies in the Library. [25271]

Mr. Roger Evans: In 1995, this Department produced 15 compliance cost assessments, copies of which are in the Library.

WALES

Drugs (Juveniles)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what budget was allocated by his Department for juvenile drug prevention education in 1994–95; and if he will make a statement; [24609]

(2) what initiatives his Department is taking to combat juvenile drug abuse in the current year; and if he will make a statement; [24611]

(3) what funds his Department is forecast to have allocated in 1995–96 for juvenile drug prevention education; and if he will make a statement. [25017]

Mr. Richards: Activity to combat drug misuse in Wales is undertaken by a variety of organisations, from both the statutory and voluntary sectors. Many of these are funded wholly or partly by the Welsh Office. It is not possible to identify separately either the amounts of expenditure or the activity which is specifically targeted at juvenile drug misuse. The new Welsh drug and alcohol strategy, which will be published soon, set out a comprehensive framework for tackling drug and alcohol misuse.

Listed Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many buildings which are listed as being of historical importance are currently being renovated in (a) Gwynedd, (b) Clwyd and (c) Wales; and if he will make a statement. [24605]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Under the Historic Buildings and Ancient Monuments Act 1953 and the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990, the Department gives grant for the repair of buildings of outstanding historic or architectural interest and for works which enhance conservation areas. The number of buildings currently being assisted under these provisions is:

Gwynedd: 51

Clwyd: 69

Wales: 353

The heritage lottery fund is currently contributing towards the cost of repairing 22 historic buildings in Wales, one each in Clwyd and Gwynedd.

Local authorities are empowered to grant aid historic buildings but information on this assistance is not held centrally, nor is information on buildings of historical importance which are being renovated without grant aid.

Schools (Grant-maintained Status)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schools in Wales applied for grant-maintained status in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24607]

Mr. Richards: None and one, respectively.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is (a) the standard admission number of each grant-maintained school and (b) the number of pupils which each of these schools plans to admit in September 1996. [25166]

Mr. Richards: The grant-maintained equivalent of the standard number in LEA schools is the approved admission number. This is set when a school is approved for grant-maintained status. The details are as follows:

School	Approved admissions number
Our Lady and St. Michael's RC Primary, Abergavenny	39
Ysgol Caergeiliog, Ynys Môn	21
Derwen Primary, Higher Kinnerton	30
Ysgol Pen-y-Bryn, Colwyn Bay	34
Ysgol Gynradd Llanerfyl, Welshpool	8
St. Cyres Comprehensive School, Penarth	270
Mary Immaculate RC High School, Cardiff	150
Stanwell Comprehensive School, Penarth	182
Ysgol Bryn Elian, Colwyn Bay	161
Eirias High School, Colwyn Bay	200
Ysgol Emrys ap Iwan, Abergele	220
St. Alban's RC Comprehensive School, Pontypool	116
Cwmcarn GM School, Cwmcarn	133
Brynmawr GM School, Brynmawr	127
Bishop Vaughan Catholic Comprehensive School, Swansea.	185
The Maelor School, Wrexham	92

Information on the number of pupils that each school plans to admit in September 1996 is not available centrally.

Departmental Publicity Campaigns

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure on publicity campaigns commissioned by his Department from 1 April 1995 to 1 March 1996; what was (a) the purpose and (b) the cost of each publicity campaign; and if he will make a statement. [24610]

Mr. Hague: Forecast outturn for overall publicity expenditure in 1995–96 is £1.7 million, made up of many individual publicity projects, details of which can be produced only at disproportionate cost. However, two areas of significant publicity expenditure were:

Promotion of Business Connect	187,000
Placing of public notices relating to trunk road and special road schemes	258,000

Snowdonia Mountain Rescue Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times Snowdonia mountain rescue services were called into action in 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24606]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not held by the Welsh Office.

School Buildings (Repair and Maintenance)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what amount was spent on repair and maintenance of school buildings (a) by each local education authority in Wales and (b) in Wales as a whole for each financial year since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [24616]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is given in the following table. Figures for 1995–96 are not yet available.

Gross current expenditure on repair and maintenance of local authority school buildings, fixed plant and grounds, at cash prices[1]

Housing and Care Report

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the report on "Crossing the Housing and Care Divide" by the Housing Corporation; if he will make it his policy to assist the elderly to remain in their own homes; and if he will make a statement. [24540]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government's community care policy recognises that people should be helped to continue to live in their existing housing where this is their preference and it is practicable and cost-effective for them to do so. Bringing together housing and social services within the new unitary authorities provides good opportunities for close working.

The Welsh Office already provides considerable help to older people through its support of home renovation grants, minor works grants, disabled facilities grants and care and repair agencies. We shall continue to provide such support under new measures in the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill.

British Coal Enterprise

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the effects on the terms of loans to small enterprises in Wales of the privatisation of British Coal Enterprise. [25004]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Existing loans made by British Coal Enterprise will be transferred to the new owners of the business funding activity as part of the sales process; their terms will not be affected by the sale. The terms of any new loans negotiated after the sale is concluded will be a matter for the parties to the loan.

Rural White Paper

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of "A Working Countryside for Wales: Wales Rural White Paper". [25294]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The cross-department team being set up to oversee the implementation of the White Paper will consider economic, social and environmental issues. It will include representatives of the Welsh Office environment division and the Countryside Council for Wales.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in "A Working Countryside for Wales: Wales Rural White Paper" were considered in the environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [25292]

(2) what environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by the Department of the Environment "A Working Countryside for Wales: Wales Rural White Paper" has been subject to; and if he will publish the appraisal; [25291]

(3) how "A Working Countryside for Wales: Wales Rural White Paper" was modified by the results of an environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [25293]

Mr. Jones: The White Paper represents a review of the full range of the Welsh Office's responsibilities which affect rural Wales. It was prepared in the light of the Government's policy of supporting sustainable development and protecting and conserving the environment, and is not itself susceptible to environmental appraisal, I am confident that the policies it sets out will separately and together improve the environment in rural Wales.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Small Businesses (Subsidised Loans)

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what projects the £29 million subsidised loan scheme for small businesses from the EU special support programme for peace and reconciliation will be spent. [24527]

Mr. Ancram: The interest relief subsidy scheme under the EU special support programme for peace and reconciliation is designed to encourage productive investment in industry, related services and tourism. As the scheme has only recently been launched and will be open to applications until 28 February 1997, it is not possible to indicate which projects will benefit.

Fair Employment

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights was commissioned to review the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989; what research reports SACHR has commissioned; how much he expects the review to cost; and when SACHR's report is due to be published. [24529]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: An undertaking was given to this House that there would be a full review of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989 after it had been operated for five years. In November 1994, I invited SACHR to assume responsibility for the review. Research projects commissioned by SACHR are as follows:

(i) Vacancies, access to employment and long-term unemployment: three case studies.

(ii) Specialist experience of FE legislation, the FEC and the FET: the experience of the Equality Forum.

(iii) A review of the impact of TSN on public expenditure patterns and policy making in Northern Ireland.

(iv) A review of the implementation and potential of PAFT.

(v) A review of local councils' economic development activities.

(vi) Long-term unemployment and the Community Work Programme in West Belfast.

(vii) The impact of public sector job losses on employment equality.

(viii) Public Attitudes to Fair Employment Issues; the Northern Ireland Social Attitudes Survey.

(ix) Complainants' experiences of, and attitudes towards, FE legislation, the FEC and the FET.

(x) A review of selected aspects of educational and training policy in Northern Ireland.

(xi) The FEC as a regulatory and enforcement agency, Dr. Hilary Metcalf, Policy Studies Institute.

(xii) A comparative review of 'fair employment'/equality of opportunity statutes and caselaw, affirmative action measures permitted adopted, in other jurisdictions, drawing comparisons with, and conclusions for, fair employment in Northern Ireland.

(xiii) A Review of practice and procedure in the FET.

(xiv) A critical review of the concept of 'fair participation'.

(xv) A review of 'the Merit Principle'.

(xvi) A paper reviewing FET case law.

(xvii) To provide a critical response to the papers produced by projects 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 ('the legal group') together with an overview of the issues raised by all of them.

(xviii) Change and continuity in the views of NI Political Parties and non-party organisation on employment equality issues and Fair Employment Legislation.

(xix) Employers' experiences of, and attitudes towards, FE legislation, the FEC and the FET.

The cost of the review is as follows: 1995–96—£422,000; 1996–97—£248,000.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many directions have been given under section 6 of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989. [25237]

Mr. Ancram: A total of 344 directions were given between 1 January 1992 and 31 December 1995.

Roman Catholic Men (Employment)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Roman Catholic men are of economically active age in Northern Ireland. [24530]

Sir John Wheeler: The 1991 census of population provides the most recent information on the total population of Northern Ireland by age, religion and economic activity. The number of Roman Catholic men recorded in the census as being of economically active age—16 to 64—was 175,283.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of men in Northern Ireland of economically active age are Roman Catholic. [24531]

Sir John Wheeler: The 1991 census of population provides the most recent information on the total population of Northern Ireland by age, religion and economic activity. The percentage of men in Northern Ireland of economically active age—16 to 64—recorded in the census as Roman Catholic was 36.5 per cent.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Roman Catholic men in Northern Ireland are in employment. [24532]

Sir John Wheeler: The 1991 census of population provides the most recent information on the total population of Northern Ireland by age, religion and economic activity. The number of Roman Catholic men in Northern Ireland recorded in the census as in employment was 100,584.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of the men in employment in Northern Ireland are Roman Catholic. [24533]

Sir John Wheeler: The 1991 census of population provides the most recent information on the total population of Northern Ireland by age, religion and economic activity. The proportion of men in employment in Northern Ireland recorded in the census as Roman Catholic was 31.2 per cent.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Roman Catholic men are employed by (a) the Royal Ulster Constabulary and (b) the Army. [24534]

Sir John Wheeler: The numbers of men serving in the Royal Ulster Constabulary at 1 April 1996 who are perceived to be from the Roman Catholic community are:

	Number
Regulars	602
Full-time reserve	187
Part-time reserve	39
Total	828

Information relating to employment by the Army is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of the men employed by (a) the Royal Ulster Constaulary and (b) the Army are Roman Catholic. [24535]

Sir John Wheeler: The proportion of men serving in the Royal Ulster Constabulary at 1 April 1996 who are perceived to be from the Roman Catholic community is:

	Percentage
Regulars	8.0
Full-time reserve	6.4
Part-time reserve	3.9
Total	7.2

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Roman Catholic men would be employed in (a) the Royal Ulster Constabulary and (b) the Army if the number employed were in proportion to the percentage of men of economically active age in Northern Ireland who are Roman Catholic. [24536]

Sir John Wheeler: If the number of Roman Catholic men in the RUC were similar to the percentage of Roman Catholic men who are economically active—36.5 per cent.—there would be approximately 2,751 Roman Catholic men in the regulars and 1,067 in the full-time reserve.

Information relating to the Army is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fewer Roman Catholic men are employed in Northern Ireland than would be the case if the number employed were in exact proportion to the percentage of men of economically active age in Northern Ireland who are Roman Catholic. [24537]

Sir John Wheeler: The 1991 census of population provides the most recent information on the total population of Northern Ireland by age, religion and economic activity. The number of Roman Catholic men of economically active age in employment in Northern Ireland was 100,584. This is 17,054 fewer than if the number employed were in exact proportion to the percentage of men of economically active age in Northern Ireland recorded as Roman Catholic.

Fair Employment Tribunal

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases brought by individuals have been dismissed by the fair employment tribunal since January 1990. [25234]

Mr. Ancram: A total of 159 complaints brought by individuals have been dismissed by the fair employment tribunal during the period 1 January 1990 to 31 March 1996.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the cases heard by the fair employment tribunal were (a) individual cases of alleged discrimination, (b) appeals by employers to the tribunal and (c) applications by the commission for enforcement of undertakings. [25231]

Mr. Ancram: The fair employment tribunal heard 207 complaints between 1 January 1990 and 31 March 1996. All involved individual complaints of alleged discrimination and there were no appeals by employers to the tribunal or application by the commission for enforcement of undertakings.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases before the fair employment tribunal have been settled; and of these cases how many were settled on terms endorsed on counsel's brief since January 1990. [25233]

Mr. Ancram: During the period 1 January 1990 to 31 March 1996, 50 complaints were conciliated by the Labour Relations Agency and 1,122 complaints were withdrawn. It is not known how many of these complaints were settled on terms endorsed on counsel's brief.

Gas Licences

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on terms of licences being prepared by the Department for Economic Development for gas network development and supply of gas over that network indicting (a) what towns or districts are (i) to be included and (ii) to receive priority, (b) what measures are being taken not to prejudice network development and supply to a wider area and (c) what measures are being taken to promote network development and gas supply to the north-west; and what measures will be taken to encourage competition through the natural gas supply network on the same basis as in Great Britain. [24869]

Mr. Ancram: Premier Energy Suppliers Ltd. has sought a licence for the development of a natural gas industry in an area comprising Belfast, Lisburn, Newtownabbey, Carrickfergus, Larne, Holywood, Newtownards and Bangor and the Department has entered into discussions on the terms of such a licence. The roll-out of the new gas industry would be based on a development plan which has yet to be agreed.

The licence would provide for third party access to the main transmission pipeline and gas could be taken through the licensed area to other areas.

The introduction of natural gas to the north-west, or any other area of Northern Ireland, would be undertaken by the private sector on the basis of commercial viability.

The Department's objective is the introduction of competition in gas supply at the earliest possible stage. Periods of exclusivity may, however, be required given the very significant commercial risks associated with the development of a new gas industry.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases before industrial tribunals in Northern Ireland were settled since January 1990; and of these how many cases were settled on terms endorsed on counsel's brief. [24991]

Mr. Ancram: During the period 1 January 1990 to 31 March 1996, a total of 4,419 complaints to industrial tribunals were conciliated by the Labour Relations Agency and 8,839 complaints were withdrawn. It is not known how many of these complaints were settled on terms endorsed on counsel's brief.

Peace Process

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the cost of the peace process broken down into costs of travel, accommodation, printing and ministerial and civil service time. [25259]

Mr. Ancram: It is not possible to provide the detailed information in the form requested.

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in preparation for elections leading to all-party negotiations on 10 June. [25543]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have today published the draft of a Northern Ireland (Entry into Negotiations, Etc.) Bill, to be introduced in the House tomorrow. In parallel, following consultations with the political parties on the proposals in the consultation paper of 15 March, I have published as Command Paper 3232 the best judgment of the British and Irish Governments on the most suitable and broadly acceptable ground rules for the negotiations starting on 10 June 1996.

TRANSPORT

Drivers' Hours (Cumbria)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons EU drivers' hours regulations now apply to some bus services in Cumbria hitherto governed by United Kingdom drivers' hours regulations. [23341]

Mr. Norris: UK rules apply to services less than 50 km long; the EU drivers' hours rules apply to regular services longer than 50 km using vehicles with 18 or more seats.

Oil Pollution (Sea Empress Incident)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what have been the total costs incurred to date by the marine pollution control unit in clean-up operations following the Sea Empress incident; and what has been the cost of (a) the charter of oil skimming and recovery vessels, (b) the hire of road tankers for collected oil, (c) aerial spraying operations, (d) beach cleaning operations and (e) other related activities; [23287]

(2) what estimate he has made of the likely final total costs to be incurred by the marine pollution control unit in all clean-up operations and related activities following the Sea Empress incident. [23288]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Ms Joan Walley, dated 16 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about MPCU costs following the Sea Empress incident.

PQ 127C

The final cost of the operation is estimated to be between £7m and £9m. To date the MPCU have received invoices totalling just over £3m.

PQ 137C

(a) The charter of oil skimming and recovery vessels invoiced to date, including manpower and the hire of equipment, is £1,140,040. There are still a number of invoices for vessel charter outstanding.

(b) The hire of road tankers for collected oil was organised through the local oil industry and local authority roads and highways departments. Information on these costs is not currently available.

(c) Aerial spraying and surveillance costs amount to £387,796 for aircraft and £317,796 for mobilising and transporting dispersant and for purchasing replacement dispersant.

(d) Beach cleaning operations are still ongoing in a number of locations. To date the MPCU has been invoiced for £1,094,356.

(e) Scientific support costs, car hire, overtime, travel and subsistence and minor miscellaneous items amount to £67,429.

EDS Software

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the savings to date to his Department and his Department's agencies from out-sourcing arrangements made with the EDS software computer system; what assessment he has made of the equivalent costs of carrying out this work in-house; and if he will make a statement. [24361]

Mr. Norris: At the time the contracts were awarded, the Department of Transport forecast that it would make savings of at least 25 per cent. The savings realised have been in line with this forecast.

Shipping Companies (Assistance)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the shipping companies which have received assistance under (a) the Government assistance for training scheme and (b) the development of certificated sectors scheme in the past 12 months; and if he will provide a breakdown of the level of the assistance given to each company. [24476]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 16 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about the amount of assistance received by shipping companies under the Government Assistance for Training (GAFT) and Development of Certificated Seafarers (DOCS) Schemes in the last 12 months, as the responsibility of administering the schemes lies with the Marine Safety Agency (MSA).

May I first explain that assistance under the GAFT scheme, currently £55 per week, is not payable to shipping companies but to eligible trainees via "Managing Agents". The total assistance paid in the last 12 months amounted to £3.22 million of which £151,360 was paid to Managing Agents to cover administrative costs, at the rate of £110 per annum for each trainee.

As regards DOCS, financial assistance is paid to eligible companies against the cost of each junior officer undergoing training for a second certificate of competency. The grant of £16 per training day for each trainee, amounted to £1,518,436 in the last 12 months. A breakdown of payments to companies is attached at Annex A.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will identify the climbing company contracted to clear tree-bound protestors from the route of the Newbury bypass; and what are the forecast payments to this company. [24792]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Mike Gapes, dated 16 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the climbing company contracted to clear tree bound protestors from the route of the Newbury Bypass and the forecast costs of the work.

I understand from the Deputy Sheriff of the Royal County of Berkshire that he has used expert climbers from two companies: Nathan & Company (Sheriffs Officers) Ltd and Richard Turner Ltd.

We expect the cost to be around £600,000 in total.

Rail Privatisation

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what occasions he has held discussions with the franchising director about the timing of the franchising programmes; and if he will make a statement. [24765]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State meets regularly with the franchising director to discuss franchising issues including the timing of the franchising programme. He last met the franchising director on 26 March.

The franchising programme is gaining momentum. Five franchises have been awarded: South West Trains, Great Western, InterCity East Coast, Gatwick Express and Network SouthCentral. The franchising director is in the final stages of negotiating franchise awards for Midland Main Line. LTS Rail has been re-tendered and the franchising director will award the franchise as soon as practicable. Initial bids were received for Chiltern and South Eastern on 22 March. Initial bids were invited for South Wales and West and Cardiff on 27 March and are to be received by 6 June. The franchising director will issue invitations to tender for Anglia and Thames as soon as practicable. Further franchises are being developed and progress will be announced by the franchising director in due course.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to take a decision on the proportion of Railtrack to be sold in the forthcoming flotation; and if he will make a statement. [25436]

Mr. Watts: We intend a sale of substantially all of the Government's shares in Railtrack, subject to reserving shares to satisfy share bonus entitlements.

Railtrack (Asset Maintenance)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list studies commissioned by his Department into the costs of maintenance of Railtrack's assets over the next 10 years; and if he will indicate their conclusions. [24767]

Mr. Watts: My Department has not commissioned any such studies.

Railtrack (Track Access Performance)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much compensation has been paid by train operating companies to passengers for delays attributable to Railtrack since introduction of the track access performance monitoring regime. [24550]

Mr. Watts: The track access performance regime sets out compensation arrangements between Railtrack and train operators. It is not concerned with payments to passengers for late trains, which are made under operators' passenger charters.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the track access performance monitoring regime for Railtrack was introduced; and if he will make a statement. [24568]

Mr. Watts: Live running of the track access performance regime started on 10 December 1995.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amount in supplementary track access charges has been paid by train operating companies and freight operating companies to cover the cost of compensation under the track access performance monitoring regime. [24551]

Mr. Watts: In 1995–96, passenger TOCs paid to Railtrack a supplementary access charge of £75 million. This charge was agreed between BR and Railtrack following a consultation exercise by the Rail Regulator.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much compensation has been paid to train operating companies and freight operating companies by Railtrack under the track access performance monitoring regime since its inception. [24549]

Mr. Watts: This is a commercial matter between Railtrack and the companies concerned.

Tolls (Disabled People)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements he has made for motorists who are registered as disabled in contracts for the operation of roads and bridges where tolls are charged. [24796]

Mr. Watts: All the Acts under which Government have agreed concessions for the operation of tolled roads and bridges require exemptions from tolls for the disabled.

Helicopter Search and Rescue Services

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many sorties have been flown in the last year by the Coastguard helicopter based at Lee-on-Solent. [24572]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Peter Viggers, dated 16 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of sorties flown by the Coastguard helicopter at Lee-on-Solent.

During 1995 the Coastguard helicopter based at Lee-on-Solent was tasked on 258 occasions. Since 1 January 1996 up to and including 31 March 1996 the aircraft has been tasked on 31 occasions.

Road Contracts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the design, build, finance and operate road contracts he expects to have let by April 1997, indicating for each the construction, non-maintenance projects he expects to have begun within these contracts by April 1997. [24775]

Mr. Watts: To date, four design, build, finance and operate projects have been let to the private sector:

A69 Carlisle to Newcastle DBFO Project, which includes the A69 Haltwhistle bypass scheme;

M1–A1 Yorkshire link DBFO project, which includes the M1–A1 link road: Lofthouse to Bramham scheme;

A1(M) Alconbury to Peterborough DBFO project, which includes the A1(M) Alconbury to Peterborough improvement scheme;

A419/A417 Swindon to Gloucester DBFO project, which includes the A419–A417 Cirencester and Stratton bypass scheme, A417 north of Stratton to Nettleton improvement scheme and A419 Latton bypass scheme.

Construction on these six schemes within the four DBFO projects will start in the 1996–97 construction season.

A further four DBFO projects remain on course to be let by the late spring. Contracts for these projects are currently being negotiated with private companies. It is reasonable to expect that construction of the schemes encompassed by these four projects will have begun by April 1997, assuming that negotiations deliver bids which are good value for money. These projects are:

A168–A19 Dishforth to Tyne tunnel DBFO project, which includes the A19 Norton to Parkway interchange improvement scheme;

A30–A35 Exeter to Bere Regis DBFO Project, which includes the A30 Honiton to Exeter improvement scheme and A25 Tolpuddle to Puddletown bypass scheme;

A50–A564 Stoke to Derby link DBFO project, which includes the A564 Doveridge bypass scheme;

M40 Junctions 1 to 15 DBFO project, which includes the M40 junction 1A to 3 widening scheme.

Derailment (Wakefield)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the derailment of a goods train on 9 March at Healey Mills yard, Wakefield. [24769]

Mr. Watts: On Saturday 9 March 1996, three wagons of a goods train were derailed in the marshalling yard at Healey Mills near Wakefield. At the time of the derailment the train was moving very slowly. There was no danger to other trains and no one was injured.

Broken and Cracked Rails

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent changes have occurred in procedures for dealing with broken and cracked rails identified by the ultrasonic test train. [24766]

Mr. Watts: I am informed by Railtrack that there have been no recent changes in procedures for dealing with broken and cracked rails.

British Transport Police

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if franchise agreements for rail operations will stipulate (a) the mandatory use of the British Transport police and (b) an obligation for operators to contribute to the costs of this service. [24764]

Mr. Watts: The British Transport police will continue, as a unified public force, to be responsible for policing Britain's rail network. Police services will be provided to all licensed railway operators, who will be obliged, through licence conditions, to enter into agreements with the British Transport police to use and pay for all law and order functions that require the use of professional police resources.

Railways (Passenger Complaints)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the average cost of dealing with a passenger complaint under the current railway system; and what was the equivalent cost (a) one, (b) two and (c) three years ago. [24547]

Mr. Watts: Figures on the average cost of answering customer complaints about railway services are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Derailments (Rugby)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many freight train derailments have taken place in Rugby during the last 12 months. [24768]

Mr. Watts: One freight train derailment at Rugby has been reported to the Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate during the last 12 months.

Railcard Information

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what safeguards are in place to ensure that information about railcard holders and railcard promotional schemes is not used by train operating companies that run bus and coach services to target and undercut other train operating companies' services with bus and coach services. [25439]

Mr. Watts: Arrangements between train operating companies prohibit the information on railcard databases being used in connection with the development of any product operating as an alternative to the railcard.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information is available to privatised train operating companies regarding the personal details of railcard holders. [25435]

Mr. Watts: The inter-operator agreements governing the railcards provide for all operators to have access to any information held on a railcard database. Information held on railcard databases is protected under the Data Protection Act 1984.

Railway Accident (Aisgill)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the inquest will take place into the fatal railway accident at Aisgill on 31 January 1995. [25438]

Mr. Watts: An inquest into the railway accident at Aisgill is due to be held by the coroner for the Carlisle area assisted by an inspecting officer of railways. Setting a date for the inquest is a matter for the coroner. The inspector's report, under section 8 of the Regulation of Railways Act 1871, will be made public.

Railtrack (Safety Offences)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) improvements notices and (b) prosecutions have been initiated by the Health and Safety Executive against Railtrack since 1 April 1994. [25437]

Mr. Watts: Since 1 April 1994, the Health and Safety Executive has initiated 18 improvement notices and one prosecution against Railtrack.

Crash Barriers

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the places where crash cushions have been installed in the last 12 months. [25419]

Mr. Watts: No crash cushions have been installed on the trunk road network in the last 12 months. Information on roads which are the responsibility of other highways authorities is not comprehensively available.

Rail Services (Disabled Access)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of reduced staffing levels at railway stations on disabled access to train services. [25482]

Mr. Watts: None. The reduction of staffing levels at stations is a matter for individual station operators. All station operators are required to have regard to the needs of people with disabilities as a condition of being granted a licence to operate.

The Department has carried out research recently into ways of enabling disabled people to travel safely to and from unstaffed stations. Among the options considered, in consultation with disabled people, were information systems and tactile and audible signals to help visually impaired people and stair lifts to provide access between platforms for people with walking difficulty. Other equipment, such as train-mounted ramps, has been used successfully at unstaffed stations by train operating companies.

Traffic Congestion

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of (a) the percentage increase in traffic on roads by the year 2005 and (b) the cost of consequent delays and inefficiencies. [25221]

Mr. Watts: The Department's most recent forecasts show road traffic in 2005 between 16 per cent. and 26 per cent. higher than in 1996.

The Department does not make estimates of the national cost of delays and inefficiencies. These costs at a national level are very difficult concepts to pin down. Others have made estimates of the UK cost of congestion on the basis of work carried out by the Organisation for Economic Congestion and Development some six years ago. However, the method used contains a number of gross simplifications and the results are consequently unreliable.

Our own assessments focus on the appraisal of individual transport projects. They start from the baseline of current conditions and estimate the reduction in costs in the area concerned that can be achieved by implementing the project. These estimates are backed up by an on-going extensive programme of research on methodology.

Overcrowded Trains (Safety)

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 26 March, Official Report, columns 543–44, what assessment was made by the Health and Safety Executive of the additional time an overcrowded train will take to evacuate in the event of an accident. [25246]

Mr. Watts: The time taken to evacuate a train will depend on the type of accident and its location. This is particularly relevant when an accident occurs on electrified lines or where there are trains running on adjacent lines.

In all incidents other than fires, it is preferable that passengers do not attempt to leave the train until directed to do so by railway staff or the emergency services. In such circumstances, crowded trains do not present a hazard for passenger safety.

Marine Pollution

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those substances in respect of which, when spilled at sea, compensation for damage can be claimed from the international oil pollution compensation fund. [25328]

Mr. Norris: Under the terms of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, compensation is available from the international oil pollution compensation fund for pollution damage caused as a result of spills of "persistent hydrocarbon mineral oil" when carried as cargo at sea, or spills of bunker oil from laden tankers. A comprehensive list of substances which fall within this definition is not readily available, but it does include orimulsion.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if damage caused by a spillage at sea of orimulsion is covered by the international oil pollution compensation fund. [25327]

Mr. Norris: Yes.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to produce a compliance cost assessment for the forthcoming White Paper on transport policy; and if it will be publicly available. [25278]

Sir George Young: It is the Department's policy to produce compliance cost assessments for all regulatory proposals which have an impact on business, voluntary organisations and charities. Copies of all assessments are sent to the Libraries of both Houses and are available, on request, from this Department.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many compliance cost assessments were produced by his Department in 1995; and if he will place copies of them in the Library. [25277]

Mr. Norris: This Department produced 17 compliance cost assessments for new regulations last year. In common with other Government Departments, copies of cost assessments are placed in the House Libraries.

Bull Bars

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of bull bars in Britain he estimates will be banned under the present proposed amendment to the European external projection directive now being considered by the Commission; and what vehicles will be included. [24834]

Mr. Norris: The present proposed amendment to the European external projections directive will apply to the type approval of new cars, including car-type four-wheel drive vehicles, and to bull bars for these vehicles which are sold separately. The effect would be to allow a ban of all bull bars with a rigid metal surface for these vehicles.

Millennium Exhibition

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to ensure there are adequate facilities for river traffic in connection with the millennium exhibition at Greenwich. [25005]

Mr. Norris: It is anticipated that the majority of visitors would use means of transport other than the river and would therefore benefit from the improvements in transport capacity outlined in the answer which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Romford (Sir M. Neubert) on 11 March, Official Report, columns 470–71. The development of a river service to the millennium exhibition is a matter for the private sector in conjunctions with the consortium running the exhibition, but the Government would consider the case for contributing to the provision or upgrading of necessary piers in that connection.

London Underground

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the operation by a separate organisation of (a) telecommunications, (b) power supply and transmission, (c) ticketing, (d) train maintenance, (e) train operating, (f) station management including staffing, (g) railway signalling and (h) track maintenance and renewal on the London Underground. [25512]

Mr. Norris: Whether services are best provided in-house or by contractors is a matter for London Underground to decide. It is currently holding competitions under the private finance initiative for projects involving telecommunications, electricity generation and distribution, and ticketing and revenue collection. Some train and track maintenance work is already carried out by contractors.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what investigations are being made into the power failure on the London Underground system on 6 April; who is conducting these investigations; to whom they will report; what findings will be published; and when. [25509]

Mr. Norris: London Underground Ltd. staff are carrying out an investigation into the power failure on the underground on 6 April and the lessons to be learned. The investigation is under the direction of Denis Tunnicliffe, LUL's managing director, and its report will be made to the board of London Transport. The report is expected to be completed in early May. Publication of its findings would be a matter for the LT board.

Bus Routes (London)

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers London borough councils have to determine (a) whether London Transport will be permitted to run single or double-decker bus routes and (b) to site bus stops in (i) trunk roads and (ii) local roads. [25383]

Mr. Norris: London boroughs have powers to make orders to regulate traffic, including buses, on roads for which they are the highway authority. The siting of stops is a matter for London Transport and either the appropriate borough in the case of local roads, or the Traffic Director for London in the case of stops on the red route network—which includes all trunk roads.

Silvertown to Woolwich Rail Tunnel

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the bodies represented on a project team to investigate engineering, environmental and financial aspects of the proposed Silvertown to Woolwich rail tunnel; who is responsible for its chairing and administration; to whom it will report; what bodies will need to give consent to any recommendations of the project team; and what is the planned timetable for its operation and subsequent activities. [24577]

Mr. Norris: British Rail, Railtrack, London Transport and the London Docklands development corporation are jointly undertaking a study into the feasibility of the scheme for a rail tunnel between Silvertown and Woolwich. It is hoped that the results of the study will be put to me soon, with a view to a subsequent public report. I shall consider their recommendations carefully, especially with regard to the scope for private finance, the case for and affordability of any public funding, and whether powers should be sought. There is, as yet, no firm timetable.

SCOTLAND

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department will accept an average of the annual amount of hours' study undertaken, calculated over the number of weeks of the course, as a weekly figure when deciding whether students are part time for the purposes of the jobseeker's allowance. [24811]

Mr. Forth: The jobseeker's allowance regulations provide that a person who undertakes a course funded or part-funded by the Further Education Funding Council for Wales will be considered to be a part-time student if a document signed on behalf of the establishment which is funded by the FEFC for Wales for the delivery of the course says that the course involves 16 guided learning hours, or less, a week.

In the case of courses funded by the Secretary of State for Scotland at a college of further education, a student will be considered to be part time if a document signed on behalf of the college says that the course involves 16 hours or less a week of classroom or workshop-based programmed learning under the direct guidance of teaching staff; or 21 hours or less a week, made up of 16 hours or less of classroom or workshop-based programme learning under the direct guidance of teaching staff and additional hours using structured learning packages with the support of teaching staff.

In both cases, the Employment Service will accept these documents as evidence of whether or not a person is a part-time student. In the case of courses funded by the FEFC for Wales, the number of hours per week will be calculated on the basis of a weekly average of the number of guided learning hours for the course. In the case of courses funded by the Secretary of State for Scotland at a college of further education, the number of hours of study per week will be calculated in the same way.

Housing Revenue Account (Borrowing)

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of borrowing consent for the housing revenues account capital budget of each local authority in (b) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [24612]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is set out in the table.

Local authority housing capital allocations: 1995–96 and 1996–97 borrowing consent

Housing revenue account

Authority	Borrowing consent £ million
1995–96

Road Congestion

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish maps showing forecasts of future road congestion for Scotland on the same basis as those published for England. [25178]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In 1992, the Government published the document "Roads, Traffic and Safety 1992", which included a summary of the findings of the Scottish Office's then recently completed trunk and key principal road network review.

This review included a level of service analysis of existing and forecast future road congestion for Scotland. Figures 3.5a and 3.5b on page 14 of "Roads, Traffic and Safety 1992" are maps illustrating the level of service analyses for 1990, and for 2010 assuming high national road traffic forecasts. A copy of the document is in the Member's Library.

Chess

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the amount of public expenditure on chess in Scotland during the current year and during each of the five previous years. [25189]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Scottish Chess Association has been offered a grant of £7,850 to assist with the cost in the current financial year of maintaining its headquarters operation. The information set out in the table details the financial assistance provided in each of the five previous years:

Year	Headquarters grant £
1991–92	6,500
1992–93	11,000
1993–94	7,500
1994–95	8,800
1995–96	7,850

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy in respect of the separate funding arrangement administered by the Scottish Office Education Department to the Scottish Chess Association. [25190]

Mr. Robertson: The Scottish Office Education and Industry Department provides grant funding to the Scottish Chess Association to assist with the cost of operating its headquarters administration. Grant is paid through a scheme which assists national voluntary organisations in the community education field in terms of the Further Education (Approved Associations) (Scotland) Grant Regulations 1989. Grant support to SCA takes into account costs of promoting the development of chess amongst young people particularly through schools.

Local Government Reform

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the method of calculating the capital expenditure allocation for 1996–97 for the new unitary authorities in Scotland. [25359]

Mr. Kynoch: Capital allocations for the new unitary authorities have been determined partly by formula and partly following consideration of authoritiess' financial plans and annual policy statements. The new councils will also receive an allocation to cover expenditure they incur as a result of legal commitments entered into by their predecessors.

Council Tax

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the costs (a) in cash terms and (b) at current prices of (i) introducing the community charge in Scotland and (ii) introducing the council tax in Scotland. [25420]

Mr. Kynoch: The Scottish Office provided additional capital allocations amounting to £21 million for the introduction of the community charge and additional provision of £24 million within the 1992–93 local government finance settlement for the introduction of the council tax. These are cash figures, and equate to £37.7 million and £25.8 million respectively at current prices. Local authorities expenditure returns, however, indicate that they spent only £7.3 million—cash—or £7.9 million—current prices—of the £24 million in preparation for the council tax in 1992–93.

Fatal Accident Inquiries

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state for each year since 1976 the number of instances where there has been a death to which section 1 of the Fatal Accidents and Sudden Deaths Inquiry (Scotland) Act 1976 applies, and the next of kin has requested a fatal accident inquiry and such inquiry has been (a) refused and (b) held; and if he will take steps to ensure that where under the Fatal Accidents and Sudden

Deaths Inquiry (Scotland) Act 1976 a fatal accident inquiry is not held contrary to the wishes of the next of kin, steps are taken to explain the reason for such decision to the next of kin with particular reference to the use of a private interview. [25427]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate informs me that the information requested concerning the number of death cases which fall into the categories referred to by the hon. Member is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I understand from the Lord Advocate that procurators fiscal, where appropriate, will interview relatives of the deceased to ascertain whether there is any wish for a fatal accident inquiry to be held. In the course of the interview, the procurator fiscal will explain the public inquiry system and the criteria for holding inquiries. The interview also gives the next of kin the opportunity to obtain information from the procurator fiscal about the cause and circumstances of the death. If it is decided not to hold a fatal accident inquiry, this decision will be communicated to the next of kin.

Right to Buy

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will amend the Tenants' Rights etc. (Scotland) Act 1980 so that tenants of council houses whose titles disclose rights of pre-emption to superiors or prohibitions against sub-division are entitled to the benefit of the right to buy. [25429]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The interaction between a tenant's right to buy under the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987, which consolidated earlier legislation, and rights of pre-emption by feudal superiors is at present the subject of an appeal to the House of Lords. It would be inappropriate to amend the legislation in advance of the outcome of the appeal.

Meanwhile, it remains the Government's view that local authorities are free to remove any such obstacle to the exercising of the right to buy by negotiating a waiver of any pre-emption rights with the feudal superior or by applying to the Lands Tribunal for Scotland under section 1 of the Conveyancing and Feudal Reform (Scotland) Act 1970.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations have been received and from whom that the Tenants' Rights etc. (Scotland) Act 1980 should be amended in order to ensure tenants have a statutory right to purchase properties whose titles contain rights of pre-emption and prohibition against sub division. [25430]

Mr. Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 19 October 1995, Official Report, column 321. No further representations have been received.

Education for Sustainable Development Group

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) recommendations; (b) public consultations and (c) public statements have been made by the education for sustainable development group within the Scottish Office since its establishment in September 1995; and if he will provide details. [25423]

Mr. Kynoch: In "A Scottish Strategy for Environmental Education", published in June 1995, the Secretary of State asked his advisory group on sustainable development, chaired by Sir Charles Fraser, to take on a national role in environmental education as part of its wider programme on sustainable development. It established a sub-group on education for sustainable development with a remit to review and report on education for sustainable development and the environment, with particular regard to:

- promoting a strategic approach and assessing its effectiveness;
- suggesting priorities for resource allocation;
- focusing attention on concerns within sustainable development, in which education has a major influence;
- suggesting research and monitoring which might underpin the setting of targets; and
- making recommendations to the advisory group on sustainable development.

The sub-group, chaired by Professor Bart McGettrick, has met on four occasions, beginning on 31 July 1995, and will shortly publish its first action plan setting out its planned programme of activity.

Private Landed Estates

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what mechanisms are in place for monitoring the use of publicly funded (a) grants and (b) loans to private landed estates in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [25465]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: There are no separate mechanisms for monitoring the use of publicly funded assistance to private estates in Scotland. Each grant or loan scheme includes its own mechanism for monitoring, and the conditions attaching to the monitoring exercise are applied to all recipients of assistance irrespective of their land tenure status.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those land owners known to the Scottish Office at the present time who own estates in Scotland of over 500 acres, and express their total land holding as a percentage of the total land area of the country; and if he will make a statement. [25514]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not available for the whole of Scotland. Information on title to land over two hectares which has been registered on the land register is available from the Registers of Scotland executive agency.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the publicly funded (a) grants and (b) loans received by the Atholl estate since 1979; what mechanisms are currently in place to monitor the use of such payments; and if he will make a statement. [25466]

Mr. Robertson: Details of financial assistance given to Atholl estate since 1979 are not held centrally. The collation of this information could be achieved only at disproportionate cost.

The monitoring of any such payments is designed to ensure the achievement of the particular scheme objectives and the fulfilment of individual scheme conditions.

Ministerial Aircraft

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what have been the total costs of running his ministerial aircraft since his appointment; and if he will provide a breakdown of journeys, giving dates and the passengers on each journey. [25493]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There is no ministerial aircraft.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11409]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 30 January 1996]: Gross running costs for the Scottish Office, excluding the Scottish Prison Service, are as follows:

£ million

Year	Cash	Real terms
1996–97	184.0	184.0
1995–96	189.2	194.4
1994–95	185.9	196.3
1993–94	188.4	202.6
1991–92	175.1	201.7
1989–90	142.0	187.7
1979–80	58.0	153.0

With the exception of those for 1979–80 and 1989–90, the cash figures above are shown in appendix 3 of the 1996 departmental report for my departments (Cm 3214). The figures for 1979–80 are not strictly comparable with those for later years owing to the introduction of superannuation charges of approximately 13 per cent. which have been taken into account from 1989–90 onwards, the introduction of charges for the occupation of Government offices in 1983–84—which now amount to some £25 million per annum—and various shifts of responsibility from UK Departments to the Scottish Office. The total effect of these changes has been to increase the figures over the period by an amount estimated in 1996–97 to be approximately £40 million per annum.

BSE

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of BSE have been identified in Ayrshire in each of the past 10 years; and how many farms were involved. [23761]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 1 April 1996]: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Cases
1986	Nil
1987	Nil
1988	5
1989	25
1990	65
1991	93
1992	250
1993	277
1994	166
1995	64
1996	6
Total	951

Farms may count in more than one year. The total number of farms involved is 383.

Scottish Pre-School Play Association

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his meeting with Mrs. Doreen Black of the Scottish Pre-School Play Association. [22194]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 2 April 1996]: On 25 March I met the chairman and chief executive of the Scottish Pre-School Play Association. We had a useful and informative exchange of views and in particular I welcomed their support for our expansion of pre-school provision. I undertook to consider carefully the points made by the association.

Departmental Promotion

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the Scottish Office has spent promoting (a) the right-to-buy scheme and (b) exemptions from prescription charges in 1995–96; and of that, how much was spent in each case on (i) television, (ii) radio and (iii) the press. [24459]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 April 1996]: In 1995–96, my Department spent £168,000 on promoting the right-to-buy scheme, of which £111,000 was spent on television and £57,000 on press. A total of £21,000 was spent on a press campaign to publicise exemptions from prescription charges.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total expenditure on publicity campaigns commissioned by his Department from 1 April 1995 to 1 March 1996, showing (i) the medium, (ii) the purpose and (iii) the cost of each publicity campaign. [24460]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 April 1996]: The information requested is as shown:

Medium	Purpose	Cost £
Radio and press	To recruit members to Children's Panels	88,000
Cinema, radio, press, posters, leaflets and booklets	Campaign against housebreaking	244,000
Television	Campaign against domestic violence	84,000
Television and press	To encourage electoral registration	60,000
Television and leaflet	To encourage pre-planning of fire escape route	323,000
Press and leaflet	To inform men over 60 of changes in prescription charge legislation	21,000
Press	To recruit organ donors	35,000

Medium	Purpose	Cost £
Television, cinema, radio and posters	To encourage enrolment in children's traffic club; to encourage young drivers to drive more carefully and discourage speeding	320,000
Television and press	Informing public sector tenants of their right to purchase their homes	168,000

Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the application of schedule 1 to the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 to Scotland; and what reply he has given. [13815]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 7 March 1996]: Forty-eight letters have been received from members of the Banking Insurance and Finance Union asking for the Government's support in seeking dialogue between BIFU and the Committee of Scottish Clearing Bankers with a view to reversing the decision by the Scottish clearing banks to harmonise their bank holidays with those in England and Wales.

Replies to these letters have made it clear that the banks took their decision for business reasons, after taking their own legal advice. They did not consult the Scottish Office about their decision, nor were they obliged to do so. The days on which banks decide to close or open is a matter for them.

The statutory bank holidays in Scotland remain those set out in schedule 1 to the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 or proclaimed each year under that Act. The legislation does not expressly require the banks, or any other employer, to close on bank holidays. Its general effect is to provide certain financial safeguards for banks who do not transact business on those days. The Government have noted the decision of the Scottish clearing banks, and although we have no present plans to change the legislation on bank holidays, we will continue to keep the position under review.

Bank holidays, like all other pay and conditions issues, are a contractual matter for agreement between employers and employees. The law does not give any statutory rights to time off, or extra pay, on bank holidays. The initiative lies entirely with the banks and their decision is not one in which the Government can intervene.

DEFENCE

Cyprus (Murder)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who has funded the legal costs for the defence of riflemen of the Royal Green Jackets against the charges of assault and manslaughter of Louise Jensen in Cyprus in September 1994. [24072]

Mr. Soames: The legal costs for the three soldiers have been funded from the Army legal aid scheme.

Daedalus Site

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what current plans he has for the future of the Daedalus site at Lee-on-Solent. [24571]

Mr. Soames: The HMS Daedalus site is surplus to MOD requirements and is due to be vacated by the Navy on 31 July 1996. A working group comprising MOD officials and officers from the relevant local authorities has been set up to consider its future use, development opportunities and an appropriate disposal strategy.

Alderney

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he plans to release the papers relating to the wartime occupation of Alderney. [24613]

Mr. Soames: We hope to release the few remaining closed papers covering the wartime occupation of Alderney later this year.

HMS Dolphin

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of HMS Dolphin. [24570]

Mr. Soames: Options for the future use of HMS Dolphin are currently being considered. Any proposals for change will be subject to consultation.

Bosnia

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many troops are currently on active service in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement. [25014]

Mr. Soames: There are currently some 10,500 UK troops with the NATO peace implementation force in Bosnia.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which British aircraft are currently in use in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement. [25011]

Mr. Soames: RAF Chinook, RN Sea King and Army Air Corps Lynx and Gazelle helicopters operate with UK forces in Bosnia. RAF Harrier GR7, Tristar and E-3D AWACS aircraft based in Italy and C130 aircraft from the UK operate in support of IFOR.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answers of 11 December 1995, Official Report, columns 482-84 and 1 April, Official Report, columns 38–41, what factors led to information on the number of properties owned by his Department in each parliamentary constituency being currently unavailable. [24922]

Mr. Soames: The Defence housing executive took over the management of the family quarters estate from the services on 1 April 1996. The estate is managed by area managers who report to regional controllers and details of all the properties are now held centrally by address and postal code. Cross referencing to parliamentary constituencies can presently be done only at disproportionate cost. Copies of a map showing the regions and areas will be placed in the Library when they are available.

Defence Spending

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what amount (a) in total and (b) as a proportion of gross national product was spent on defence in the last year for which figures are available by (i) each NATO country, (ii) Japan, (iii) Switzerland, (iv) Finland and (v) Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [25008]

Mr. Soames: Details of defence expenditure by NATO countries in 1994 are contained in page 82 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1995", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. According to The Military Balance 1995/96, compiled by the International Institute for Strategic Studies, comparable information for Japan, Switzerland, Finland and Ireland is as follows:

	Defence expenditure 1994 $ million	As percentage of GDP
Japan	45,800	1.0
Switzerland	4,300	1.6
Finland	1,970	2.0
Ireland	622	1.2

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list, for each European member of NATO, defence expenditure expressed (a) by proportion of gross national product and (b) on a per capita basis. [25398]

Mr. Soames: This information is contained in page 82 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1995", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Low Flying

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the fast jet types which are authorised to conduct night low flying in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [25010]

Mr. Soames: The fast jet types normally authorised to operate in the United Kingdom night low flying system are: Canberra, F15, Harrier, Jaguar and Tornado.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low flying movements were recorded over Wales in 1995; and if he will make a statement. [25157]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) gave him on 16 February 1994, Official Report, column 818.

Atomic Weapons Establishment, Llanishen

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 95, when he expects to have an estimate of the decommissioning costs of Atomic Weapons Establishment, Llanishen, Cardiff, and for how long the site will require sterilisation before any after-use. [25193]

Mr. Arbuthnot: An estimate of the decommissioning costs of the atomic weapons establishment, Llanishen, Cardiff was made in 1994. It was taken into account in reaching the decision to close the factory. A period of sterilisation will not be required once the work of decontaminating the site has been completed in accordance with the requirements of the local authority.

Armed Forces (Roles)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what roles and functions are carried out by Her Majesty's armed forces that are not carried out by other European members of NATO. [25397]

Mr. Soames: The roles and tasks of Her Majesty's armed forces are set out in annex A of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1995", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. The main functions they carry out which are not mirrored by other European members of NATO's integrated military structure include the provision of nuclear forces, the defence of our dependent territories and military aid to the civil power in Northern Ireland.

Asbestos, Broughton Moor

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will authorise a full land and building contamination survey for asbestos by the Royal Ordnance Environmental Services Group on the former Royal Navy armaments depot—RNAD—site at Broughton moor, Cumbria. [25261]

Mr. Soames: Royal Ordnance Environmental Services Group was among the unsuccessful bidders for a term contract to carry out land quality assessments of MOD sites. A site assessment of the former RNAD Broughton moor, of which asbestos contamination is one element, has now been completed.

Torbay Submarine

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the recent failure in the steering system of the atomic-powered submarine Torbay in Plymouth sound. [25395]

Mr. Soames: HMS Torbay's electrical primary steering gear failed as the submarine was leaving Devonport naval base on 12 March. Torbay was brought to a controlled stop under her primary hydraulic steering gear, which was activated automatically. She then moved to a mooring buoy and, following successful checks and repairs, proceeded to sea. She remained under control at all times and was throughout accompanied by two tugs, as is standard practice for nuclear submarines in Plymouth sound, although a third tug was made available as a precaution. This was a minor incident with no nuclear or other safety implications.

Legal Costs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on legal costs in defending personnel in military and civilian courts in each of the last five years; and what is his estimate for the current year. [24831]

Mr. Soames: Service legal aid is available to accused service personnel who are to be tried by courts martial, or wish to appeal to the courts martial appeal court, or are to be tried by a civilian criminal court outside the UK in respect of an offence committed while off duty, or are to be tried before standing civilian courts. Records of the total costs of this aid are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Bulford Barracks

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is his policy to reduce overcrowding at barracks in Bulford; and what assessment he has made of the number involved. [24873]

Mr. Soames: It is our policy that soldiers should, wherever possible, live in appropriately scaled accommodation. To this end, an assessment was made of the barracks at Bulford which showed that the single soldier accommodation was significantly overcrowded and in need of refurbishment. The move from Bulford of 249 Signal Squadron and the Allied Command Europe Mobile Force (Land) Combat Service support battalion will ease the overcrowding problem and allow the existing accommodation to be refurbished. It will also enable more efficient use to be made of the barracks at Colerne and Hullavington to which these units will relocate.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will replace the 350 service personnel due to vacate Bulford barracks in 1997 and 1998 with a like number; and if he will make a statement. [24874]

Mr. Soames: There are currently no plans to make any significant increases in the number of Army personnel based at Bulford. The deployment of Army units and the use of the defence estate are, however, kept under review to ensure that defence resources are employed cost effectively while maximising operational capabilities.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when 249 Signal Squadron will vacate Bulford barracks; [24918]

(2) when Allied Command Europe Mobile Force (Land) Combat Service support battalion will vacate Bulford barracks. [24919]

Mr. Soames: We expect both of these moves to occur during 1998, but the precise timings have yet to be decided.

Accommodation

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of units (a) single accommodation and (b) married quarters at (1) Craigiehall, Edinburgh (2) Glencorse, Peniciuk, (3) Benbecula and (4) King's barracks, Kirkudbright. [25188]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is given below:

	Single accommodation	Family accommodation
Craigiehall, Edinburgh	221	110
Glencorse, Penicuik	792	51
Benbecula	692	212
King's barracks, Kirkcudbright[1]	—	—

[1] Temporary hard lying accommodation available for training purposes only. A development programme on Kirkcudbright will provide 480 units of single accommodation by 2001.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many compliance cost assessments were produced by his Department in 1995; and if he will place copies in the Library. [25276]

Mr. Soames: The MOD is not a regulator of business or responsible for any primary or secondary legislation which impacts significantly upon business. However, my Department published one compliance cost assessment in November 1995 to accompany the new Reserve Forces Bill because of its potential impact on some businesses. A copy was placed in the Library of the House.

NATO Implementation Force

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Territorial Army and Army Reserve are to be called out for the second phase of the United Kingdom's contribution to the NATO implementation force in former Yugoslavia. [25325]

Mr. Soames: Approval has been given to call out up to 575 members of the TA and Army Reserve to provide support to operations in former Yugoslavia. They will report from 29 April 1996 to the mobilisation centre and those selected will undertake refresher training before deployment. All are volunteers.

Project D154

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the costs quoted in the original bid; what are the current estimated costs of Project D154; what is the reason for the difference; and from what source the additional expenditure will be met. [25411]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The 1993 comparator offer by Devonport Management Ltd.—DML—was some £236 million. Comparison between this and the heads of agreement recently signed with DML for construction of nuclear submarine refitting facilities would be unrealistic because the 1993 offer was not of contractual qualify and different factors, for example different levels of risk, were included in the prices. Certain contractual details, including price, remain subject to negotiation and are commercially confidential. Any additional costs will be contained within my Department's forward expenditure totals.

Radar Base, Mormond Hill

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to (a) use or (b) dispose of the former MOD radar base at Mormond Hill; and if he will make a statement. [25424]

Mr. Soames: Part of the site at Mormond Hill is to be retained for on-going MOD requirements. The remainder is expected to be offered for sale on the open market.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for public consultation prior to a final decision on the future of the former MOD radar base at Mormond Hill; and if he will make a statement. [25425]

Mr. Soames: Any change of use by a purchaser of the surplus site at Mormond Hill would require planning permission in the normal way. It would be for the local planning authority to take account of any representations from the public.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with (a) commercial firms and (b) other bodies on the future of the former MOD radar base at Mormond Hill; and if he will make a statement. [25426]

Mr. Soames: Communications have been received from two telecommunications companies, a local landowner and a power company and from the director of planning and economic development for the Aberdeenshire council and from the Grampian regional council.

Emergency Aid, Montserrat

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many defence personnel and what equipment is currently deployed on emergency aid duties in Montserrat; and if he will make a statement. [25488]

Mr. Soames: There are currently no defence personnel or equipment deployed on emergency aid duties in Montserrat. However, the West Indies guardship is on standby in the region and we are in close and regular contact with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office about possible requirements for military assistance.

Apprentice Training

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to restructure apprentice training within the Army. [25538]

Mr. Soames: A review of apprentice training arrangements in the Army has recommended, subject to consultation, that they should be restructured along the lines of the Government flagship initiative on modern apprenticeship training, which is intended to raise the competence and competitiveness of the UK work force as a whole.

The Army's scheme, which will encompass the Royal Engineers, Royal Signals, Royal Signals Corps and the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, would be open to young people aged sixteen and a half to eighteen and a half, and would commence with a common 28-week foundation course at Rowcroft barracks, Arborfield followed by technical training at the appropriate arm or service's trade training school and a period of on-the-job training leading to the award of a national vocational qualification—NVQ—level three within three to four years.

The proposals would necessitate some revision to our previous plans to transfer all R Signals apprentice training to Blandford. Under the new arrangements, future R Signals apprentices would still complete their trade training at Blandford, but only after completing their 28-week foundation course at Arborfield.

Rosyth

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guarantees he will provide for the current Rosyth dockyard pension and redundancy arrangements following its sale; and what plans he has in respect of the pension fund surpluses. [25373]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In respect of the overall pension and redundancy arrangements at Rosyth Royal Dockyard plc, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to her by my predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman), on 3 July 1995, Official Report, columns 84–90. The treatment of any surplus that the next valuation of the Rosyth Royal Dockyard pension scheme may disclose will be fully consistent with the trust deed and rules of the pension scheme and will not affect the pension benefit entitlements of scheme members and beneficiaries.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guarantees he will provide for the work load of Rosyth Royal Dockyard plc following its sale. [25372]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Government's policy on the allocation of work to Rosyth dockyard continues to be governed by the principles announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary as Defence Secretary, on 24 June 1993, Official Report, columns 447–50, which I confirmed in my answer on 2 April 1996, Official Report, column 98. The precise contractual arrangements relating to the work in question are the subject of negotiation between my Department and the tenderer for Rosyth Royal Dockyard plc, Babcock International Group plc. It would be inappropriate to give details of these discussions, which are commercially confidential.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he plans to announce the outcome of the proposed sale of Rosyth Royal Dockyard plc; and what factors underlie the delay in that announcement. [25362]

Mr. Arbuthnot: As I made clear in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for West Dorset (Sir J. Spicer) on 2 April, Official Report, column 98, negotiations continue with Babcock International Group plc in respect of the proposed sale of Rosyth Royal Dockyard plc and there has been no delay in any announcement. It would not be appropriate to comment on the details of those negotiations while they are under way. Privatisation of Rosyth Royal Dockyard plc remains the Government's preferred option, subject to the right terms being secured and to the completion of appropriate consultation with employees and others.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements for the provision of nuclear refuelling and refitting facilities will be included in the terms of the sale of Rosyth dockyard. [25361]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Under the terms of the proposed sale of Rosyth Royal Dockyard plc, the purchaser will be required to carry out all allocated refit work, surface and nuclear, that is placed with the dockyard by my Department. Appropriate terms for this work are being negotiated as part of the continuing negotiations with Babcock International Group plc to which I referred in my answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 98. There is a continuing programme of appropriate works at Rosyth to enable the dockyard to fulfil its refit programme.

Devonport Management Ltd.

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the issues which have been the subject of negotiations with DML since 1994. [25363]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The main subjects of discussion between my Department and DML since 1994 have been the proposed privatisation of Devonport Royal Dockyard plc and the provision of new nuclear refuelling and refitting facilities at Devonport—Project D 154—on which I made a statement on 2 April, Official Report, column 98. There have also been the routine discussions appropriate between my Department and a major contractor about on-going refit and other contracts. Details of such discussions are commercially confidential.

Military Equipment Exports

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many jobs in Scotland are dependent (a) directly and (b) indirectly on the export of military equipment; and if he will provide a breakdown by (i) parliamentary constituency and (ii) local government area within Scotland. [25422]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Statistics are not held in the form requested. Owing to the complexities and methodological problems involved, it would be extremely difficult to generate the information required and this could be achieved only at disproportionate cost. Tables 1.9 and 1.10 of the 1995 edition of "UK Defence Statistics" include figures for the number associated with direct employment in the production of defence equipment in the UK, by region, and the number employed in the UK associated directly and indirectly with defence expenditure. A copy of this publication is held by the Library of the House.

Torture Equipment

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what investigations are taking place into the producer of the "Dispatches" programme on the export of torture equipment by his Department's police; and how much the investigation has cost so far. [24952]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief constable/chief executive of the Ministry of Defence Police. I have asked the chief constable/executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Walter Boreham to Mrs. Anne Clwyd, dated 16 April 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the Despatches programme, as this falls into my area of responsibility as Chief Constable/Chief Executive of the Ministry of Defence Police Agency.

My officers have conducted an investigation regarding the Despatches programme screened on 11 January 1995, and have submitted a report to the Crown Prosecution Service. I am awaiting their advice.

I estimate the cost of the investigation to be £3,600.

Married Quarters

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (1) the number of married quarters for service personnel stationed in Scotland, for (a) Army, (b) Navy, (c) Royal Air Force and (d) Royal Marines personnel, (2) the location of the housing and (3) the number of housing units at each location. [25187]

Mr. Soames: Family quarters are no longer managed by the individual services but are now managed centrally by the Defence housing executive through a system of seven regional controllers and 24 area managers. There are 6,702 family quarters in areas 23, 24 and 25 which cover the whole of Scotland.

Area 23: Glasgow, Helensburg, Dumfries, Prestwick, Benbecula and Sterling.

Area 24: Perth, Edinburgh, Penicuik, Pitreavie, Turnhouse, Melrose, Kinross, Dumfermline, Windygates, Cupar, Dundee, Leuchars, Arbroath and Rosyth.

Area 25: Inverness and Highlands sites, Kinloss, Lossiemouth, Buchan, Saxa Vord, Stornoway and Thurso.

The number of housing units within each area is as follows:

Area 23: 1,778

Area 24: 2,506

Area 25: 2,418.

Boards of Inquiry

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances his Department's boards of inquiry are set up; who carries out the inquiry; in what circumstances the reports or conclusions of boards of inquiry are made public; and how many boards of inquiry have been launched in each of the past five years. [24959]

Mr. Soames: A board of inquiry—BOI—is set up in accordance with Section 135(1) of the Army Act 1955 and BOI (Army) Rules 1956, section 135 of the Air Force Act 1955 and BOI (Air Force) Rules 1956 and Queen's Regulations for the Royal Navy by authority of the Defence Council.

A BOI must be convened in certain circumstances such as unlawful absence exceeding 21 days, the capture by the enemy of a person subject to military law, the death of a person abroad in a military establishment where no inquiry is required by civil law, disablement of a ship, and aircraft accidents. BOIs may also be convened in a variety of other circumstances where the incident affects military service.

In general, a BOI may be convened by the service boards, an officer not below the rank of colonel or equivalent or, in certain circumstances, an officer of any rank commanding a unit or detachment.

Boards of inquiry are internal fact-finding investigations undertaken for military purposes and to prevent a recurrence of a similar incident. As such, they are not in the public domain. Boards of inquiry reports are, however, made available, subject to the minimum security requirements, to the next of kin of deceased service personnel who are killed in in-service accidents.

Records covering the number of BOIs convened are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishing Safety Group

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy that the position of the fishing industry safety group will be safeguarded following changes to the Marine Safety Agency. [24816]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write my hon. Friend.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. John Townend, dated 16 April 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Question about safeguarding the position of the Fishing Industry Safety Group (FISG) following changes to the Marine Safety Agency (MSA).

Procedures for consultation on safety matters with the fishing industry, of which FISG is an important part, are currently being reviewed with the full participation of the industry. As part of the review, industry representatives met recently with MSA officials to discuss consultation procedures, including FISG. The industry has undertaken to consider and comment on the current arrangements and possible ways in which those arrangements could be improved. The MSA will consider those comments fully before decisions are taken about future consultation arrangements.

Food Nutritious

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to promote the nutritional benefits of food grown in the United Kingdom. [21617]

Mrs. Browning: A wide range of nutritious foods are grown in the United Kingdom and my colleagues and I are happy to promote their virtues.

EDS Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what savings to date have been made by his Department as a result of out-sourcing arrangements made with the EDS computer system; what assessment he has made of the equivalent costs for carrying out this work in-house; and if he will make a statement. [24230]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry holds no out-sourcing contracts with EDS, so there are no savings or equivalent in-house costs to be assessed.

Integrated Administration and Control System Forms

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in how many individual cases assistance was refused owing to mistakes by farmers in completing IACS forms, in each of the years since these came into effect; and what representations he has received on this subject since 1 January 1995. [24292]

Mr. Baldry: It is possible to correct mistakes in IACS forms in certain limited circumstances. The EC rules prescribe automatic penalties for all other cases of discrepancy and make no allowance for the reason for the discrepancy. More stringent penalties apply in respect of serious negligence and fraud.

Some 3,465 and 2,807—provisional figures—IACS applications in 1994 and 1995 respectively faced some level of penalty in the UK as a result of discrepancies found in land area. Of these, the penalties applied in 553 and 367 cases respectively resulted in the loss of all area-related aid. A number of representations on this subject have been received since 1 January 1995, mainly relating to individual cases.

Sea Empress Oil Spill

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the chemical two-butoxy Etanol was an ingredient in the dispersant used on the Sea Empress oil spill at Milford Haven. [23708]

Mr. Baldry: Yes. Two-butoxy ethanol is one of the family of butyl glycols, as included in the list given in my reply of 4 March 1996, Official Report, column 83.

Driftnetting

Mr. Olner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make available the recent report, "Cetacean bycatch in the UK tuna driftnet fishery in 1995", to the Council of Fisheries Ministers meeting in April; and if he will be making recommendations to the Ministers on driftnetting. [24841]

Mr. Baldry: The report has already been made available to the Council of Fisheries Ministers and I intend to urge the Council to seek further ways of reducing by-catches of cetaceans in high seas driftnet fisheries while taking account of the effect of fishermen's livelihoods.

Mr. Olner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he intends to review the current maximum lengths of driftnets in respect of the finding of the recent report, "Cetacean bycatch in the UK tuna driftnet fishery in 1995"; and what proposals he has to ban the use of driftnets; [24842]

(2) what response he has made to the proposals for a ban on the use of driftnets from the European Parliament and the European Commission; and if he will make it his policy to support an EU-imposed ban on driftnetting; [24580]

(3) what asssessment he has made of the scientific evidence for a ban on high seas driftnets. [24581]

Mr. Baldry: The current maximum length of driftnets permitted on UK and other Community fishing vessels is set at 2.5 km, in line with the precautionary approach and in response to United Nations resolutions. I am not aware of scientific evidence that justifies a different maximum length or a ban on the use of driftnets. I do not therefore support the European Commission's proposal, but I do not think that means should be sought to reduce by-catches of cetaceans in high seas driftnet fisheries.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of suspected BSE were reported in each week from 1 June 1989 to 1 June 1990. [23204]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: A breakdown of the number of reported suspected BSE cases on a weekly basis from 1 June 1989 to 1 June 1990 is as follows:

Number of BSE suspects reported

Week ending	Number restricted

Beef Exports

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures are in place to prevent the export of beef and beef products from the United Kingdom to countries other than those in the EU. [24378]

Mrs. Browning: Following notification of EU decision 96/239, we have ceased to issue export health certificates for products covered by the decision. The Customs and Excise (Management) Act 1979 enables Customs to detain goods presented for export which are subject to the decision.

Slaughterhouse Waste

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the oral statement of the Secretary of State for Health of 20 March, Official Report, columns 375–86, on the links between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, what plans he has to commission research and what research he has commissioned into the effects of the disposal of (a) offal and (b) other cattle waste on agricultural land and the water supply. [22981]

Mrs. Browning: This Department, together with the Department of Environment and the Environment Agency, is funding research to provide guidance on the landspreading of industrial wastes, including abattoir waste. A prime objective of the research is to provide further technical, scientific and practical guidance on the spreading of industrial wastes on land in a manner that protects human health and the environment, as required by article 4 of the amended EC framework directive on waste. The results of the research will be published.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total estimated tonnage of abattoir waste disposed of on agricultural land over the last (a) 20 years, (b) 10 years, (c) five years, (d) two years and (e) year. [23003]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 26 March 1996]: The spreading of waste on land for the benefit of agriculture or ecological improvement, including abattoir waste consisting of blood and gut contents from animals slaughtered for human consumption, is a recovery operation for the purposes of the amended EC framework directive on waste. The spreading of waste for these purposes is controlled under part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994. No central record is held of the tonnage of abattoir waste spread on land for the benefit of agriculture or ecological improvement.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which agency is responsible for regulating the spreading of abattoir waste over land; and if he plans to review current arrangements. [23217]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 April 1996]: The spreading of waste on land for the benefit of agriculture or ecological improvement, including abattoir waste consisting of blood and gut contents from animals slaughtered for human consumption, is a recovery operation for the purposes of the amended EC framework directive on waste. The spreading of waste for these purposes is controlled under part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994. On 1 April 1996, responsibility for these controls was transferred from waste regulation authorities to the Environment Agency and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency.

Spreading must be carried out without endangering animal or human health or posing a risk to the environment. The code of good agriculture practice for the protection of water issued by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Welsh Office Agriculture Department provides guidance to farmers and others adopting this practice. The Scottish Office has issued a code of good practice for the prevention of environmental pollution from agricultural activity which also offers guidance.

Pet Food

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to ban the sale of cat and dog food until it is produced from ingredients free of mammalian meat and bonemeal. [23348]

Mrs. Browning: SEAC recommended that the use of mammalian meat and bone meal should be prohibited in feed for farm animals. The rationale for this is that it should not be used in any circumstances where there might be a risk of the material being fed to or ingested by ruminants. MBM is not considered a risk to dogs and cats.

Animal Feed

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations were received by his Department in each year since 1976 regarding the issuing of a requirement that animal feed manufacturers should publish a precise analysis of their products; and what response was made by his Department. [24464]

Mrs. Browning: I am unable to provide the precise information requested. However, farmers' organisations did seek full information concerning compound feeds. EC directives introduced quantitative declarations for nutritional constituents and, in 1990, ingredient listing. This provision, requiring either a full list or categories of ingredients, was supported by the Government.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the tonnage of cattle feed exported from the United Kingdom to each EU member country in each of the last 15 years. [23318]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 April 1996]: Exports intended primarily for cattle feed are not separately identifiable.

Information covering the percentage composition of raw materials in main compound feed rations used in Great Britain is published in MAFF bi-annual press notice entitled "Results of the survey into the composition of main compound feed rations as used in Great Britain". Information on trade in raw materials can be found in the CSO Business Monitor MA 20, which is published annually.

Copies of the press notices and the business monitor can be found in the Library of the House.

Tanning Industry

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessments he has made of the consequences for the United Kingdom tanning industry of (a) the current level of activity in abattoirs and (b) the culling of older dairy cattle; and if he will make a statement. [24619]

Mrs. Browning: I have received a representation from the United Kingdom Industry about the financial impact of the loss of hides from the culling of older cattle and understand that the UK tanning industry is currently experiencing difficulty in sourcing hides due to the slow-down in beef production.

The Council of Agriculture Ministers on 1 and 2 April concluded that bovine animals over the age of 30 months should not enter the human food or animal feed chains or be used for cosmetic and pharmaceutical products. There was no reference to the destruction of hides from cull cattle; therefore, these hides could be recovered and be available to the United Kingdom tanning industry.

Warble Fly

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when dairy farmers were first required by Government to treat their cattle with an organophosphate-based insecticide as an antidote to warble fly; and when this practice ceased. [24828]

Mrs. Browning: Compulsory treatment for cattle infested with warble fly was re-introduced in 1978 and is still required. Alternatives to organophosphate-based products have been available from October 1984, when the first ivermectin-based product was authorised.

Cattle Heads

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date the Government announced that the splitting of bovine heads in slaughterhouses was to be prohibited; and when that prohibition came into force. [23203]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: Guidance was issued to local authorities on 14 June 1990 that bovine head meat must be recovered from the intact skull before the brain is removed. This guidance was subsequently enacted in the Bovine Offal (Prohibition) (Amendment) Regulation 1992, which came into force on 12 March 1992, prohibiting the removal of any meat for human consumption from the head of a bovine animal after the skull has been opened or the brain has been removed from that head. The Specified Bovine Offals Order 1995, which came into force on 15 August 1995, prohibited the removal of the brain from the head of a bovine animal.

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all plants in the United Kingdom licensed by the Government to debone cattle heads; and if he will make a statement. [24214]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 2 April 1996]: Cattle heads, expect for the tongue, are specified bovine material and must be disposed of intact.

There is no statutory provision for the Government to approve or licence plants to debone cattle.

Slaughterhouse Hygiene

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many slaughterhouses had yet to complete their work plans to meet the structural requirements of the Fresh Meat (Hygiene Inspection) Regulations 1992 at 31 December (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995. [24443]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 2 April 1996]: There were 320 licensed red meat slaughterhouses in England operating under temporary derogations at the end of 1993, 276 at the end of 1994 and 160 at the end of 1995.

State Veterinary Service

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total number of staff in the state veterinary service in each year since 1989–90; and what is the planned number of staff for each year from 1996–97 to 1998–99. [24447]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The total number of staff in the state veterinary service in each year since 1989–90 was as detailed in the following table, which shows the number of staff in post, to the nearest full-time equivalent, at 1 April each year. The figures include staff of all grades and include staff at the veterinary investigation centres, but exclude the central veterinary laboratory.

Year	Number of staff
1989–90	791
1990–91	858
1991–92	936
1992–93	[1]1,114
1993–94	1,360
1994–95	1,383
1995–96	1,376

[1] The State Veterinary Service took over responsibility for administrative staff in animal health offices in England from 1 April 1992. These were not all recorded at 1 April 92, but are fully reflected in the 1993 figure.

On 1 October 1995, the veterinary investigation service combined with the central veterinary laboratory to form to the Veterinary Laboratories Agency and 358 posts were transferred to that agency. On 1 April 1996, 31 administrative staff were transferred to the SVS from the Welsh Office. The planned number of staff for 1996–97 is 905. Plans for 1997–98 and 1998–99 have not yet been finalised.

Waste Minimisation

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress in establishing an office waste minimisation strategy for his Department indicating the targets set. [24499]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 3 April 1993]: The principle of waste minimisation is already an intrinsic part of the Department's "green housekeeping" policy. With regard to targets set, we are awaiting the outcome of the Department's study into the appropriateness or otherwise of an environmental management system and, to avoid duplication across Government Departments, the Department of the Environment's pilot study on waste minimisation.

Civil Servants (Company Directors)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which serving civil servants in his Department are currently directors of companies, and if he will indicate for each (a) the name of the company concerned and (b) if the annual remuneration was (i) £1 to £5,000, (ii) £5,000 to £10,000 and (c) above £10,000. [18153]

Mr. Boswell [pursuant to his reply, 5 March 1996, c. 128]: The answer should read as follows.

A number of officials in the Department have declared their outside interests in accordance with departmental requirements. As with all employment matters, individuals' details are a confidential matter between them and their employer.

The following staff currently hold directorships under the guide to non-executive directorships for civil servants:

Mr. R. G. Purnell: H. R. Wallingford

Mr. A. R. Burne: The Albert Fisher Group plc

Mr. B. J. Harding: Cadbury Ltd.

The individuals concerned do not receive payment.

HEALTH

Emergency Services

15. Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the Royal College of Nursing to discuss emergency services. [23478]

Mr. Horam: My hon. Friend the Minister for Health met representatives of the medical and nursing professions, including the Royal College of Nursing, on 21 December 1995 to consider a range of issues relating to emergency care. In addition, officials are in regular contact with representatives of the college.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

16. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of CJD there have been in the United Kingdom over the last four years; and how many cases there have been in (a) France and (b) Germany. [23479]

Mr. Horam: The latest available data from the national CJD surveillance unit relates only to the years 1993 and 1994.

In 1993, there were 41 definite and probable cases of CJD in the United Kingdom compared with 41 in France and 21 in Germany—the latter referring to July to December only.

In 1994 the figures were: UK 54, France 47, Germany 58.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee to place in the Library all the research evidence on which the committee based its statement of 24 March. [24526]

Mr. Horam: The findings of the national Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease surveillance unit about a previously unrecognised form of CJD will be published by the researchers in a scientific journal as soon as practicable. I will arrange for a copy of this to be placed in the Library.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made as to whether the provisional conclusions of the research commissioned by Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee about links between BSE and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease were (a) illegally and (b) prematurely disclosed to the Daily Mirror. [24666]

Mr. Horam: We have always said that we would inform the public immediately of any change in the scientific evidence for a link between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. It is clear that the Daily Mirror became aware that some form of public announcement was imminent some hours before the event. I have no evidence to suggest that there was an illegal disclosure of information.

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if vaccinations over the last 10 years have used (a) calf lymph and (b) other substances susceptible to BSE contamination. [24705]

Mr. Horam: We are not aware of calf lymph having been used in the manufacture of any United Kingdom licensed vaccines during the past 10 years.

All bovine materials currently used in the manufacture of UK licensed vaccines and used during the past 10 years belong to category IV in the guidelines produced by the European committee on proprietary medicinal products, "The rules governing medicinal products in the European Union", volume 3, addendum 2 "Minimising the risk of transmission of agents causing spongiform encephalopathies via medicinal products". Copies of the guidelines are available in the Library.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have died in each of the last three years (a) from smoking or smoking-related illnesses, (b) from CJD, (c) from road accidents and (d) from conditions related to illegal drug use. [23660]

Mr. Horam: The UK figures for the latest three years available for Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, motor vehicle accidents and drug abuse are shown in the table.

Year[1]	Deaths from drug abuse[2]	Death from motor vehicle accidents	CJD deaths
1992	2,485	4,681	51
1994	2,713	3,833	59

[1] For England and Wales, deaths for 1992 represent the number of deaths registered in that year, while deaths from 1993 are deaths which occurred in each year. Also, new procedures for coding cause of death from 1993, and the absence of medical enquiries, mean that figures for 1993 onwards may not be exactly comparable with earlier years. For most conditions, however these effects are small. More details may be found in OPCS Series DH2 for 1993, published in October 1995; copies are available in the Library.
[2] It is not possible to differentiate illegal drugs. International Classification of diseases 9th revision codes 304 (drug dependence) 305.2-305.9 (non-dependent use of drugs), 960-979 (poisoned by drugs, medicaments and biological substances).

It is estimated that in the United Kingdom about 110,000 deaths each year are smoking related.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have died in each of the last three years; and what proportion have died from (a) smoking-related conditions and (b) CJD. [23661]

Mr. Horam: The information for the United Kingdom for the latest three years available is shown in the table.

Year	Deaths[1]	Proportion of deaths from smoking related illness[2] Per cent.	Proportion of CJD deaths Per cent.
1992	634,238	17	0.008
1993	658,481	17	0.007
1994	627,636	18	0.009

[1] Figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland are registered deaths as are the 1992 figures for England and Wales. Later figures for England and Wales are deaths which occurred in that year.
[2] The figure is based on 110,000, which is the estimated number of smoking-related deaths.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research conducted overseas into BSE-CJD type diseases his Department has evaluated; what assessment he has made of this research; and if he will make a statement. [23480]

Mr. Horam: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory committee provides the Government with expert scientific advice on BSE and CJD. This advice takes account of research in the United Kingdom and elsewhere.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will next be meeting the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee to discuss BSE. [23468]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has met the chairman of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee on a number of occasions over recent weeks. He will meet the chairman again when necessary to discuss the committee's advice.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the dangers to the health of children of eating dog or cat food; [23325]

(2) if he will make a statement on the risks to the health of humans from handling pet foods containing mammalian meats and bonemeal. [23324]

Mr. Horam: Specified bovine materials are banned from entering the human and animal food chains, and therefore, do not enter pet food. The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee concluded that children were not at any greater risk of any possible bovine spongiform encephalopathy infection then adults.

Accident and Emergency Departments

17. Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations he has undertaken into the future provision of accident and emergency departments. [23481]

Mr. Horam: Following my right hon. Friend's statement to the House on 6 March, Official Report, columns 356–68, we expect widespread consultation to be held at local level about the provision of accident and emergency services.

24. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has received to his recent guidance to health authorities on the provision of accident and emergency services in the north-east Thames region. [23488]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked the chief executive of the national health service, Mr. Alan Langlands, to report to him at the end of June, and again at the end of September on health authorities' plans for emergency services. Responses from individual health authorities and NHS trusts are being co-ordinated by the regional offices of the NHS executive.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will instruct the NHS executive to investigate the comparative rates of admission into the accident and emergency departments at (a) Oldchurch hospital, Romford and (b) King George hospital, Goodmayes. [24789]

Mr. Horam: This would be a matter for the Barking and Havering and the Redbridge and Waltham Forest health authorities.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of accident and emergency admissions at (a) Oldchurch hospital, Romford and (b) King George hospital, Goodmayes, took place within two hours of arrival, in the last year for which figures are available. [24788]

Mr. Horam: Information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Geoffrey Jennings OBE and Mr. Michael J. Smith, respectively, the chairmen of Havering Hospitals NHS trust and Redbridge Healthcare NHS trust for further information.

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the range of accident and emergency facilities available to the public in NHS hospitals located in the outer London boroughs, subsequent to the changes planned for April 1997. [23810]

Mr. Horam: It is the responsibility of local health authorities, working together with local national health service trusts, to ensure that adequate facilities and services are in place to meet the accident and emergency needs of the local populace.

Market Testing

18. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations he is currently undertaking about the market testing programme. [23482]

Mr. Horam: I am in regular contact with a wide range of people in the national health service, the commercial sector and voluntary sector about ways to improve NHS services for the benefit of patients.

GP Fundholders

19. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors in Buckinghamshire are now fundholders, and what proportion of the population of Buckinghamshire are now served by these doctors. [23483]

Mr. Malone: There are currently 249 general practitioners who are fundholders in Buckinghamshire serving approximately 71 per cent. of the population.

23. Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many fundholding GPs there are in Redbridge and Waltham Forest; and what that figure represents as a percentage of GPs in the area. [23487]

Mr. Malone: There are currently 116 general practitioners who are fundholders in Redbridge and Waltham Forest. This represents approximately 50 per cent. of the GPs in the area.

District Health Authorities

20. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the purchasing policies of district health authorities. [23484]

Mr. Malone: Regional offices of the national health service executive assess health authority purchasing plans as part of their performance management responsibilities.

Personal Social Services

21. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on personal social services (a) in 1990–91 and (b) in the latest year for which figures are available. [23485]

Mr. Bowis: Local authority returns show gross expenditure on personal social services in England in 1990–91 was £4,698 million. In 1993–94, the latest year for which validated figures are available, gross expenditure was £6,278 million.

Elderly People (Care)

22. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of carers to discuss the provision of care to elderly people. [23486]

Mr. Bowis: I meet frequently with organisations representing carers to discuss a range of matters, including care of the elderly.

NHS Trusts

25. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent consultations he has had concerning the relationship between NHS trust hospitals and social services departments. [23489]

Mr. Bowis: There have been no specific consultations, but regular meetings are held with representatives of the national health service and local authorities. We have emphasised the importance of good procedures and effective communications between local authorities, health authorities and NHS trusts about arrangements for community care.

27. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received from NHS trusts on proposals to expand their activities involving private finance. [23491]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hazel Grove (Sir T. Arnold) on 16 January 1996, Official Report, column 550.

Since that reply, a further nine schemes with a capital value of more than £1 million have been approved, taking the total capital value of approved schemes to £0.5 billion.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the plans by NHS trusts to introduce private health plans. [23469]

Mr. Dorrell: My hon. Friend the Minister for Health recently set out the long-standing position. Trusts have wide-ranging powers to generate additional income, provided, among other things, that there is no unacceptable risk to public funds.

I have, however, made it clear that I do not believe that private health insurance plans could in any circumstances satisfy that requirement. There are therefore no such schemes on offer from NHS trusts, nor do trusts have any plans to introduce such schemes.

Community Care

26. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Helath what estimate he has made of the level of funds transferred from his Department to (a) other Government Departments and agencies and (b) local authorities for community care in 1996–97. [23490]

Mr. Bowis: For 1996–97, my Department transferred £647.6 million to the Department of Environment which was taken into account in the calculation of local authorities' entitlements to revenue support grant. In addition, a special transitional grant for community care services of £418 million will be paid to local authorities by my Department in 1996–97, together with a number of smaller special and specific grants.

Dental Services

28. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the measures he has taken to ensure an adequate provision of NHS dentistry. [23492]

Mr. Malone: We are committed to an effective and accessible national health service dental service that is available to all who wish to make use of it. Our record bears this out:

- At 31 December 1995 there were 15,942 NHS dentists on the lists of family health services authorities in England, the highest December figure ever. This is 516 more dentists than at 30 June 1992 and 3,796 more dentists than at 30 September 1979.
- At 29 February there were 26.4 million patients registered. This is broadly in line with the position at 30 June 1992.
- In 1994–95 gross expenditure on general dental services in England was £1,279 million, an increase in real terms of 57 per cent. since 1978–79.
- In 1994–95 there were 3.7 million more adult dental examinations compared with 1979.

In general, the former family health services authorities have not reported difficulties in achieving our aim. Where there are local problems, health authorities have a range of options, including use of salaried dentists and the community dental service to deal with these. There are 126 salaried dentists currently employed by the health authorities.

In the short term, we are discussing with the dental profession a range of issues aimed to reform dental services. In the longer term, we aim to put in place a purchaser–provider system which will be sensitive to local needs. This needs primary legislation.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date dentists were first required to register their patients; and when his Department first received information on (a) total registrations with dentists and (b) total deregistrations by dentists from each family health service authority or equivalent body. [25132]

Mr. Malone: Dentists first registered patients on 1 October 1990, when the current dental contract was introduced.

Information about total registrations of patients with general dental practitioners was first received in December 1990.

Information about the number of deregistrations by general dental practitioners was first collected by the Department in July 1992.

Deregistrations are not a meaningful measure of the availability of national health service dentistry. A dentist may deregister his patients in order to transfer them to another dentist working at the same practice address. These patients still have access to national health service dentistry, but are counted as deregistrations. The arrival of a new dentist to an area may resolve the availability problem in the area, but this will not be reflected in the deregistrations.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (i) children, (ii) adults and (iii) people in total were registered with dentists in each family health service authority in (a) February 1993, (b) July 1993, (c) February 1994, (d) July 1994, (e) February 1995, (f) July 1995 and (g) February 1996. [25133]

Mr. Malone: This information will be placed in the Library.

Recruitment

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the likely difficulties in recruiting health service psychiatrists, physiotherapists and occupational therapists in the next financial year. [23351]

Mr. Malone: The Specialist Workforce Advisory Group has recommended a significant increase in training opportunities for doctors wishing to become consultants. As a result, we are providing additional funding of £5.7 million in 1996–97 which will be targeted at specialties which have the greatest need including psychiatry, old age psychiatry and forensic psychiatry.

In August 1995, the national health service executive issued planning guidance (EL(95)96) recommending that education commissioners should take full account of factors affecting demand for physiotherapists and occupational therapists, including non-NHS demand. As a result, training commissions are planned to rise in 1996–97 by around 12 per cent. for physiotherapists and around 5 per cent. for occupational therapists.

Yorkshire Regional Health Authority (Land Panel)

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, for each year between 1987 and 1993, the members of the former Yorkshire regional health authority's land panel; and if he will make a statement on the role of the panel. [23683]

Mr. Malone: The land panel of the former Yorkshire regional health authority was set up in accordance with guidance issued by the Department of Health under the heading of Estatecode 1989. The aim embodied in the guidance was to provide advice to health authorities on general estates matters and specific transactions—particularly those involving complex or contentious issues. The land panel provided advice to the regional health authority. The panel has since been abolished. Details of individual membership of the former land panel are not available from public records.

Redundancies

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department issued on the remuneration of staff made redundant as a result of the abolition of regional health authorities. [24626]

Mr. Malone: Arrangements for redundancy for national health service staff employed in regional health authorities on national terms and conditions of service are set out in section 45 of the General Whitley Council handbook. Guidance on severance payments for general and senior managers on short term rolling contracts was issued in circular HSG(94)18. Copies of the documents are available in the Library.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 28 March, Official Report, columns 746–47, how many cases of multi-drug resistant TB have been identified in (a) London and (b) England and Wales in each of the last five years; and what action has been taken to monitor and control this new strain. [24774]

Mr. Horam: For the most recent available figures for the United Kingdom, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody) on 2 April columns 181–82. Regional information was not routinely collected. A new system, started in 1994, should provide more detailed regional information.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 28 March, Official Report, columns 746–47, how many TB cases have been identified; and how many TB-related deaths there have been in (i) London and (ii) England and Wales in each of the last 10 years. [24772]

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the number of notifiable cases of TB in each year since 1975. [25258]

Mr. Horam: The number of notifications of tuberculosis for both Greater London and England and Wales are published in table 5 of the annual reference volume "MB2 Communicable Disease Statistics". Copies are available in the Library. The latest year published is 1993. Data for 1994 and 1995 are shown in the table:

Number of notifications of tuberculosis (excluding chemoprophylaxis)

	1994	1995[1]
Greater London	2,077	2,042
England and Wales	5,590	5,606

[1] Provisional.

The number of deaths from tuberculosis of residents of England and Wales from 1985 to 1992 can be found in "Mortality statistics: area", series DH5, volumes 12 to 19, copies of which are available in the Library. Figures for 1995 are not yet available. The figures for 1993 and 1994 are:

	1993	1994
Greater London	86	110
England and Wales	507	497

These figures include all forms of tuberculosis, including respiratory, pulmonary, and mediastinal and late effects from tuberculosis originally caught some years earlier.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 28 March, Official Report, columns 746-47, (1) what assessment he has made of the risk of persons infected with TB entering the United Kingdom; to what extent that risk has changed in the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [24771]

(2) what measures have been taken in the last 12 months to reduce the risk of carriers of TB from entering the country. [24773]

Mr. Horam: Information on how many people have tuberculosis when they arrive in the United Kingdom is not available. For details about the steps that we are taking to deal with the risk, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody) on 2 April at columns 180-81.

Heart Valves

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) agency and (b) department was responsible for the purchase by the national health service of Bjork Shiley heart valves between 1979 and 1986; where these valves were delivered and centrally stored when imported; what records were kept detailing serial numbers of the valves and to which hospital batches of valves were despatched; what procedures, including record keeping were followed by them on the occasions when the manufacturers or distributors recalled certain valves; and what is his policy for making this information available to next of kin or other relatives of national health service patients who received an implanted Bjork Shiley heart valve in this period and subsequently died. [24585]

Mr. Horam: Responsibility for the purchase of medical devices, including heart valves, rested with local health authorities and hospitals. The delivery and storage of imported valves was a matter for the United Kingdom sales office of the manufacturer, Shiley Inc, and information is not available centrally. Responsibility for keeping records of valves delivered to hospitals, and for implementing appropriate recall procedures rests with the manufacturer involved. As part of Shiley's recall of Bjork-Shiley convexo-concave heart valves, they provided advice to relevant cardiothoracic surgeons and cardiologists, which included list of serial numbers for valves delivered to their hospitals. The Department provided further independent advice to health service professionals across the UK to assist them in making informed decisions about patient management. Our policy remains that clinicians are in the best place to provide advice to individual patients and their next of kin, in the light of personal circumstances.

NHS-wide Network

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis AT and T Istel has been chosen to operate the NHS-wide network; on what basis its employees or managers will have access to personal data; and if he will make a statement. [24628]

Mr. Horam: AT and T Istel was chosen to operate the NHS-wide clearing service—not the network—by competitive tender under the private finance initiative. Its managers and employees are contractually bound to main the confidentiality of data passing through the clearing service, and will have no access to it.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about proposed security arrangements for the NHS-wide network to avoid unauthorised access and the misuse of data from the network. [24635]

Mr. Horam: The arrangements to avoid unauthorised access to the NHS-wide network and prevent misuse of data are set out in the data networking security policy and codes of connection. These require any person or organisation seeking access to the network to sign a contractual undertaking to abide by proper security procedures, and to limit access to authorised users with acceptable national health service purposes. The documents were published with NHS executive letter (95) 108, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what links are proposed between the NHS-wide network and information technology elsewhere within Government; and if he will make a statement. [24630]

Mr. Horam: The NHS-wide network is separate from the Department of Health's network and from all other central Government networks. Access from anywhere outside the NHS, including from Government Departments, will be subject to the requirements of the security policy. Access is allowed only to those who use the network for approved NHS purposes.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will now place in the Library the findings of the study by Zergo Consulting for the NHS information management group about the NHS-wide network; and if he will make a statement on his response. [24634]

Mr. Horam: The report on the study by Zergo Consulting entitled "The Use of Encryption and Related Services with the NHS net" was published on 11 April 1996. Copies are available in the Library.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what restrictions are proposed to the selling off of data from the NHS-wide network; and if he will make a statement. [24629]

Mr. Horam: There are no plans to sell any data from the NHS-wide network.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he consulted the Data Protection Registrar about arrangements for the NHS-wide network; and if he will make a statement. [24636]

Mr. Horam: The Data Protection Registrar has been consulted at all stages in the development of plans for the NHS-wide network and during its implementation.

General Practitioners (Premises)

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 29 March, Official Report, column 781, what information his Department collates on the condition of general practitioners' premises in London. [24770]

Mr. Malone: Annual information is collected, by health authority, on premises below minimum standards.

Osteoporosis

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of women over the age of 55 years are estimated by his Department to suffer from osteoporosis; what percentage of women will contract the illness on current trends during their lifetime; and if he will make a statement. [24618]

Mr. Horam: Information on the number of women suffering from osteoporosis is not available centrally. The report of the advisory group on osteoporosis suggested that 22 per cent. of women over 50 have low bone density-osteopenia. This can lead to the development of osteoporosis. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library.

Paramedics

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified paramedics there are per head of population in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland, (c) England, (d) Northern Ireland and (e) the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [24594]

Mr. Horam: These figures are not routinely collected centrally, but an informal survey in England showed that there were 6,250 paramedics at 31 January 1996–1.28 per 10,000 population.

Figures relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many young people died in each of the last five years from abuse of (a) legally prescribed drugs and (b) illegal drugs. [25152]

Mr. Bowis: It is not possible to differentiate between legally prescribed drugs and illegal drugs. The number of deaths from drug misuse in England and Wales among those aged under 25 in the years 1990–92 are shown in the table.

Year	Deaths from drug misuse
1990	353
1991	362
1992	364

Source:
International Classification of Diseases 9th revision codes 304 (drug dependence), 305.2–305.9 (non-dependent abuse of drugs), 960–979 (poisoning by drugs, medicaments and biological substances).

Deaths for 1992 and earlier years represent the number of deaths registered in each year. New procedures for coding cause of death from 1993, and the absence of medical inquiries, mean that figures for 1993 onwards may not be comparable with earlier years. The figures for 1993 and 1994 were 387 and 433 respectively. More details may be found in OPCS series DH2 for 1993, which was published in October 1995; copies are available in the Library.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has evaluated into the mechanism by which Ecstasy killed each victim of the drug in each of the last five years. [24835]

Mr. Bowis: The Department of Health has not carried out a formal evaluation of research in this area, but maintains close contact with a number of experts on Ecstasy-related deaths. We are in the process of drawing up proposals for research on Ecstasy and its effects. The Advisory Council on the misuse of drugs held a meeting to discuss Ecstasy and its effects earlier this year and will advise the Home Department of its findings shortly.

Domestic Accidents

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of accidents in the home necessitating hospital treatment for each year for which records are available; and if he will make a statement. [24900]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by health authority area the number of accidents in the home which necessitated hospital treatment for each year for which records are available; and if he will make a statement. [24901]

Mr. Horam: Information on accidents by health authority area is not available. For information on the number of home accidents in general, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Competition and Consumer Affairs gave him today.

Regional Health Authority Expenditure

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was spent on furniture, fixtures and fittings by the Yorkshire regional health authority in each year since 1986; how these assets were disposed of; and how much money was raised for the NHS from their sale. [24972]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 29 January, column 528, which included the total spending on repair, maintenance and upgrading of the headquarters premises of the former Yorkshire regional health authority by year since 1986. The figures included expenditure on fixtures, fittings and furniture. It is not possible to identify expenditure separately under these headings as the definitions of fixtures, fittings and building fabric are not distinct, and no attempt was made to differentiate between them at the time the work was carried out.

Because of the merger and then abolition of the former regional health authorities, some furniture and equipment did become surplus to requirements in Northern and Yorkshire. Any reusable items have been passed on to national health service trusts and health authorities in the area which could make use of them. Some unusable and obsolete furniture and equipment was sold, and produced £38,000 for NHS use.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was spent on furniture, fixtures and fittings by the Northern regional health authority in each year since 1986; how these assets were disposed of; and how much money was raised for the NHS from their sale. [24967]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 12 February, columns 456–57, which included the total spending on repair, maintenance and upgrading of the headquarters premises of the former Northern regional health authority since 1986, including expenditure on fixtures, fittings and furniture. It is not possible to identify expenditure separately under these headings.

Because of the merger and then abolition of former regional health authorities, some furniture and equipment did become surplus to requirements in Northern and Yorkshire. All items proved suitable for reuse, and have been passed on the national health service trusts and health authorities in the area.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost of furnishing, fitting out and decorating the board room at the Yorkshire regional health authority headquarters at Park parade, Harrogate; and how much of the cost has been recouped from the sale of surplus assets. [24973]

Mr. Malone: Work on the board room was carried out as part of the refurbishment of the Queen building at Park parade, Harrogate. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave on 29 January, column 528 in respect of overall expenditure on repair, maintenance and upgrading work on the Park parade site by year. It is not possible to identify separately expenditure either on a specific area of the building or on a particular sub-category of the work.

I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave him today for information regarding the disposal process for any assets surplus to requirements following the merger and then abolition of regional health authorities. Any reusable assets have been passed to national health service trusts and health authorities in the area which could make use of them. Some obsolete and unusable items were sold, yielding a total of £38,000 for the NHS. It is not possible to identify which, if any, of these items may have had some former link with the board room at Park parade.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money (a) has been spent and (b) will be spent on furniture, fixtures and fittings for the new Northern and Yorkshire regional offices of the NHS executive at Mountjoy science park. [24971]

Mr. Malone: It is not possible to differentiate expenditure on fixtures and fittings from that on building fabric. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 1 February at columns 919–20 for information on the total expenditure on the Durham offices of the national health service executive, Northern and Yorkshire, including fixtures and fittings.

Total expenditure on furniture amounts to £2,000 for some smaller filing cabinets, necessary because of the reduced provision of space in the new accommodation compared with the former offices. All other furniture will be taken from that previously in use in the former Harrogate and Newcastle offices.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, at column 190, how many people have been removed from waiting lists by region in each quarter since 1992. [25241]

Mr. Horam: The table shows for each region, the special health authorities and England as a whole, the number of removals from waiting lists and—for England as a whole—the total number of decisions made to add patients to waiting lists in each quarter since 1992. Patients may be removed from waiting lists because they have already been treated, because treatment is no longer needed or because they have moved.

Rev. Martin Symth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average length of the waiting lists for cardiac surgery in hospitals. [24184]

Mr. Horam: Information on numbers of people waiting for treatment by specialty and by national health service trust is contained in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Nitrates

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the implications of the research by Aberdeen university in 1995 into dietary nitrate intake for the public health consequences of European Commission directives on nitrates in water supplies. [25024]

Mr. Horam: The Department has received an inquiry from one correspondent and two letters from hon. Members on behalf of another correspondent.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the latest research on the reasons why babies up to the age of three months are unable to be affected by infantile methaemoglobinaemia from nitrates in diet. [25239]

Mr. Horam: No such research appears to have been published.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 5 December, Official Report, column 177, what assessment he has made of the latest research into the effect of nitrates in diet and water (a) at, (b) below and (c) in excess of natural levels on human health. [25240]

Mr. Horam: Nitrate in diet and water is not known to be beneficial to health. It is a recognised contributory factor in the causation of infantile methaemoglobinaemia. The addition of nitrate to foods specially prepared for babies and young children is prohibited under the Preservatives in Food Regulations 1989. Concentrations in drinking-water are restricted under the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989. After consideration of the toxicological data, most recently in 1995, the Food and Agriculture Organisation/World Health Organisation's joint expert committee on food additives and contaminants, and the European Commission's scientific committee for food, each proposed an acceptable daily intake of up to 3.7 mg of nitrate per kg body weight. This ADI is unchanged from 1992, when it was endorsed by the departmental expert Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment.

Adoption

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children have been adopted from each foreign country in each of the last five years. [25153]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Private Security Guards

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the use of private security guards in hospitals. [24937]

Mr. Horam: This is a local operational matter, subject to local specification of service requirements.

Mixed-sex Wards

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made towards the establishment of a choice between single sex and mixed-sex wards for hospital patients; and if he will make a statement. [23790]

Mr. Horam: A voluntary survey of hospital accommodation in two national health service regions, commissioned by the NHS executive, has recently been completed and the results will be published shortly. A new health building note which will provide advice and guidance on new buildings in the NHS and advice and examples on how to upgrade existing premises to fulfil charter standards is being prepared by NHS Estates. We will be considering whether any further action is required.

British Medical Association

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 February, Official Report, column 463, if he will make a statement on the length of time his Department has taken to respond to the BMA's general medical services committee's letter dated 23 February 1994, and its reminders dated June 1984, August 1994, November 1994, December 1994, January 1995, April 1995, July 1995, September 1995 and December 1995, asking to see a redraft of his Department's guidance to health authorities on good practice in respect of the use of cash-limited funds. [24844]

Mr. Malone: Throughout the period covered by the general medical services committee's letters the use of cash- limited funds has been the subject of complex legal argument culminating in High Court action, Regina v. The Secretary of State for Health, ex parte Manchester Local Committee, heard on 27–28 March 1995.

Following the judgment, advice on the proper use of cash-limited funds was given to health authorities on 16 May 1995 and reiterated in subsequent allocation letters. We shall be considering whether further guidance would be helpful to new health authorities on this issue and, if so, we shall consult GMSC on the content.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 February, Official Report, column 463, when the BMA's general medical services committee can expect a reply to its letter dated November 1991 in respect of considering the financial reimbursement for general practitioners who serve on, and give advice to, NHS purchasing authorities. [24843]

Mr. Malone: Correspondence with the British Medical Association's general medical services committee on this issue has been on-going since November 1991.

Cannabis

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to initiate new research into the use of cannabis or its derivatives for medicinal use. [24838]

Mr. Bowis: None.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long the family planning experts on the Committee on Safety of Medicines were given before the committee's meeting on 13 October 1995 to review the data on third generation oral contraceptives. [24969]

Mr. Malone: The family planning experts who attended the meeting were sent the papers by express courier on 11 October for receipt by 10.30 am the following morning, with the exception of one expert who was aboard at the time and who was provided with a copy of the papers at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on discussions between his Department and the British Medical Association on alternatives to the fax cascade system for alerting health professionals to urgent public health information; what is the expected timetable; and when he expects to have a new system in place. [24949]

Mr. Horam: The chief medical officer met the British Medical Association and other medical organisations on 28 February 1996 to discuss arrangements for transmitting urgent communications to doctors and how these might be improved. The current arrangements use an electronic system via telephone lines to transmit urgent messages to directors of public health who then cascade the message to relevant health professionals. Alternative methods were discussed but the profession's representatives did not consider any would improve the present arrangements until the Department is fully connected to the message handling application of the NHS—wide networking system. The technology is now in place for health authorities and other NHS institutions to connect to this system and this is being actively encouraged.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions (a) his Department, (b) the Committee on Safety of Medicines and (c) the Medicines Control Agency had with the product licence holders of the third generation oral contraceptives which were the subject of the safety warning issued in October 1995, between 4 July and October 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24970]

Mr. Malone: Information about discussions held with pharmaceutical companies about their products is treated in confidence under the Medicines Act 1968.

Asylum Seekers

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent local authorities are reimbursed for costs arising from their obligations to the children of asylum seekers, under the terms of the Children Act 1989. [24975]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Austin-Walker) on 19 March at columns 191-92.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many compliance cost assessments were produced by his Department in 1995; and if he will place copies in the Library. [25274]

Mr. Horam: The Department produced six compliance cost assessments in 1995. Copies are available in the Library.

Internal Market

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will establish a study of (a) the additional paperwork required of general practitioners and their staffs by the introduction and operation of the internal market within the national health service and of means of simplifying and reducing their paper requirements; and if he will seek the co-operation of the principal professional organisations in this study. [25511]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health has already conducted a study into paperwork in general practice and has acted upon the findings. The report of the efficiency scrutiny into bureaucracy in general practice, "Patients not Paper", published in July 1995, contains recommendations which when implemented will substantially reduce bureaucracy in general practice. About 17 million forms per year will be abolished from 1 July 1996, when some of the recommendations are implemented.

Health Authority Contracts

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names of district health authorities which are in dispute, or have not yet agreed, with any of their principal health trust providers contracts for the year 1996–97, within each case (a) the name of the providing trust, (b) the reason for the delay and (c) arrangements made for arbitration and its likely timetable; and what assessment he has made of the consequential effects on patients of (i) GP fundholders and (ii) GP non-fundholders in each case. [25510]

Mr. Horam: Information on health service contracts agreed by health authorities for 1996–97 is being collected and will be placed in the Library. Information by individual providers is not available centrally.

Patients come first and they will continue to be treated on the basis of clinical need. There is no question of patients not being treated or treatment being delayed because of the contracting process. Health authorities and fundholders are charged with ensuring that the contracting process works to the best interest of patients locally.

SCOTLAND

Lateral Epicondylitis

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of people (a) discharged from hospital and (b) referred to outpatient clinics with the diagnosis of lateral epicondylitis in each of the last five years. [24203]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information available centrally does not separately identify lateral epicondylitis, also known as "tennis elbow". The condition is one of a group—ICD9 726.3—under the general heading of enthesopathy of the elbow region. The information excludes admission by transfer from another specialty or hospital. Information relating to the year ended 31 December 1995 is provisional.

(a) The number of hospital discharges in Scotland is as follows:

Year ending 31 December

	Number
1991	377
1992	424
1993	382
1994	461
1995	437

(b) Information on diagnostic reason for referral to an out-patient clinic is not centrally available.

Prisoners (Transfers)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the arrangements by which residents of Scotland, and foreign nationals convicted of criminal offences in Scotland, may apply for transfer to their home countries to complete their sentences; and how many such transfers have been made, by country, in each of the last five years. [24389]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Robin Corbett, dated 17 April 1996:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question relating to the arrangements by which residents of Scotland, and foreign nationals convicted of criminal offences in Scotland, may apply for transfer to their home countries to complete their sentences and how many such transfers have been made, by country, in each of the last five years.

Such prisoners may apply for transfer under the Repatriation of Prisoners Act 1984 which makes it possible in certain circumstances for foreign nationals whose home country has signed and ratified the Council of Europe Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons to be transferred back to their own country to serve the remainder of their sentence. No transfers from Scotland under these arrangements, have taken place in the last five years.

Legal Aid

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the 20 solicitors companies in rank order which have received the most money from the Scottish Legal Aid Board and the amount paid to them in each of the past five years. [24872]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have ascertained from the Scottish Legal Aid Board that detailed information regarding payments to solicitors' firms is available only for the past two financial years. The information, which has been supplied by the board, is set out in the tables and exclude outlays and payments to advocates.

The ranking reflects the size of the firm and the number of fee-earning solicitors, among other factors.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to ensure that a proper record is maintained of the number of people dying from Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease and that public access to those records is ensured. [23811]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Monitoring of the incidence of and mortality associated with Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease is the responsibility of the Government-funded national CJD surveillance unit. The unit produces an annual report, which is published. Copies are placed in the Library. The records of individual patients with CJD are subject to the normal rules of medical confidentiality.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24862]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are 197 files in my Department out of a total of 1,134,270 marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes".

The marking "Not for NAO eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO while they are current.

Fossil Fuel Levy

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has set the fossil fuel levy rate for Scotland for the current financial year. [25866]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has set the levy rate for the period up to 31 March 1997 at half of 1 per cent. This levy will be paid in the first instance by all electricity suppliers in Scotland on electricity generated from fossil fuel sources and electricity generated under the Scottish Renewables Obligation.

The moneys raised will support the generation of electricity from new renewables sources in Scotland under the first Scottish renewables obligation. Projects that will be supported by the levy include small hydro schemes, wind farms, and schemes for generating electricity from waste gas from landfill sites.

The cost of the levy to the public electricity suppliers, ScottishPower and Scottish Hydro-Electric, is expected to be passed through to electricity consumers. The increase to individual's bills will be in the region of half the levy rate because only a proportion of consumers' electricity is generated from fossil fuel sources.

Executive Action

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those areas of Executive action where he has discretion to act in respect of an individual without giving reasons for his decision. [20535]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 March 1996]: Records are not kept in the form requested, but in the vast majority of cases where the Secretary of State is empowered to take a decision in respect of an individual, there is no express provision which either requires him to give reasons or which provides that he should not do so.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24853]

Mr. Willetts: The marking, "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments, the NAO and the Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO whilst they are current. Eighty-six Cabinet Office and Office of Public Service files are so designated.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24856]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There are 84 files in the Lord Chancellor's Department, out of a total of 122,765, marked "Not for NAO Eyes". These refer to individual file parts. For each NAO study a number of divisions may be involved and each may possess a file with a number of parts.

The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to NAO while they are current.

ENVIRONMENT

Gas Installations

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to empower landlords to enter their property to ensure the maintenance and safety of gas installations in their property. [24567]

Sir Paul Beresford: The gas appliance and fuel maintenance and annual safety check requirements enjoined on landlords by the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1994, as amended, do not include a right of entry for landlords to property let by them, and the Government have no plans to introduce such a right into these regulations. However, where the landlord has repairing obligations, a right of access will be implied by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985, or the Housing Act 1988.

Benzene Emissions

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the potential impact of benzene emissions in relation to forecast sales of lead replacement gasoline; and what assessment he has made of the advantages of banning the sale of super-unleaded fuel on the basis of its aromatic content. [24787]

Mr. Clappison: The proportion of unleaded petrol used in the UK will increase as the proportion of cars equipped with catalytic converters grows. This increase will in turn lead to substantial reductions in benzene emissions over present levels.

The last budget increased the fuel duty on petrol and diesel by 3½p per litre. Duty on road fuel gases was reduced by 15 per cent. in recognition that they are relatively cleaner fuels. The duty on super-unleaded petrol will increase by a further 4p per litre in May in recognition that its use, in cars without catalysts, can lead to higher emissions of benzene than other petrols.

Animal Species

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many animal species which are native to the United Kingdom were considered to be at risk in (a) 1985, (b) 1990 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24604]

Mr. Clappison: Statistics for native animals at risk have been drawn from the digest of environmental statistics, published annually by the Department of the Environment, which lists the number of native animals and categorises them as endangered, vulnerable or rare according to the International Union for the Conservation of Nature red data criteria, or as being nationally scarce. These are termed at risk in that publication.

It should be noted that comparisons between years may not be valid because of changes in the methods of assessing risk.

Native species at risk

	Number endangered	Number vulnerable	Number rare	Number nationally scarce
1985	532	407	857	n/a
1990	280	168	389	n/a
1995[1]	577	407	726	2,572

[1] Comparable figures for mammals and birds are not included because their threat status is now considered in the international rather than the national context.

Plants

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many plant species which are native to the United Kingdom were assessed by his Department to be at risk in (a) 1985, (b) 1990 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [25016]

Mr. Clappison: Statistics for native vascular plants at risk have been drawn from the digest of environmental statistics, published annually by the Department of the Environment, which lists the number of native plants, and which until 1994 categorised them as endangered, vulnerable or rare according to the International Union for the Conservation of Nature red data book criteria.

	1985	1990
Endangered	51	51
Vulnerable	93	93
Rare	154	154

Statistics compiled for the 1995 digest were based on revised IUCN red list risk assessment criteria, and are not therefore directly comparable.

	1995
Critically endangered	16
Endangered	45
Vulnerable	132
Near threatened	109

Landfill Tax

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had from small building firms as to the impact of the landfill tax on the future business prospects. [23936]

Mr. Clappison: Representations have been received from the construction industry, including the House Builders Federation, the Building Employers Confederation and others. The Government have had discussions with those interested bodies, and continue to consider representations made as arrangements for the landfill tax are being implemented.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24850]

Sir Paul Beresford: There are 269 files currently marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" out of a total number of 1,461,000 files held in my Department.

The marking "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the National Audit Office and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the National Audit Office while they are current.

"Going for Green" Initiative

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements are now in place for operating the "Going for Green" initiative. [25850]

Mr. Gummer: The "Going for Green" advisory committee came to the end of its life on 31 March 1996. A private company limited by guarantee, Going for Green Ltd. has been established. The company took on responsibility for running the "Going for Green" campaign from 1 April 1996 and has agreed a programme of work with my Department.

In 1996–97 my Department will make available to Going for Green Ltd. £500,000 core grant; £300,000 for area projects and up to £700,000 to match private sector sponsorship income on a 50:50 basis. This level of grant support recognises the value of Going for Green Ltd.'s work to the Government's strategy on sustainable development. We intend to make up to £1.5 million available to Going for Green Ltd. in 1997–98 and in 1998–99.

TREASURY

Self-assessment

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the cost to small firms of self-assessment for the purpose of taxation. [23932]

Mr. Jack: Self-assessment is a major modernisation of the system of tax administration that will provide a permanent reduction for taxpayers in the costs of complying with their obligations. The changes will particularly benefit self-employed people. A compliance cost assessment detailing the estimates leading to this conclusion was published on 28 November 1994. A copy is available in the House Library.

It contains the following summary figures: self-assessment generates a recurrent compliance net saving for businesses, mainly the self-employed, of some £125 to £250 million a year; this figure takes account of recurrent costs to employers who provide benefits to employees estimated at £20 million to £30 million a year; initial costs of adapting to the new system are estimated at £100 million to £200 million; and the typical small self-employed business which does not provide benefits in kind to employees could expect recurrent savings of £30 to £60 a year, more than offsetting the non-recurrent cost in a single year.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24858]

Mrs. Angela Knight: There are 385 files in the Treasury, out of a total of 191,420, marked "Not to be seen by NAO without reference to the appropriate Head of Division".

These figures refer to individual jackets and parts of files. For each NAO study, several divisions in different locations may be involved and each may possess a file with a number of parts. The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the NAO under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO while they are current.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many compliance cost assessments were produced by his Department in 1995; and if he will place copies in the Library. [25270]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The Chancellor's Departments produced 15 compliance cost assessments during 1995, in connection with the following measures. In each case, a copy of the assessment was placed in the Library at the time it was presented to Parliament.

HM Treasury

The Financial Markets and Insolvency (Money Market) Regulations 1995

Corporation Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the annual yield to Her Majesty's Treasury from corporation tax levied on chargeable gains in the latest year for which figures are available. [21965]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 21 March 1996]: The yield of corporation tax on chargeable gains in 1993–94, the latest year for which reasonably complete information is available, is provisionally estimated to be £250 million. In addition, capital gains tax on individuals raised some £700 million.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many unemployed (i) male and (ii) female 16 to 24-years-olds in the west midlands have (a) never been employed and (b) been unemployed for more than one year. [25001]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information for the west midlands is available from the labour force survey for autumn—September to November—1995 and is shown in the table, not seasonally adjusted.

	Male	Female
ILO unemployed 16–24 year olds of which:	47,000	23,000
Never been in paid employment	20,000	12,000
Been unemployed for one year or more	13,000	[1]—

[1] Estimate below 10,000 not shown.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will break down the seasonally adjusted spring totals of the economically inactive population between 1979 and 1995 as shown in table 7.1 of labour market trends to show the separate totals of men and women who are (a) retired, (b) housewives, (c) under 16-year-olds, (e) long-term sick and disabled and (f) others. [25320]

Mrs. Knight: It is not possible to provide a breakdown of the seasonally adjusted economically inactive data. However, a breakdown of the unadjusted economically inactive data into (a) retired, (b) people looking after the family home, (c) under 16 years, (d) long-term sick and or disabled and (e) others can be obtained via the quantime labour force survey available in the Library.

Earnings Statistics

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employees in the west midlands earned (i) less than £1.50 an hour, (ii) between £1.50 and £2.50 an hour, (iii) between £2.50 and £3.50 an hour, (iv) between £100,000 and £250,000 per annum and (v) more than £250,000 per annum in 1995 prices, in each year since 1979. [24998]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information from the new earnings survey 1986 to 1995 is shown in the table. Data for the years prior to 1986 can be retrieved only at disproportionate cost.

Capital Costs (Industry)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his Department's estimate of the cost of capital to industry in the United Kingdom; and what are the figures for (a) the United States of America, (b) Germany and (c) Japan. [25386]

Mrs. Angela Knight: There is no universally accepted method for calculating the cost of capital to industry as a whole. All estimates are subject to conceptual and measurement problems, and international comparisons are especially difficult.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate for the PSBR for the rest of 1996; and how this compares with projections in the 1995 Budget Red Book. [25358]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Budget forecast of the public sector borrowing requirement for 1996–97 was £22½ billion. PSBR forecasts are published only for financial years. The PSBR forecast will be updated in the Treasury's summer economic forecast.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the expected percentage increase in the PSBR in the financial year 1996–97. [25357]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Budget forecast of the public sector borrowing requirement for 1996–97 was £22½ billion, a reduction of 23 per cent. compared with the forecast for 1995–96.

European Central Bank

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what powers the Council of Ministers has to remove a member of the European central bank before the expiry of the eight-year term of appointed office. [24538]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Article 11.2 of the Statute of the European System of Central Banks states that the term of office of members of the Executive Board of the European Central Bank "shall be eight years and shall not be renewable".

The Council of Ministers has no powers to remove a member of the executive board once he or she is appointed, although it plays a role in the appointment of members. In accordance with article 11.4, "if a member of the Executive Board no longer fulfils the conditions required for the performance of his duties or if he has been guilty of serious misconduct, the Court of Justice may, on application by the Governing Council or the Executive Board, compulsorily retire him".

Equal Opportunities

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amounts of money have been paid out by (a) his Department and (b) executive agencies, non-departmental public bodies and other organisations for which he is accountable to Parliament, to how many staff or former staff in respect of (i) alleged equal opportunities breaches which do not proceed to tribunals or courts and (ii) equal opportunities breaches which proceeded to tribunals or courts in (1) the current year and (2) the two previous years. [22510]

Mr. Waldegrave: My Department has not made any payments under either category in this or the previous two years. Executive agencies, non-departmental public bodies and other organisations for which I am responsible to Parliament and for which information is available have paid a total of £18,500 in respect of six cases that did not proceed to tribunals or courts in the previous two years. No compensation has been awarded as a result of any cases which proceeded to tribunals or courts in this or the previous two years.

DEFENCE

Cyprus (Service Personnel)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost to the British Government of the trial of the three military personnel convicted of the manslaughter of a Danish tour guide in Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [24559]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 3 April to the hon. Member for Delyn (Mr. Hanson), Official Report, column 262.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when a Minister from his Department will visit Cyprus to discuss with the Cyprus Government and senior military personnel the behaviour of British forces when off-duty on the island of Cyprus; [24563]

(2) what discussions he plans to have with (a) the Commander-in-Chief of British Forces, Cyprus, and (b) the Government of Cyprus in respect of the conviction of three British service personnel of the manslaughter of a Danish tour guide. [24561]

Mr. Soames: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence plans to make a short visit to the sovereign base areas in Cyprus towards the end of May. While in Cyprus, he will discuss a number of issues, including the convictions resulting from the manslaughter of Miss Jensen and the conduct of off-duty British service men more generally.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he is having with the family of the Danish tour guide for whose manslaughter three British service personnel in Cyprus have been convicted as to compensation which may be paid to them; and if he will make a statement. [24553]

Mr. Soames: As yet, no claim has been received. If one were to be submitted, it would be looked at sensitively and sympathetically.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what pay and allowances the three British service men convicted in Cyprus of the manslaughter of a Danish tour guide currently receive; and if he will make a statement. [24555]

Mr. Soames: While in custody, each soldier has received approximately £20 per week for incidental expenses such as telephone calls and toiletries.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has (a) to review the general rules of behaviour of British service personnel on the island of Cyprus and (b) to investigate complaints made by Greek Cypriots as to the behaviour of British military personnel based in Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [24565]

Mr. Soames: Both the educational and disciplinary arrangements relating to the behaviour of British service personnel in Cyprus are kept under constant review. Any complaints by Cypriots against such personnel are investigated fully either by the Cypriot police or service police, depending upon where jurisdiction lies.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department now plans to discharge the three service personnel convicted of the manslaughter of a Danish tour guide from the British army; and what benefits they will be entitled to on their discharge. [24562]

Mr. Soames: Discharge procedures have been initiated for all three soldiers. No immediate benefits are payable, but all three will be entitled to a preserved pension, based on length of service, which will be payable when they attain the age of 60 years.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is the policy of senior British military personnel to visit areas of Cyprus to monitor how British service personnel conduct themselves when off-duty; and if he will make a statement. [24552]

Mr. Soames: Senior British military personnel do not visit areas in Cyprus to monitor how British service personnel conduct themselves when off-duty. They monitor the behaviour of personnel off base through daily situation reports provided by the service police.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what personal contact has been made by (a) Her Majesty's Government and (b) senior British military personnel in Cyprus with the family of the Danish tour guide for whose manslaughter three British service personnel in Cyprus have been convicted and if he will make a statement. [24554]

Mr. Soames: The then Commander of British Forces Cyprus wrote a letter of condolence to the parents of Louise Jensen on 29 September 1994.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British military police personnel patrol areas of the Republic of Cyprus which British service personnel are known to frequent during off-duty hours; and if he will make a statement. [24558]

Mr. Soames: The tourist areas of Limassol and Larnaca are patrolled regularly by members of the Royal Military police and the RAF police. Precise numbers vary according to the perceived requirement.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which areas of the Republic of Cyprus are out of bounds for British service personnel and their families. [24560]

Mr. Soames: The area of Ayia Napa remains out of bounds to the vast majority of British service personnel and their dependants. The tourist areas of Limassol and Larnaca are subject to a 1 am curfew. Other areas and individual establishments are placed out of bounds for specific periods from time to time.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports are made by British military personnel on the behaviour of individual British service personnel serving on the island of Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [24566]

Mr. Soames: Daily situation reports are produced locally in Cyprus by the service police and reviewed by the chain of command. Depending on the nature or gravity of the incident, details may be reported up through command advisers or specialist staffs to central staffs in MOD.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24852]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO while they are current.

Because my Department operates a decentralised registry system, the number of files so marked could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

TRANSPORT

Sea Empress

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made by his marine accident investigation branch with its investigation into the grounding of the Sea Empress off Milford Haven on 15 February and the subsequent salvage operation; and if he will make a statement. [25849]

Sir George Young: The Chief Inspector of Marine Accidents has assured me that the investigation is progressing satisfactorily. The inspectors have interviewed many of the people from whom they need to take evidence and this process is continuing. All parties are co-operating with the inspectors.

There has been a good response to the public notices placed in the press inviting people to make representations to the inspectors which would assist them both in determining the circumstances and causes of the grounding and in relation to the subsequent salvage operations. The chief inspector has received 35 detailed representations and a further 63 letters from people, some of whom wish to give evidence to the inspectors.

The chief inspector's target for investigations of this kind is to submit his final report to me within 12 months of the date of an accident. Within this time, he has to carry out a consultation process on the draft, a statutory requirement which normally takes two months or more. If at any stage of the inquiry the chief inspector feels that he can usefully and properly publish interim recommendations, he will do so.

In order to carry out the investigation speedily and thoroughly, the chief inspector tells me that he has appointed five of his nine inspectors to the investigation.

I hope to publish the chief inspector's final report as soon as possible after receiving it.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24859]

Mr. Norris: There are 119 files in the Department of Transport, out of a total, 1,169,731, marked "Not to be seen by NAO without reference to the appropriate Head of Division", sometimes abbreviated to "Not for NAO Eyes". These figures refer to individual jackets—file parts. For each study, a number of divisions may be involved and each may possess a file with a number of parts.

The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO while they are current.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library the tendering documents for the construction contract for the A34 Newbury bypass. [25184]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 16 April 1996]: No.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 843, (1) if he will break down the costs of construction of the A34 Newbury bypass to indicate the cost of (a) the advance clearance contract, (b) the construction contract, (c) security during advance clearance and construction and (d) the enforcement by the under-sheriff of the various court orders for possession; [25340]

(2) if he will make it his policy not to enter into a construction contract for the A34 Newbury bypass until the Department of the Environment has completed its public consultation on a special area of conservation to protect the terrestrial pulmonate snail Vertigo Moulinisiana. [25338]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 16 April 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Cynog Dafis, dated 17 April 1996:

As you know, the Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about the costs of construction of the A34 Newbury Bypass and the timing of the award of the main works contract.

At the time of award, the value of the contract for the site clearance was £1.684M. Although most of the work is complete, the contract is still extant and the final cost has yet to be determined.

The cost of the security for the clearance work is likely to be in the order of £6M. This will cover the costs of the security firm hired by the clearance contractor and the costs incurred by the Under Sheriff in enforcing the eviction orders.

Much of the work involved overlaps the clearance contract and the enforcement work. For instance, the cost of felling the trees increased because it was necessary first to trim a tree before evicting the protestors to allow the tree to be felled, rather than simply felling the tree in one go. We cannot therefore disaggregate the costs.

We are still assessing the tenders for the main works contract so I cannot say what the costs of those works, and any associated security costs, will be.

It is too soon to say when we will award the contract for the main works, or to speculate on whether any part of the area qualifies for designation as an SAC. English Nature will advise the Government on the latter on the basis of further survey work we and they have commissioned in respect of Vertigo Moulinsiana.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to enter into the construction contract for the A34 Newbury bypass. [25183]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 16 April 1996:]: It is too early to say when the contract will be awarded.

Catalytic Converters

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many motor vehicles there are in the United Kingdom; and what estimate he has made of the percentage of them equipped with catalytic converters. [25013]

Mr. Norris: It is estimated that, at the end of September 1995, there were 25.51 million vehicles licensed to use Great Britain's roads. Of these 21.46 million were passenger cars of which, it is estimated, some 23 per cent. were equipped with catalytic converters. There is negligible use of catalytic converters in other vehicle sectors.

A40

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) accidents were reported, (b) casualties required hospital treatment and (c) fatalities occurred on the A40 between Oxford and Gloucester for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement. [24908]

Mr. Norris: The table shows the number of personal injury accidents on the A40 between Oxford and Gloucester which were reported to the police, and the number of casualties resulting. Non-fatal casualties are classified as either seriously or slightly injured—the police do not record whether or not hospital treatment was required.

Injury accidents and casualties on the A40 between Oxford and Gloucester: 1979–94

Crash Barriers

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will commission the Transport Research Laboratory to carry our a full-scale assessment of the effectiveness of crash cushions. [25151]

Mr. Watts: No, a study into the situations where there may be a need to deploy crash cushions on the highway network has already been carried out. Generally, their widespread use is not cost effective because of the unpredictability and infrequent occurrence of the type of accidents they prevent.

The Highways Agency has developed an effective prototype crash cushion, and other proprietary systems exist. They can be installed at particular sites on truck roads if in the light of the specific circumstances they provide an appropriate solution.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of accidents within the last two years where vehicles have left the road and descended down an embankment (a) where a barrier has been present and (b) where no barrier has been present. [25143]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is not available.

Coaches (Motorways)

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the report commissioned by his Department from the Confederation of Passenger Transport on the trial ban on coaches using the outside lanes of motorways; and when he will make a statement on the outcome of the ban. [24620]

Mr. Norris: A copy of the report produced by Wootton Jeffreys on behalf of the Confederation of Passenger Transport, formerly the Bus and Coach Council, was placed in the Library in January 1995. A statement on the outcome of the ban on coaches using the outside lane of motorways with three or more lanes will be made after two years' accident data have been studied.

Traffic Accidents (New Drivers)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many traffic accidents involving newly qualified drivers were reported in (a) 1993 and (b) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24584]

Mr. Norris: The table shows the number of injury road accidents in Great Britain in 1993 and 1994 which involved one or more drivers aged 17 to 21. The national road accident reporting system does not specifically identify newly qualified drivers, and final data for 1995 are not yet available.

Injury road accidents involving drivers aged 17–21: Great Britain: 1993 and 1994

	Year of accident
Accident severity	1993	1994
Fatal	764	724
Serious	8,567	8,309
Slight	42,560	41,271
Total	51,891	50,304

Air Safety

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations are currently in place to ensure that military and civilian aircraft do not use the same air space at the same time; and if he will make a statement. [25478]

Mr. Norris: The same rules apply to civil and military aircraft with regard to avoiding other traffic. Within controlled air space, aircraft comply with instructions received from air traffic control. Outside controlled air space, there are procedures and minimum flight visibility rules to enable pilots to see and avoid other traffic.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what safety regulations are currently in place in respect of amateur pilot training; and if he will make a statement; [25476]

(2) what plans he has to amend the safety aspects of the amateur pilot training regulations; and if he will make a statement. [25475]

Mr. Norris: The safety regulations relating to the private pilot's licence are laid down in schedule 8 to the Air Navigation (No. 2) Order 1995, and policy and guidance material for PPL training and testing is set out in "Civil Aviation Publication 53", issued by the Civil Aviation Authority.

The CAA is responsible for amendments to PPL training regulations. This is an on-going process, in light of factors such as technological advances or the development of new EU regulations.

Radar Detectors

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of banning the (a) sale and (b) possession of radar detectors for personal use. [25441]

Mr. Norris: The use of radar-type devices without a licence is an offence under the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949, and the Radio Communications Agency would not issue a licence for any apparatus capable of interfering with authorised radio use.

Helicopter Search and Rescue Services

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he plans to the helicopter search and rescue services operated by the coastguard on the south coast of England. [24573]

Mr. Norris: I refer to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for South Dorset (Mr. Bruce) on 28 March, Official Report, column 706.

Overloaded Vehicles

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current sum devoted to enforcement of regulations against overloading of vehicles. [24894]

Mr. Norris: It is estimated that, in 1996–97, the Vehicle Inspectorate will devote about £2 million to the enforcement of the weight limits of goods vehicles.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many vehicle weighing centres there are in the United Kingdom; and what is the average period during which they are in use; [24892]

(2) how many operators of heavy good vehicles were prosecuted for overloading in the last year for which information is available. [24891]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mr. Chris Davies, dated 17 April 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions on the number of HGV operators prosecuted for overloading offences and the number of vehicle weighing centres in the UK.

In the financial year 1994/95, the Vehicle Inspectorate prosecuted 4,385 overloading offences (this number includes drivers and operators). The figure does not include any prosecutions taken by local authorities, Trading Standards and the Police, information for which we do not hold.

The Vehicle Inspectorate is responsible for the maintenance and operation of 72 weighbridges throughout the UK. This figure does not include public weighbridges or private weighbridges (ie at operators' premises), information for which we do not keep. Information on the average period in which they are in use can only be provided at disproportionate cost. Roadside check programmes are arranged locally to allow maximum use of manpower and resources and use of the weighbridges will vary to ensure efficient use.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the proportion of journeys made by heavy goods vehicles operating in an overloaded condition. [24890]

Mr. Norris: No surveys have been carried out recently on which an estimate could be based.

However, in 1994–95 the Vehicle Inspectorate weighed 120,297 heavy goods vehicles of which 4,545 were prohibited from continuing their journey by reasons of being overloaded.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what legal obligations are placed upon customers to ensure that operators carrying their goods do not overload vehicles. [24893]

Mr. Norris: None. It is the responsibility of the driver and operator to ensure that vehicles are not overloaded.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will require customers to sign documentation indicating that they understand the loading restrictions placed upon the operators of heavy goods vehicles working on their behalf. [24895]

Mr. Norris: I have no plans to require customers to sign any form of documentation to this effect.

Accidents (Cost)

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost to the economy of each (a) fatal accident, (b) serious accident and (c) slight accident. [25146]

Mr. Norris: The values attributed to the avoidance of deaths and injuries in road accidents in 1994 were (a) fatal accident £913,100; (b) serious accident £108,100; (c) slight accident £10,600. These values take account of medical costs, lost production, human costs based on willingness to pay, the costs of police and courts, insurance administration, and property damage.

Pedestrians and Cyclists

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) pedestrians and (b) cyclists were killed on the roads in each year in Great Britain since 1979. [25400]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is shown in the table. Figures for 1995 should be available in July.

Road accident fatalities

	Pedestrians	Pedal cyclists
1979	2,118	320
1980	1,941	302
1981	1,874	310
1982	1,869	294
1983	1,914	323

Turnham Green Underground Station

Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many members of the London regional passengers committee (a) regularly use and (b) live near Turnham Green station; [25140]

(2) what representations he has received on the decision by London Transport that Piccadilly line trains should no longer stop at Turnham Green station from September; [25138]

(3) what assessment he has made of the effects, with special reference to early and late workers, of the decision that Piccadilly line trains should no longer stop at Turnham Green. [25139]

Mr. Norris: (a) None; (b) none.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport and I have each received a number of written representations about this decision, and I shall shortly discuss it with the chairman of London Transport. Decisions on the timetabling of Piccadilly line services are, however, an operational matter for LT and London Underground Ltd.

HOME DEPARTMENT

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24847]

Mr. Howard: No central record of files marked "Not for NAO Eyes" is maintained. The information could be obtained only by examining individually each of the 1.5 million extant files in my Department, and could therefore be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used rarely and in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the National Audit Office and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the National Audit Office while they are current.

Prisoner Transfers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he intends to take a decision on applications by prisoners detained in the United Kingdom to be transferred to prisons in the Irish Republic; and if he will make a statement; [24579]

(2) how many medical reports on Patrick Kelly he has requested in the last year; when the last report was (a) requested and (b) received by him; and when he expects to take a decision on Mr. Kelly's application to transfer to a prison in the Republic of Ireland. [24582]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 16 April 1996]: All requests made by prisoners seeking repatriation to the Republic of Ireland are determined on their individual merits. Repatriation in each case is subject to the consent of both jurisdictions and the prisoner concerned. Since 1 November 1995, when the Council of Europe convention on the transfer of sentenced persons came into force in the Republic, 70 requests have been received from prisoners in England and Wales wishing to be repatriated there. Twenty-nine requests including Mr. Kelly's have been referred to the Irish Republic for their consideration as required by the convention; a response has been received from the Irish authorities on Mr. Kelly's request and six others, one of which has now been granted.

Six medical reports commissioned by the Prison Services of England and Wales and of Northern Ireland have been received on Patrick Kelly's condition; the latest of these is dated 11 April. In addition, three medical reports have been forwarded by Mr. Kelly's solicitors. Mr. Kelly remains on normal location within Maghaberry prison where his condition is regularly monitored.

A decision on Mr. Kelly's repatriation request and all other outstanding requests will be made as soon as is possible.

Young Offenders

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made with his plans for a second demanding new regime for young offenders. [25618]

Miss Widdecombe: I am pleased to announce that we have decided to establish a new young offender institution on a site at the military corrective training centre at Colchester.

Colchester young offender institution will begin taking its first prisoners this autumn, building to a maximum population of 32 young men aged between 18 and 21.

The purpose of this initiative is to test the effectiveness of a regime similar to that followed by military detainees in improving the attitude and behaviour of young offenders and in reducing the level of their re-offending after release.

Young offenders will be sent to Colchester having been assessed as suitable for the regime and conditions there. They will not be volunteers. Their day will be long and active, beginning with reveille at 6 am and ending with lights out at 10 pm. They will experience a combination of discipline, education and training reflecting the military ethos of the MCTC.

Colchester young offender institution will operate under the young offender institution rules and Prison Service policy.

It will be run by staff from the Prison Service and by military staff appointed as prison officers. The military commandant if the MCTC will be appointed as the governor and he will have as his deputy an experienced Prison Service governor grade. Military staff appointed to the young offender institution will be thoroughly trained.

Young offenders' progress will be monitored while at Colchester and afterwards. The results will be compared with those from a group of similar young offenders from a normal young offender institution.

This is the second of two tough, disciplined and demanding new regimes for young offenders. The first is the high intensity training programme at Thorn Cross young offender institution which my right hon and learned Friend announced last year and which will take its first inmates in the summer.

Together, these initiatives represent a serious and determined attempt by Her Majesty's Government to find a way to break the cycle of re-offending among persistent young offenders.

Buckley Hall Prison

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the differences between the ratio of prison officers with non-medical responsibilities to prisoners at Buckley Hall and those at male category C prisons, in respect of all shifts. [24278]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 3 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 17 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the differences between the ratio of prison officers with non-medical responsibilities to prisoners at Buckley Hall prison and those at male category C prisons, in respect of all shifts.

The information requested, as at 1 April, is shown in the attached table. health care provision at Buckley Hall prison is contracted-out and so the ratio of staff to inmates includes all prisoner custody officers. The ratio for male category C prisons includes establishments where only a proportion of the prison population is made up of category C prisoners. The staffing ratio for these prisons comprises prison officers, senior officers and principal officers.

Information concerning the impact of shift patterns on the staffing ratio is not collected centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Staffing ratios for non health care staff to prisoners

Establishment	Staff: Inmate ratio
Buckley Hall	1:2.7
Male category C training establishments	1:2.1

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners required medical treatment following the break-in by prisoners of the hospital at Buckley Hall in August 1994; how many received medical treatment in local hospitals; and who was responsible for the payment of the health care received by them. [24283]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 3 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 17 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners requiring medical treatment following the break-in by prisoners to the hospital at Buckley Hall prison in August 1994; and who was responsible for the payment for the healthcare which they received.

No prisoner required medical treatment in the 24-hour period following the break-in by prisoners to the hospital at Buckley Hall prison in August 1994.

One prisoner subsequently received medical treatment in a local hospital and was returned to the prison. The Regional Health Authority responsible for the area in which this prisoner normally resided would be charged for his treatment.

CS Gas

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance he has issued concerning the use of CS gas in the trials now being conducted; [23966]

(2) what guidance is given to police forces testing the use of CS gas about its use in confined spaces; [23964]

(3) if he will deposit in the Library the guidelines he issued regarding the use of CS gas spray by police forces in the pilot areas. [24710]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has not issued guidance to police officers participating in the trials. The Association of Chief Police Officers has provided guidelines on the use of CS in any circumstances where this may be necessary and on the aftercare of subjects who have been sprayed. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Campsfield House

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if a site has been chosen to replace the proposed Campsfield House site. [25197]

Mr. Maclean: No. An alternative site is actively being sought.

Police Information Systems

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the organisations and police forces whose crime-fighting information will be co-ordinated via the new police information technology organisation; and if he will make a statement. [25023]

Mr. Maclean: The police information technology organisation exists in order to provide services to the police forces of England, Wales and Scotland. In particular, it operates the police national computer which holds information contributed by all these forces.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 29 March, Official Report, column 791, to the hon. Member for Stockton, South (Mr. Devlin) on police information systems and information technology, what evaluation he has made of extending the role of the Data Protection Registrar to cover arrangements for police data held by a private company following compulsory competitive tendering arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [25022]

Mr. Maclean: The Data Protection Act 1984 will continue to apply to such data.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 29 March, Official Report, column 791, to the hon. Member for Stockton, South (Mr. Devlin) on police information systems and information technology, if he will (a) list the specific exemptions, (b) set out the reduction in overall competition requirement, (c) list the number and nature of the likely contracts involved, their duration and what provision they will contain to ensure security of personal data and (d) list what tender procedures will apply; and if he will make a statement on the arrangements he proposes to ensure the security of personal data. [25021]

Mr. Maclean: The extension of compulsory competitive tendering to police authority information systems-information technology support services in England and Wales will be adjusted so as to exclude.

(a) the user support and systems operation, excluding routine maintenance, of integrated communications infrastructures in support of operational policing, including radio, telephony and data services.

(b) the user support and systems operation, excluding routine maintenance, of operational systems, and the provision of IS/IT technical expertise and support for investigations surveillance and crime preventions;

(c) the user support and systems operation, excluding routine maintenance, for the operational investigation of computer crime;

(d) all IS/IT services carried out by police authorities on behalf of regional crime squads; and

(e) all operational and specialist IS/IT training, and associated training services, in respect of police officers and the IS/IT training of civilian support to the extent such training relates to preventing and detecting crime; upholding the law; bringing to justice those who break the law; and protecting, helping and reassuring the community.

The overall competition requirement will be 55 per cent. It will be for individual police authorities to decide how best to meet their CCT obligations within the overall statutory framework. It is not possible at this stage to anticipate the number and nature of the likely contracts which might be involved.

Convictions (Disclosure)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to be able to publish a White Paper on the disclosure of convictions for those seeking access to children; and if he will make a statement. [25226]

Mr. Maclean: We expect to publish a White Paper setting out proposals for new arrangements for the disclosure of information from criminal records for employment and related purposes within the next few months.

Police Force

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects his target of 5,000 additional police officers to be achieved. [25137]

Mr. Maclean: The Government are providing an additional £180 million in funding to allow an extra 5,000 police officers to be recruited over the three-year period from April 1996 to March 1999. It is for chief officers of police and police authorities to determine the number of police officers in each force.

Onley Prison

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the operational guidelines and specifications issued to the tenderers for Onley. [25201]

Mr. Maclean: Copies of the design and build specification and supporting schedules, the operational specification and supporting schedules and an administrative paper which outlines proposed rules for the secure training centre at Onley were placed in the Library on 8 March.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when tenders were invited for the proposed secure training centre site at Onley; and which firms have (a) applied and (b) been invited to tender. [25196]

Mr. Maclean: Expressions of interest to design, build, manage and finance the third new secure training centre to be located at Onley, Northamptonshire, were invited on 9 August 1995. The following 11 companies or consortia expressed an interest:

Esmor-Keir

Group 4/Tarmac

JarmanCare Ltd.

Secure Care Services Ltd.

Castle Homes/Taylor Woodrow

Premier Prisons Ltd.

Team Rehabilitation Services

Henry Boot/STC Ltd.

UKCC/Wimpey/Impreglio

Tilbury Douglas/Bobby Ross Group

Bristol Management Centre.

Of these, the first four companies or consortia listed were invited to bid on 4 March.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of all assaults recorded by the police were domestic violence offences in each year since 1985. [24870]

Mr. Maclean: It is not possible to separately identify offences of domestic violence within the regular recorded crime series collected centrally by the Home Office.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many refuges for women escaping domestic violence have been notified to his Department. [24897]

Mr. Maclean: The availability of emergency shelter for those fleeing domestic violence is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. I understand that the latest information available from the Womens' Aid Federation shows that there are 418 refuges in England and 45 in Wales.

Special Constables

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average number of hours worked per week by special constables; [24940]

(2) what is the average number of hours worked per week by special constables in each constabulary; [24946]

(3) what is the average number of hours of training received by special constables. [24947]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available centrally.

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the funding provided by his Department for the training of special constables; [24896]

(2) if he will list by police force area the cost of the special constabulary, (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of the budget for each force. [24888]

Mr. Maclean: Specials are not paid but they must be recruited, trained, equipped and organised. They also receive allowances and reimbursement of out-of-pocket expenses. Each special constabulary is funded through the police grant for the force with which it is associated. It is for the chief officers to decide the level of funding to devote to their special constables and the proportion of those funds to commit to training purposes. Funds are occasionally augmented by support from sponsors.

Costs for specials are not identified separately by most forces and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. It is estimated that in their first year of service special constables cost about £1,400 and thereafter the annual cost is in the region of £500, although there are variations between forces.

The Government have found an additional £10 million to encourage chief officers to recruit more specials and to improve their conditions of service, administration and training. It will help to meet the cost of implementing the most urgent recommendations of the Home Office special constabulary working group, whose report is due to be published this summer. The working group has recommended that forces do more to identify separately special constabulary costs.

Most of the new fund is being offered on a challenge funding basis: forces must compete for the money through a bidding process, and those which secure tangible offers of support from other sources are favoured. But some £250,000 of the fund has been earmarked for a training package for those special constables who have been promoted into supervisory grades.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the number of special constables currently employed (a) in total and (b) in each constabulary; [24944]

(2) what is the number of special constables recruited in each year since 1992–93; [24942]

(3) how many special constables recruited in (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95 and (d) 1995–96 have since resigned from service. [24941]

Mr. Maclean: Special constables are not employed but are volunteers. The total number of special constables in post on 20 March was 19,834. This figure is broken down by police force area in the table.

The number of special constables recruited in the calendar years 1992 and 1993 were 5,450 and 5,479 respectively. Thereafter, numbers have been recorded on a financial year basis. In 1994–95, 4,564 specials were recruited, and a further 2,150 were recruited between April and September 1995. Figures are not yet available for the second half of 1995–96.

Those forces which keep records about resignations do not specifically include information about when each special concerned was recruited. Anecdotal evidence suggests that most specials resign after at least two years, which is longer than the national average for those involved in volunteering, and that they will have offered their services to the force for at least four hours every week.

Female Homicide Victims

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of female homicide victims were killed by present or former partners in each year since 1985. [24916]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is contained in the following table:

Percentage of female homicide victims killed by their spouse, cohabitant or former spouse or cohabitant, England and Wales[1]

Court Appearances (Polices Officers)

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the procedures introduced under section 48 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 in respect of the time spent by police officers making unnecessary court appearances; and if he will make a statement. [24887]

Mr. Maclean: It was in order to reduce the waste of time and money which results from "cracked" trials—when defendants who intend to plead guilty delay doing so until the day of the trial—that the practice of giving discounts for early guilty pleas was put on a statutory basis in section 48 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994.

The latest figures from the Lord Chancellor's Department show that the proportion of cases in which the plea was changed to guilty on the date of trial fell by five percentage points between the last quarter of 1994 and the last quarter of 1995. Although it is uncertain to what extent section 48 contributed to this fall, any decrease in the incidence of cracked trials saves the time of the police and of other witnesses, as well as saving court time.

Benefits (Police Officers)

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the number of police officers in receipt of (a) income support and (b) other benefits. [24930]

Mr. Maclean: The Police Federation and my hon. Friend the Member for Uxbridge (Sir M. Shersby), in his capacity as parliamentary adviser to the Police Federation, have made representations about those few police officers receiving such benefits.

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many neighbourhood watch schemes there are in operation in (a) each county in Wales, (b) Wales and (c) England; and if he will make a statement. [25012]

Mr. Maclean: Information on the number of neighbourhood watch schemes is collected by police force area, not county. At 31 March 1995, the figures were as follows:

Neighbourhood Watch schemes in Wales, by police force area

Area	Number
Dyfed-Powys	1,455
Gwent	363
North Wales	3,381
South Wales	1,911
Total	7,110

(b) Neighbourhood Watch schemes in England: 135,892.

The number of schemes in Wales rose by some 23 per cent. between December 1993 and March 1995. I am delighted that the people of Wales are embracing neighbourhood watch so enthusiastically. It has a very important part to play in the fight against crime.

Paedophiles

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he proposes to include the vetting of known paedophiles in his proposed White Paper on employment vetting; and when he expects to publish the White Paper. [24933]

Mr. Maclean: The White Paper, which will be published within the next few months, will set out proposals for new arrangements for the disclosure of criminal record information. In particular, it will propose new arrangements for checks on those seeking positions which will give them access to children. We also intend to publish shortly a consultation document which will canvass the full range of measures which could improve public protection against sex offenders, including additional supervision of offenders following their release from custody.

Prisoner Admissions

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people were received into Prison Service establishments as (a) untried and (b) convicted unsentenced during 1994 by age and institution; and what factors led to the omission of this information from Prison Statistics England and Wales 1994. [25198]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 17 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many young people were received into Prison Service establishments as (a) untried and (b) convicted unsentenced during 1994 by age and institution; and what factors led to the omission of this information from "Prison Statistics, England and Wales 1994".

The available information was published in table 3.10 of the 1994 edition of "Prison statistics, England and Wales" as usual. A copy of the table is attached for information. Information by individual Prison Service establishment is not published in "Prison statistics, England and Wales".

[1] Total receptions cannot be calculated by adding together receptions in each category because there is double-counting (see paragraph 10 of Introduction). However double-counting has been allowed for in the figures of receptions of prisoners under remand where the figures for "all remand" record once only a person received as an untried prisoner who is subsequently received also as a convicted unsentenced prisoner.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [24883]

Mr. Howard: Estimates of payments under private finance initiative contracts are as follows:

1995–96: £0.6 million

1996–97: £6.0 million

1997–98: £60.65 million

Stalking

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) the Association of Chief Police Officers, (b) the Director of Public Prosecutions, (c) the Police Federation, (d) the Suzy Lamplugh trust, and (e) others about the need to introduce a criminal offence of stalking. [24935]

Mr. Maclean: We have received no representations on this subject from the Association of Chief Police Officers, the Director of Public Prosecutions or the Police Federation. The Suzy Lamplugh trust has made no direct representations to the Home Office, but its concerns in this area are well known to us.

In the past year, we have received representations on this issue from:

the National Anti-Stalking and Harassment Campaign (NASH); individual police officers who have investigated cases of stalking;

The Mail on Sunday, The Portsmouth News and Yorkshire Television;

hon. Friends and hon. Members and noble Lords in another place; and 49 members of the public, including victims of stalking.

Buggery

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of non-consensual buggery of men were reported in the United Kingdom in (a) 1985 and (b) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24601]

Mr. Maclean: Following the introduction of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994, the offence of non-consensual buggery became male rape and statistics for the number of offences recorded in England and Wales in 1995 were published in table 6 of "Home Office Statistical Bulletin 3/96". Prior to the introduction of the Act, recorded offences of non-consensual buggery were contained within the overall offence of buggery and were not separately identifiable. Figures for total recorded offences of buggery in 1985 are published in table 2.16 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1994". Copies of both the above publications are available in the Library. Figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the Secretary of State in each Department respectively.

Custodial Sentences

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisoners remanded on criminal charges currently receive a custodial sentence following conviction. [24826]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Robin Corbett, dated 17 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what percentage of prisoners remanded on criminal charges currently receive a custodial sentence following conviction.

The available information on the proportion of remand prisoners in England and Wales subsequently receiving a custodial sentence is given in table 2.6 of "Prison statistics, England and Wales 1994" (Cm 3087), a copy of which is in the Library.

Seat Belts

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drivers and passengers were summoned for travelling without a seat belt in (a) 1990, (b) 1992, (c) 1994 and (d) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24600]

Mr. Maclean: There were 10,145 prosecutions for not wearing a seat belt in England and Wales in 1990, 11,258 in 1992 and 8,715 in 1994. Statistics for 1995 are not yet available.

Metropolitan Police (Complaints)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints the Metropolitan police have settled on cash terms in each year since 1990 and in the current year to date; how many of those have been on no-liability admission basis; what has been the total cash agreed for payment in each year; how many of these cases had a (a) racial and (b) sexual aspect; what was the cost per year relating to each of these; what is the total numbers of police officers involved in these cases; and how many have (i) been disciplined, (ii) left the police service and (iii) been subsequently promoted. [24624]

Mr. Maclean: Information about complaints made against the Metropolitan police, which have been settled on cash terms, is given in the table. The information requested in the latter part of the question is not available centrally and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Firearms

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many firearm permits and shotgun certificates were issued in Wales in 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24625]

Mr. Maclean: The latest available information on firearm and shot gun certificates was published in the Home Office statistical bulletin "Firearm Certificate Statistics, England and Wales 1994", issue 11/95, copies of which can be found in the Library. The bulletin contains the information that 768 new firearm certificates and 2,629 new shot gun certificates were issued in Wales during 1994.

Driving Insurance (Prosecutions)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions for driving without insurance there have been in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [25256]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Information on the number of proceedings at magistrates courts for the offence of using a motor vehicle uninsured against third party risks, for the latest five years which are available, are given in the table.

Proceedings at magistrates' courts for the offence of using a motor vehicle uninsured against third party risks, England and Wales:

Year	Number of offences
1990	317,797
1991	364,035
1992	404,492
1993	446,568
1994	446,559

Coroners (Wales)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many coroners were in post in Wales on Friday 29 March; [24479]

(2) how many coroners had been appointed to the new jurisdictions established by the Coroners Districts (Wales) Order 1996, by Saturday 30 March, to hold office from 1 April, giving their appointment dates; [24523]

(3) which lead authorities under the Coroners Districts (Wales) Order 1996 have made (a) requests and (b) arrangements to use the services of coroners appointed to other areas after 1 April. [24524]

Mr. Sackville: Responsibility for the appointment of coroners rests with the relevant councils. There were 16 coroners in post in Wales on 29 March. Five coroners were formally appointed to the new districts by 30 March to hold office from 1 April, with appointment dates of 29 March. I am informed that Wrexham county borough council and Denbighshire county council made arrangements to use the services of coroners appointed to another area. I am not aware of any other requests made.

Morgan Report

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to implement the recommendations of the Morgan report, on the role of local councils. [24932]

Mr. Maclean: Over 200 local authorities are already engaged in crime prevention partnerships of the kind endorsed in the Morgan report. Given this level of activity, we see no need to burden them with new statutory responsibilities.

Private Security Industry

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the transfer of core and ancilliary tasks from the police to the private security industry. [24885]

Mr. Maclean: We have conducted a major review of police core and ancillary tasks and a report of its findings was published on 27 June 1995. The review made no recommendations to transfer traditional police tasks to the private security industry, and we have no plans to do so.

Prisoner Entitlements

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the entitlements of detainees at (a) HMP Rochester (b) HMP Haslar and (c) Campsfield house to (i) receive incoming phone calls, (ii) make phone calls, (iii) receive personal and legal visitors and (iv) spend time in common areas not in cells or dormitories; and if he will make a statement. [25473]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter as regards the Prison Service has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given in consultation with the Immigration Service.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 17 April 1996.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the entitlements of Immigration Act detainees at Rochester and Haslar prisons, and at Campsfield House immigration detention centre.

The information provided about Campsfield House, which is not a Prison Service establishment, has been supplied by the Immigration Service.

The information requested is set out in the attached table.

	Rochester	Haslar	Campsfield House

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

National Consumer Council

19. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations he has received on the impact of the reductions in the budget of the National Consumer Council since 1993. [23935]

Mr. John M. Taylor: There is regular contact between the National Consumer Council and my Department on matters including the council's funding. I have received no other representations on this subject.

Heysham 2 Nuclear Power Station

23. Mr. Illsley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representation he has received regarding refuelling problems at the Heysham 2 nuclear power station; and if he will make a statement. [23941]

Mr. Eggar: This event, which involved the automatic shutdown of one of the two reactors at Heysham 2 on 29 January, was raised in the House by the hon. Member for Clackmannan (Mr. O'Neill) and other hon. Members during the debate on nuclear privatisation of 26 March. I have received no other representations on this subject. There was no danger from the event and it was not a matter that needed to be reported to Ministers under incident reporting criteria. However, Nuclear Electric has kept my Department informed about the event and the on-going investigation into its cause.

Intergovernmental Conference

24. Ms Quin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he next intends to meet his European Union counterparts to discuss the implication of the IGC on European trading and industrial policies. [23942]

Mr. Lang: My colleagues and I regularly meet our European Union counterparts to discuss a range of issues, including, when appropriate, the implication of the IGC on European trade and industrial policies.

West Cumbria Development Agency

25. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance his Department will give to West Cumbria development agency in the promotion of the Marypride project. [23943]

Mr. Oppenheim: Maryport is an assisted area. Any proposals for investments which create or safeguard jobs would be considered for support in accordance with the normal criteria for regional selective assistance. West Cumbria is also an objective 2 area and is eligible for European funding for business support measures, training and re-skilling activities.

Research and Development

26. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of our gross domestic project is spent on (a) Government and (b) private research and development and basic science. [23944]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In 1994, the latest year for which data is available, Government-funded R and D was 0.71 per cent. of GDP and private sector-funded R and D was 1.48 per cent. of GDP. Government-funded basic research amounted to about 0.24 per cent. of GDP and private sector-funded basic research was about 0.1 per cent. of GDP.

33. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on Government funding for research and development. [23951]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In 1995–96 the total expenditure on research and development by Government Departments is expected to have been about £5.6 billion.

Telecommunications Industries (Regulation)

27. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the regulation of the telecommunications industries. [23945]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Telecommunications have a key role to play in building UK competitiveness, both in attracting new investment and in revolutionising the way all companies do business. The UK led the way for telecommunications worldwide by privatising BT in 1984 and by progressively liberalising the UK market. This policy has been an outstanding success. Business and residential consumers have benefited from lower prices, a real and growing choice of operator, and innovative new services. BT's prices have reduced by around 40 per cent. overall in real terms since 1984. Liberalisation has also stimulated the introduction of multimedia services, which will enable the UK to be at the forefront of the transition to the information society. The Government launched the information society initiative in February to increase awareness of the new opportunities created.

Manufacturing Output

29. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the level of manufacturing output in the UK as a percentage of gross domestic product; and what is the average for the European Union. [23947]

Mr. Oppenheim: The OECD estimates that in 1993 manufacturing output accounted for 21 per cent. of gross domestic product the European Union and, measured on a comparable basis, 19 per cent. in the UK.

Ice Cream (Inquiry)

30. Ms Church: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he is taking following the investigation by the Office of Fair Trading into the veracity of the evidence given by Bird's Eye Walls to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission inquiry into ice cream published in 1994. [23948]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The matter is being considered with a view to deciding whether a criminal investigation should be undertaken. The decision taken will be announced in due course.

Fossil Fuel Reserves

31. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimates he has made of the life-span of remaining United Kingdom fossil fuel reserves. [23949]

Mr. Page: Total British reserves of oil and gas in all known discoveries could, at 1994 rates of consumption, last respectively for 19 and 34 years. If the full potential from all possible future discoveries were to be included these would increase to over 50 years for both fuels.

The remaining reserves of coal at existing mines are estimated at around 1 billion tonnes, while 53 million tonnes were extracted in 1995. However, the prospects for future coal production are limited not by the resource base but by the economics of opening new mines.

Aerospace Industry (Lancashire)

32. Mr. Atkins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received about the aerospace industry in Lancashire. [23950]

Mr. Eggar: My Department has regular contact with the aerospace industry in Lancashire, including the Consortium of Lancashire Aerospace.

Visible Trade Balance

34. Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for how many years since 1979 the visible trade balance has been in deficit. [23952]

Mr. Nelson: The visible trade balance has been in deficit for 14 of the 17 years since 1979.

Gas Contracts

35. Mr. Rooney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from the Gas Consumers Council about the mis-selling of domestic gas contracts by Swebgas. [23954]

Mr. Eggar: The Gas Consumers' Council has kept my Department appraised of its views as to the progress of gas competition in the south-west.

Manufacturing Output

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the level of manufacturing output in the United Kingdom; and what is the average for the European Union. [23929]

Mr. Oppenheim: Over the last European economic cycle, manufacturing output grew by 1.75 per cent. per year in the United Kingdom compared with 1 per cent. per year in the European Union.

Sutton Enterprise Agency

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the work of Sutton enterprise agency. [23946]

Mr. Richard Page: The Sutton enterprise agency provides a valuable service, particularly to start-up and micro businesses in the borough. I welcome its involvement in local business link developments, particularly its co-location with other business support organisations in Sutton. This will provide an excellent opportunity to develop, through business link London south, a range of quality services appropriate to local business needs.

Institute of Animal Health

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 27 March, Official Report, column 606, what are the reasons for the reduction in the number of scientists at the Institute of Animal Health between 1993 and 1995. [25186]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The change in number of scientists employed at the Institute of Animal Health's Neuropathogenesis Unit between 1993 and 1996, as given in my previous answer, was largely due to the expiry of a number of fixed-term contracts. In particular, the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council refocused its BSE programme, winding down the first and introducing a second phase. This involved first a reduction and then an increase in number of staff. As far as possible, continuity of research effort has been maintained.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24860]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No central record is kept by my Department of files marked "Not for NAO Eyes". For each NAO study, a number of divisions in different locations may be involved and each may possess in its registries a file with a number of parts—for example, individual jackets. The information requested is therefore not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO while they are current.

HEALTH

BSE

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the reliability of the research carried out by Dr. Harash Narang into tests on live animals and humans to detect BSE and CJD. [24907]

Mr. Horam: Dr. Narang has proposed a number of tests to detect bovine spongiform encephalopathy and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. The first of these concerned a technique for examining the brain tissue of dead animals but in trials this proved to be no more successful in identifying cases of BSE than other better-established techniques.

Dr. Narang has also stated that he has developed urine tests for identifying BSE and CJD in live animals and humans. Such test, if effective, would be of great value and Dr. Narang has been invited to supply details of them so they can be independently evaluated. However, he has so far declined to do this although this question is still being explored with him.

Health Authority Cars

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cars, and of what engine capacity, were provided for senior managers and board members of (1) the former Yorkshire regional health authority, (2) the former Northern regional health authority and (3) the present Yorkshire and Northern regional health authority in each year since 1992. [22895]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table.

	Northern regional health authority	Yorkshire regional health authority	Northern and Yorkshire regional health authority	Northern and Yorkshire regional office
1992–93	101	261	—	—
1993–94	124	224	—	—
1994–95	—	—	231	—
1995–96	—	—	87	—
1996–97	—	—	—	44

1. Engine capacity varied from 1100 cc to 2500 cc. The costs of any car in excess of a base vehicle were borne by the employee.

2. Leases were issued using the terms laid down by Whitley Council.

Community Health Councils (Chief Officers)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations he has received from (a) individual community health councils, (b) the Association of Community Health Councils in England and Wales and (c) other organisations in respect of his Department's proposed regrading procedure of community health council chief officers; and if he will make a statement; [25459]

(2) if he will list those community health councils whose chief officer will financially (a) gain and (b) lose from his Department's proposed regrading procedure of community health council chief officers; and if he will make a statement. [25458]

Mr. Horam: The Department has not proposed a formal regrading procedure for community health council chief officers. The national health service executive has recently completed some exploratory work into how a common national framework for chief officer gradings might be created. Regional offices of the NHS executive may choose to use that work as a basis for any regrading of chief officer posts taking into account any other local factors that they consider appropriate. A letter setting this out was sent to regional offices on 14 February and copies will be placed in the Library.

Written representations about the letter have been received from the Trent Regional Association of Community Health Councils, the Society of Community Health Council Staff, and Sheffield Community Health Council. The Association for Community Health Councils for England and Wales also made representations about the letter at a meeting with me on 26 March 1996.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24848]

Mr. Horam: The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the National Audit Office and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO while they are current.

The usual practice in the Department is to assign the marking to individual documents rather than to files. Information on the number of documents so marked could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

South Manchester University Hospital NHS Trust

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what fees were paid by the South Manchester University Hospital NHS trust to the Audit Commission in 1995–96; what audit work was carried out by the commission during the year; what part the commission had in discovering the accountancy error that led to the closure of 64 NHS beds in Manchester, and if he will make a statement. [25295]

Mr. Horam: The Audit Commission played no part in discovering the accounting error. The payment of fees is a matter for South Manchester University Hospitals National Health Service trust and the right hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Peter Hadfield, trust chairman, for details.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what additional funding is made available to hospital trusts to take account of the proximity to airports and motorways; [25296]

(2) what extra funding was made available in the last financial year to the South Manchester University Hospital NHS trust to take account of its proximity to Manchester Airport and the motorway network. [25297]

Mr. Horam: Trusts are not funded directly by my Department but from contracts with purchasers.

The proximity to airports and the motorway network will impact mainly on accident and emergency work and be reflected in the contracts for this work placed with trusts by their host health authority.

Abortions

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many partial birth abortions have been carried out for the latest year for which figures are available; [25298]

(2) if he will make it his policy to ban the technique of partial birth abortion in the United Kingdom. [25300]

Mr. Horam: We are not aware of this procedure being used in the United Kingdom. Methods of abortion are a matter of clinical judgment.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department has issued on partial birth abortion. [25299]

Mr. Horam: None.

SOCIAL SECURITY

State Pensions

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people's national insurance contributions record leaves them without entitlement to a full retirement pension; and how many of these are (a) women below retirement age and (b) women above retirement age. [20736]

Mr. Heald [pursuant to his reply 19 March, Official Report, column 181]: The information I provided was incomplete. A revised answer follows.

At 31 March 1995, 4,642,330 people over state pension age in Great Britain were in receipt of either a contributory or non-contributory state retirement pension below the standard rate of basic retirement pension. Of these, 4,449,500 were women.

Some people who are over the state pension age and not in receipt of state pension may be deferring their pension in order to earn increments.

Equivalent information is not available for people under state pension age or for people over state pension age who have no entitlement to any state pension.

Notes:

1. The figures do not include people receiving Incapacity Benefit or Widows Benefit in place of Retirement Pension.

2. The figures include 540 men and 1,688,000 women who are not entitled to a full pension on their own national insurance record, but receive a full pension based on their deceased spouses contribution record.

State Retirement Pension

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people's national insurance contributions record leaves them without entitlement to any state retirement pension. [20735]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested.

The number of people over state pension age, 60 for women and 65 for men, in 1995 is projected to be 10.4 million[1].

At 31 March 1995 the number of people over state pension age who receive some contributory retirement pension was 9.6 million[2].

The table gives a detailed breakdown of this figure. In addition:

At September 1994 the number of people receiving widows benefit in place of retirement pension was 47,000[1].

At March 1994, the latest date for which figures are available, the number of people receiving invalidity benefit over state pension age was 297,000[4].

Some people who are over state pension age and not in receipt of state pension may be deferring their pension in order to earn increments.

	Number of beneficiaries
Category A basic pension—men	3,322,150
Category A basic pension—women	2,421,010
Category BL basic pension—women	1,259,300
Category ABL basic pension—women	696,600
Category B—widows	1,751,190
Category B—widowers	540
Category A or B additional pension only	14,880
Graduated Retirement Benefit without Category A or B	125,910
Total	9,591,580

Note:
Key to table:
Cat A—pension derived from own contributions.
Cat BL—pension derived from spouse' contributions (figure includes a small proportion with underlying entitlement to Cat A pension where both husband and wife reached State Pension age before 6/4/79). Full rate is approximately 60 per cent. of Cat A rate.
Cat ABL—pension derived from both own and spouse's contributions. Full rate is approximately 60 per cent. of Cat A rate.
Cat B—pension derived from late spouse's contributions. Full rate same as Cat A.

Child Support Disregard

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost in the 1996–97 financial year of providing a child support disregard of (a) £5 per week, (b) £10 per week and (c) £15 per week; and what are the assumptions upon which these three costings are based. [23331]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: It is estimated that the cost of introducing a £5 maintenance disregard in 1996–97 would be around £50 million; the cost of a £10 disregard would be around £90 million; and the cost of a £15 disregard would be around £120 million. The annual cost of a disregard is likely to double over time as the Child Support Agency caseload increases.

These estimates apply the disregard to child support maintenance and other forms of child maintenance, and assume that the disregard would apply to lone parents and parents with care who have entered into a new partnership. Other assumptions include the number of full child support assessments where the parent with care receives income support, and rates of compliance by absent parents.

EDS Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what out-sourcing contracts his agencies have with the EDS software computer system; what is the current cost; when the contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement; [23733]

(2) if he will set out the terms of the contract the Child Support Agency has with the EDS computer system; and if he will make a statement. [23539]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The contract to outsource the Department's data centre services was awarded to EDS Ltd. on 1 June 1995 and is for a period of 10 years. The contract is volume/output based with a value depending on future levels of business.

Current estimates are that charges will be in the region of £600 million over the 10-year period.

Other details relating to the terms and conditions of this contract, and the Child Support Agency's contract with EDS, are commercial in confidence.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how long a claimant of attendance allowance going abroad outside the European Union (a) may receive attendance allowance payments and (b) is entitled to resume attendance allowance payments; and if these entitlements are available to disability living allowance recipients. [24062]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: A recipient of attendance allowance or disability living allowance going abroad, outside the European Union, may continue to receive that benefit provided that the conditions of entitlement continue to be met and their right to reside in Great Britain is not subject to any limitation or condition, for:

(a) up to 26 weeks if the absence, when it began, is for a temporary purpose and does not last for a continuous period exceeding 26 weeks; or

(b) as long as the absence is

(i) temporary and

(ii) for the specific purpose of being treated for incapacity, or a disabling condition, which begins before they leave Great Britain, and

(iii) the Secretary of State certifies that it is consistent with the proper administration of the Act that he should be treated as though he were present in Great Britain.

Special arrangements exist for people who are abroad as serving members of Her Majesty's forces and their families and for certain airmen, mariners and continental shelf workers.

On return to this country, people who meet the above conditions while abroad will continue to receive attendance allowance or disability living allowance, providing they continue to satisfy the conditions of entitlement and have no limitation placed on their right to reside in Great Britain. People who do not satisfy the above conditions whilst abroad may reclaim attendance allowance or disability living allowance on return to this country and requalify in the normal way.

Social Fund

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance is issued to social fund adjudicating officers in cases where an application is made prior to establishing a fair rent on the applicant's tenancy. [24128]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Secretary of State's directions 12(o), 23(f) and 29(d) exclude a payment of a budgeting loan, crisis loan or community care grant respectively to meet housing costs, including rent. There is an exception to this rule for both budgeting loans and crisis loans for rent in advance where the landlord is not a local authority. Other exceptions which apply to these loans are charges for board and lodging accommodation and residential charges for hostels, other than for deposits. In the case of budgeting loans this is where such charges are payable in advance to secure accommodation. There is no guidance on the rent exclusion, since the directions are self explanatory. The Secretary of State's directions and guidance to social fund officers are contained in the social fund guide, a copy of which is held in the Library.

With the exceptions referred to above, the reason for excluding help with rent from the social fund is to avoid duplication of help from the housing benefit scheme. There are procedures in place to ensure that both local authorities and rent officers make timeous determinations of claims and that payment on account is made where a delay is not due to the claimant failing to supply all the necessary information.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24861]

Mr. Burt: There are 20 live master files in this Department marked "Not to be seen by National Audit Office (NAO) without reference to the appropriate Head of Division", sometimes abbreviated to "Not for NAO eyes". Each file usually relates to a specific NAO study and may run into number of volumes, covering the course of the study from feasibility work to the production of a Treasury minute. Each study could involve a number of divisions in different locations, who may hold duplicates of all or part of the master file, as necessary.

The marking "Not for NAO eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO while they are current.

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to receive the report from the Industrial Injuries advisory committee on chronic bronchitis and emphysema; and if he will make a statement. [25180]

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the main recommendations of the report of the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council review of the criterion used to diagnose chronic bronchitis and emphysema in coal mines; and when the report will be published. [24818]

Mr. Roger Evans: We have now received a copy of the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council report and are considering it carefully. The report will be published within the next few weeks.

Compensation Recovery Unit

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) the number of appeals against clawback decisions taken by the compensation recovery unit, (b) the number and percentage of which were successful and (c) the average amount repaid to successful appellants in each quarter of the last five years. [24002]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ursula Brennan to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 16 April 1996:

As Peter Mathison is away from the office on annual leave at the moment, the Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will list (a) the number of appeals against clawback decisions taken by the Compensation Recovery Unit (CRU), (b) the number and percentage of which were successful and (c) the average amount repaid to successful appellants in each quarter of the last five years.

Since the introduction of the scheme in 1990 to the 31 March 1996, 825 appeals against clawback decisions were received by the CRU. 682 have been processed so far, out of which 374 (54.8%) were successful. Of those which were successful, the CRU reviewed the decision without reference to the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS) in 318 cases and in the remainder of the cases the appeal was allowed/partially allowed by the ITS.

The average amounts repaid to successful appellants in each quarter of the last five years are given in the annex attached.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many incoming telephone calls were made to the Child Support Agency client helpline; how many received ring tone no reply, number busy or number unobtainable; how many were successfully answered; and what percentage of the total number of incoming calls were ineffective. [24645]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Miss Liz Lynne, dated 16 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about telephone calls made to the Child Support Agency.

Information on incoming calls to the Child Support Agency Client Help Line (CHL) is available for the period from September 1994 to February 1996, and the details are as follows: incoming calls 7,022,325; answered by BT National Screening Centre 933,844; answered by CHL 2,523,082; call terminated before being answered, number busy or unobtainable 3,565,399. Of the total calls received, 50.77% received neither a personal nor a recorded answer.

Like any other organisation where a great deal of contact with clients is by telephone, calls to the Agency that are initially unsuccessful for whatever reason (be it the client choosing to ring at another time or experiencing difficulty in connection) will almost certainly be repeated and the future contact will be successful.

Up to February 1995 calls were diverted to the BT National Screening Centre when they were unable to reach the CHL queue, and a recorded message was delivered to the caller. However, this was costly both for the Agency and the callers, and since February 1995 the diversion of calls has only taken place outside office opening hours.

I hope this is helpful.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Careers Service Companies

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the possible delays in the development and improvement in the services provided by the careers service companies from the competition process. [25173]

Mr. Paice: My right hon Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment is satisfied that careers service companies have continued to develop and improve the services they provide. Assessment of the service provided is in the chief inspector's annual report on the careers service, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what sums she will make available to fund the careers advice for adults to be provided by the new careers advice companies. [25169]

Mr. Paice: The primary role of the careers service is to provide careers guidance to its statutory client group, who are young people in education and those who have recently left. The Government are investing over £200 million this year to support the careers service in this role. Careers service companies attract funding from a wide range of sources to fund their adult guidance activities, including indirectly from the Department.

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make it her policy to license careers companies which satisfactorily meet their contractual obligations with her Department. [25175]

Mr. Paice: We have no plans to license careers service companies at this time.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Forman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects the reports of the joint study groups of Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals, Treasury and her Department's officials on the scope for private finance initiative in higher education. [24987]

Mr. Paice: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects the joint working group to report to her in early summer.

Careers Advice

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to provide careers advice for adults wishing to extend their education. [25171]

Mr. Paice: A consultation exercise has recently been undertaken to consider ways to take forward lifetime learning, including careers advice for adults. There was an excellent response from a wide range of interested parties, and this is now being analsyed. It would be premature to make any announcements at this stage. The Government will respond in due course.

Contracting

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will postpone or abandon the contracting round due to take place this year. [25174]

Mr. Paice: No. The contracts for the first round Pathfinder careers services end in March 1997. To secure the provision of services from April 1997 onwards, a prospectus will be published next month.

In-work Training

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many 16 to 24-year-olds in the west midlands are in in-work training; and, of those, how many are employed in the manufacturing industry. [25167]

Mr. Paice: The number of employed status trainees on major schemes funded by the Government via training and enterprise councils in the west midlands as at 25 February 1996 is:

Youth programmes = 13,728 (total in training 26,596)

Training for work = 341[1] (total in training 6,672)

Total: 14,069 (total in training 33,269)

[1]Includes 35 self employed.

It is not possible to extract the numbers employed in manufacturing from the overall figures.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what sums have been provided in 1995–96 to fund the range of advice and information centres and other schemes run directly or indirectly by TECs; and what assessment she has made of the cost effectiveness of transferring these funds in future years to careers services. [25170]

Mr. Paice: In 1995–96 training and enterprise councils were provided with £13.4 million to fund careers guidance for 13 and 14-year-old children and £1.5 million to fund careers libraries. From April 1996 the routing of all careers guidance and careers libraries funding will be through careers services. This simplifies the way the money is provided since careers services—as direct providers of services—are closer to schools and colleges and to young people.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to ensure increased liaison between the local community and training and enterprise councils. [24056]

Mr. Paice: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 27 March, Official Report, column 620.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the current procedures for investigating a complaint against the training and enterprise councils; and what plans there are to bring the complaints system under the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration. [24058]

Mr. Paice: As private companies, it is for training and enterprise councils to deal with any complaints made against them. The Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration has no jurisdiction over private companies. I welcome the fact that the TEC National Council's framework for local accountability, which is endorsed by all TECs, emphasises the necessity for TECs to have robust and well-publicised complaints procedures.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what investigations she is undertaking into child care facilities provided by training and enterprise councils; what plans she has to promote a national uniformity of such facilities; and if she will make a statement. [24057]

Mrs. Gillan: All training and enterprise councils deliver the Department's out-of-school child care initiative, which gives grant support towards the start up costs of new out-of-school child care provision. In making grants to child care providers, TECs must have regard to four national criteria: quality, viability, labour market impact and extra child care places. Thereafter, the initiative is flexible and allows TECs to tailor the delivery to meet the needs of the local community. The initiative has been fully evaluated. A copy of the report, which was published on 23 January 1996, has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to include a commitment to equal opportunities as criteria for training and enterprise councils being issued with a three-year licence; and if she will make a statement. [24059]

Mr. Paice: Equal opportunities is already addressed in the licensing criteria. In addition, the licensing agreement requires licensed training and enterprise councils to implement their strategies for equal opportunities.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals she has to introduce a stricter policy on the disclosure of contracts for the training and enterprise councils; and if she will make a statement. [24060]

Mr. Paice: Training and enterprise councils are private companies. It is for them to decide whether they should disclose details of contracts within the guidelines of the code of practice on open government.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research she has undertaken to review the boundaries of training and enterprise councils areas; and if she will make a statement. [24061]

Mr. Paice: The existing network of training and enterprise councils reflects the make-up of local labour markets and the views of local partners, including the private sector. I have no plans to review boundaries, but would consider any proposals by TECs on their merits.

Left-handedness

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what estimate she has made of the proportion of left-handed pupils in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools; [25368]

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact of left-handedness on educational attainment; and if she will make a statement. [25366]

Mrs. Gillan: Left-handedness is not recognised as a special educational need within the meaning of the Education Acts. The Department does not collect information on what proportion of pupils are left-handed, nor on whether being left-handed has an impact on likely educational achievement.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by her Department. [24851]

Mr. Robin Squire: The ex-Department for Education has 104 files marked "Not for NAO Eyes" out of a total of over 700,000. The several million records created by the former department of Employment are handled at a number of locations across the country and although some will be similarly marked, the number could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The marking is used in accordance with the agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office under which documents relating to the handling of relations between departments and the NAO and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO while they remain current.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General how many files marked "Not for NAO Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24855]

The Attorney-General: The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO while they are current. There are 13 such files held in the Departments for which I am responsible, two of which are divided into two parts.

PRIME MINISTER

Interception of Communications Tribunal

Mr. Luff: To ask the Prime Minister what arrangements have been made following the expiry of the terms of appointment of the members of the interception of communications tribunal on 10 April; and if he will make a statement. [25619]

The Prime Minister: Sir David Calcutt QC has been appointed vice-president of the tribunal. He and Mr. Peter Scott QC have been re-appointed to the tribunal for a further period of five years. Two new members, Mr. Robert Seabrook QC and Mr. William Carmichael, have also been appointed for a term of five years.

Hong Kong

Mr. Byers: To ask the Prime Minister if he met (a) Li Ka Shing, (b) David Choy, (c) Rong Yien, (d) Stanley Ho, (e) T. T. Tsui and (f) C. H. Tung at events during his visit to Hong Kong. [24569]

The Prime Minister: I met a broad range of business men, politicians and other opinion formers during my recent visit. I understand that Mr. Li Ka Shing attended a dinner at which I was present and Mr. C. H. Tung was present at my meeting with the Executive Council, of which he is a member. I an not aware of any other occasion.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Council

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many posts he estimates will be lost in the British Council over the next three years; and at what United Kingdom locations; [24912]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of posts within the British Council which will be lost by redundancy over the next three years; and at what cost. [24913]

Mr. Hanley: Following the recent public expenditure survey settlement, the British Council is still discussing with us its proposal for future manpower levels and for the distribution of resources.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the British Council has to close United Kingdom offices within the next three years. [24898]

Mr. Hanley: The British Council is looking at options for further restructuring its UK network. This could involve the closure of some offices.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the annual budgets for the British Council for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97; and what are the projected budgets for (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99. [24910]

Mr. Hanley: The information is as follows:

£ million

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99

[2] This figure includes £750,000 OPM.
[3] These figures include estimates for OPM of £2.4 million.
[4] These planning figures exclude OPM.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the effect of his proposed reductions in the British Council's budget over the next three years on the council's overseas operations. [24914]

Mr. Hanley: The reductions in the British Council's budget will require some adjustment to its overseas operations. The council has proposed a number of options which are still under consideration.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how he proposes to fund future redundancies within the British Council. [24911]

Mr. Hanley: The question of the funding of future redundancies is under discussion.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the current United Kingdom staffing levels within the British Council by location. [24915]

Mr. Hanley: The latest figures available for the British Council United Kingdom staffing levels, including the Central Bureau for Educational Visits and Exchanges, are as follows:

Area	Number of staff
London	[1]700.00
Manchester	[1]498.00

Taiwan

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Taiwan; and what plans he has to visit the country. [25158]

Mr. Hanley: Her Majesty's Government have no formal diplomatic relations with Taiwan. Informal links in trade, investment, tourism and educational exchanges have increased and improved in recent years.

I also refer the hon. Member to my response during the Adjournment debate on our relations with Taiwan on 13 March, Official Report, columns 940–47.

Neither I nor my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary have plans to visit Taiwan.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many files marked "Not for NAO Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24849]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: This department currently holds 16 files marked "Not for NAO Eyes". This includes one file held at an overseas post.

The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO are not automatically available to the NAO while they are current.

Entry Clearance Staff

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to introduce charter standards for the work of entry clearance staff; and if he will make a statement. [25344]

Mr. Hanley: Entry clearance issuing posts conform with a set of standards laid down in "Best Practice", a copy of which will shortly be placed in the Library of the House. Those standards include the requirement that entry clearance sections operate within the spirit of the citizens charter.

Migration and Visa Correspondence Unit

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many letters from hon. Members were answered by the migration and visa correspondence unit in 1994; and how many were answered within 15 working days. [25345]

Mr. Hanley: The unit answered 6,137 letters. The number of letters to which the unit failed to reply within 15 working days in 1994 is not readily available, more than 93 per cent. of letters received in the first quarter of 1996 were replied to within 15 working days.

Visa Applications

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to ensure that a reference number is given to visa applications which are withdrawn at the pre-sift stage; and if he will make a statement. [25346]

Mr. Hanley: Entry clearance officers are required—in accordance with "Diplomatic Service Procedure: Entry Clearance", volume 1, chapter 6.6, a copy of which is in the Library of the House—to maintain a record of applicants who withdraw their applications after pre-assessment.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure that a decision by an entry clearance office to refuse a visa application is checked by an entry clearance manager; and if he will make a statement. [25347]

Mr. Hanley: Guidance on this to entry clearance officers is contained in "Diplomatic Service Procedure: Entry Clearance", volume 1, chapter 9.8, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Meat Safety

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when recommendations from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, concerning meat safety at slaughterhouses, specifically dealing with the deboning of cattle over 30 months in age, were communicated to slaughterhouses; how this was undertaken; and what measures will be taken in order to ensure compliance. [23211]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 April 1996]: A consultation letter was sent out on the 28 and 29 March by my officials to all relevant organisations including those in the red meat industry, explaining the implications of SEAC's recommendations and the measures the Government are proposing to take to minimise the risk to the public from BSE, in the light of SEAC's advice. This includes detailed proposals for consultation on the deboning of cattle over 30 months in age, an indication of the immediate measures taking effect from 29 March relating to the banning from sale of meat over 30 months for human consumption, the banning of meat and bone meal from feedingstuffs and the new specified bovine material order and proposed amendments to the fresh meat regulations.

Further consultations, where appropriate, will be held with the industry. My officials will, of course, take due account of comments received from the slaughterhouse sector on all these issues.

The Meat Hygiene Service will be responsible for ensuring local compliance with these regulations. Fresh instructions have been issued to MHS, and resources are currently being deployed on a national basis, to ensure strict adherence to all of the measures necessary to restore public confidence in beef.

Contracts

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many contracts for goods or services have been awarded by his Department and its executive agencies on the basis of single negotiated contracts in each of the last three years; if he will list the companies involved and the value of the contract in each case; what percentage this represented of contracts awarded by his Department and its agencies after competitive tendering; and, in each case, why the contracts were awarded on the basis of a single negotiated tender. [22864]

Mr. Boswell: From records held centrally, over the last three financial years the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and its executive agencies have let 383 contracts via the single negotiated process. These represent 19 per cent. of the total number reported in my recent reply.

The additional information requested, where it is not confidential, has been listed in the schedules. However, it has not been possible with the resources available to list the reasons why individual decisions to use single negotiated tender were taken. The cost would have been entirely disproportionate. The criteria available to the Ministry for opting for single negotiated contracts are limited and encompass time constraints which do not permit competitive tendering; technical compatibility with existing equipment or systems; or numbers of suppliers restricted to non-competitive levels.

Where research is concerned, much is done under long-standing commissions or "umbrella" contracts with research councils and other bodies. Apart from these, free-standing contracts are awarded, some of which are single tender negotiated contracts. The latter option is taken either when there is reasonable certainty that there is only one contractor with the knowledge to undertake the work, or when the idea for work comes through a concept note and it would clearly be an infringement of intellectual property rights and unfair on the contractor concerned to allow others access to the idea.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidelines are currently in force in his Department and its executive agencies relating to competitive tendering and the use of single negotiated tenders; on what grounds single negotiated tenders can be used; and what procedures are in place within his Department to ensure that the use of single negotiated tenders in competitive tendering processes is justified in all cases. [22850]

Mr. Boswell: The Government's public purchasing policy consolidated guidelines require goods and services to be acquired by competition unless there are convincing reasons to the contrary. In addition, the EC procurement directives and the World Trade Organisation government procurement agreement require most contracts above specified thresholds to be awarded following competition, subject to certain specified exceptions. The central unit on procurement's guidance note No. 40 provides an overview of best practice in the competitive tendering process.

In carrying out its purchasing my Department follows these guidelines and has, where possible, incorporated them directly into its own internal guidance. It is intended to consolidate the available guidance as part of the review of the Ministry's purchasing procedures and guidance manual, which is currently under way.

The criteria for opting for single negotiated contracts are limited and encompass time constraints which do not permit competitive tendering; technical compatibility with existing equipment or systems; or numbers of suppliers restricted to non-competitive levels. Formal arrangements for controlling the use of single negotiated contracts will also be incorporated in the revised purchasing procedures and guidelines manual.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is taken to ensure that blades used for dismembering potentially BSE infected material at slaughterhouse are disinfected. [23212]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 April 1996]: The Meat Hygiene Service ensures that equipment which comes into contact with fresh meat is cleansed and disinfected frequently during the course of the working day, as required by the Fresh Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1995 as amended. Sterilisers are sited close to work stations to enable this to be done.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24845]

Mr. Boswell: The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which current documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO are not automatically available to the NAO. The use of the marking is strictly controlled and is removed from files as soon as the subject matter is no longer current.

There are unlikely to be a great number of files with this marking but the Department does not have a centralised registry system and to collect this information from the large number of individuals registries would be disproportionately expensive.

Nitrates

Mr. Burden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the results of the research by Aberdeen university in 1995, commissioned by his Department, on the effect of dietary nitrate intake. [25030]

Mrs. Browning: This study at Aberdeen university on the metabolism of dietary nitrate in man is not due for completion until the spring of 1997. Preliminary results suggest that nitrate may play a significant role in protecting the body from bacterial infection, although a full assessment of this work cannot be made until its completion.

Environmental Impact Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 180, on what occasions an environmental impact assessment is required for the intensification of uncultivated land. [25322]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Environmental assessment will be required where the use of such land for intensive agricultural purposes is likely to have significant effects on the environment.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 180, how many environmental statements his Department expects will be required as a result of the regulations on environmental assessments for the use of uncultivated land. [25323]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The number of environmental statements will depend in part on the terms of the regulations to be introduced.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many compliance cost assessments were produced by his Department in 1995; and if he will place copies in the Library. [25324]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Sixty-four compliance cost assessments were produced by the Ministry in 1995. In accordance with Government policy, all were placed in the Library of the House.

WALES

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to increase the number of women employed in senior positions in public bodies in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [25007]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: All public bodies in Wales are expected to have full regard to equal opportunities policies.

A465

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the final cost of construction on the A465 from Aberdulais to Glyn Neath; and if he will make a statement. [24993]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The tender sum for the A465 Aberdulais to Glynneath contract is £45.7 million, excluding VAT. Construction work is ongoing and the final cost will not be known until the completion and final settlement of the contract.

Gwynedd Economy

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the proportion of the Gwynedd economy which is represented by (a) tourism, (b) slate quarrying, (c) farming and fishing and (d) the power industry; and if he will make a statement. [25032]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: An assessment by industry of the Gwynedd economy in terms of employment can be made using data from the 1993 census of employment. The available data are on the Nomis database, which can be accessed by the staff of the Library of the House.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the work force in each local authority area in Gwynedd are in part-time employment; and if he will make a statement. [25020]

Mr. Jones: Data on the number of full-time and part-time employees in each local authority area in Gwynedd are available from the 1993 census of employment. The information is on the Nomis database, which can be accessed by the staff of the Library of the House.

Severn Bridge (Toll Charges)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding the effect of current Severn bridge tolling charges and practices on tourism in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [25018]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No recent representations have been received regarding the effect of current Severn bridge tolling charges and practices on tourism in Wales.

A470 Extension

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the final cost of the A470 extension of the Cardiff to Merthyr trunk road to the A465 heads of the valleys road to Cefn Coed; and if he will make a statement. [24994]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Pentrebach to Cefn Coed scheme, which extends the A470 trunk road to the A465 and Cefn Coed, comprises three separate contracts with a total tender value of £34.3 million excluding VAT.

Construction work is ongoing and the final cost will not be known until the completion and final settlement of the contracts.

Community Care

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to collect statistics on the numbers of (a) elderly persons and (b) others in receipt of community care assistance via local authority social services expenditure who have had to sell their house to comply with means testing of assets. [25394]

Mr. Hague: I have no such plans.

Inward Investment

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the levels of inward investment in each county in Wales in each year since 1990. [25334]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The statistics, on a financial year basis, are contained in the following tables:

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many files marked "Not for NAO Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24857]

Mr. Hague: There are 106 files or parts of files in my Department—out of an estimated total of over 1,000,000—marked "Not for NAO Eyes".

Road Congestion

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish maps showing forecasts of future road congestion in Wales on the same basis as those published for England. [25494]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I have no proposals at the present time to publish similar maps for Wales.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Agriculture and Rural Development Scheme

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to restore the suspended special programme for the agriculture and rural development scheme. [21745]

Mr. Ancram: A decision about re-opening the capital grant elements of the sub-programme for agriculture and rural development can be made only when we have assessed the finances needed to honour the current commitments on farmers' applications, but we are not in a position to do this as yet.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by his Department. [24846]

Sir John Wheeler: The responsibility of the National Audit Office does not extend to the six Northern Ireland Departments, which have their own similarly appointed body: the Northern Ireland Audit Office.

There are 13 files in Northern Ireland Departments marked "Not for Northern Ireland Audit Office Eyes".

The marking "Not For NIAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Department of Finance and Personnel and the Northern Ireland Audit Office under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NIAO are not automatically available to the NIAO while they are current.

The information in respect of the Northern Ireland Office could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Dedicated Memorials (Service Personnel)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 439, what is his policy in respect of the names of service personnel killed in Northern Ireland being inscribed on dedicated memorials; and what are the reasons for that policy. [25194]

Mr. Moss: The policy in respect of existing war memorials is that only the names of those killed in a war may be inscribed on them. The civil disturbances in Northern Ireland have not been considered as a war situation. Policy in Northern Ireland, as outlined in existing legislation, is in line with that in Great Britain.

Gas Interconnector

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the EU support grant for the gas interconnector with Scotland and the conversion of Ballylumford power station indicating which geographic areas, communities and sectors in Northern Ireland were specified in the application to the European Commission as the intended beneficiaries. [24868]

Mr. Ancram: EU grant for the gas interconnector with Scotland and the conversion of Ballylumford power station is being provided under the natural gas measure contained in the Northern Ireland single programming document 1994–99. The objectives of the measure include diversification of Northern Ireland's energy sources and the introduction of further competition into the energy system. Specific geographic areas, communities and sectors are not listed as beneficiaries.

TRANSPORT

Highways Agency

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport under what statutory authority local authorities may contract the Highways Agency to carry out work on the agency's behalf. [24965]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 18 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question concerning the statutory authority under which local authorities may contract with the Highways Agency to carry out work on the Agency's behalf.

The Secretary of State for Transport ("the Secretary of State") is responsible for the provision and maintenance of a trunk road network (including motorways) throughout England. All contracts arranged by the Highways Agency are arranged on behalf of, and entered into by, the Secretary of State. Also it should be noted that local authorities as creatures of statute are only permitted to carry out those functions which are expressly conferred on them by statute.

At present there are two principal statutory provisions which empower local authorities to contract with the Secretary of State to carry out his trunk road functions. The first of these is section 6(1) of the Highways Act ("the 1980 Act"), the second, section 6(5) of the Act.

Section 6(1) of the 1980 Act enables a local authority (which is a local highway authority) to enter into an agreement with the Secretary of State under which the Secretary of State delegates his functions in respect of maintenance, improvement and certain other dealings in relation to trunk roads, to the local highway authority. Under such a "delegation of functions" agreement, the local highway authority assumes responsibility for the maintenance, and improvement and other related matters subject to the terms of the agreement and the conditions set out in section 6. (Local highways authorities are local authorities which are county councils, district councils which are unitary councils, metropolitan district councils or London borough councils).

Section 6(5) of the 1980 Act enables a local highway authority to enter into an agreement with the Secretary of State for specific trunk road works—eg, the construction or improvement by the local highway authority of a trunk road. Section 6(5) does not cover specific works of maintenance.

Local highway authorities (and other councils) also have power to enter into contracts with the Secretary of State to carry out the Secretary of State's work under the following provisions of the 1980 Act:

Section 9 enables a council to enter into an agreement with the Secretary of State to second staff and equipment to the Secretary of State for the purposes of carrying out his work in connection with trunk roads;

Section 89 enables the Secretary of State to enter into an agreement with a local highway authority to delegate his functions in relation to the provision and removal of cattle grids to the local highway authority;

Section 90(3) enables a local highway authority and the Secretary of State to enter into an agreement for the local highway authority to construct road humps which the Secretary of State has power to construct;

Section 98 enables a local authority which is a lighting authority, to enter into an agreement with the Secretary of State under which the Secretary of State delegates his functions of lighting a trunk road, to the local authority;

Section 113 enables a council to enter into an agreement with the Secretary of State under which the Secretary of State delegates all or any of his functions with respect to the provision or management of a trunk road picnic area or of public sanitary conveniences to the council; and

Section 115 enables a council to enter into an agreement with the Secretary of State under which the Secretary of State delegates his functions in relation to trunk road lorry parking areas to the council.

In addition to the above provisions, section 4 and 5 of the 1980 Act empower a local highway authority to contract with the Secretary of State primarily to agree who will have responsibility for dealing with particular roads—as they are not strictly powers enabling a local highway authority to carry out the Secretary of State's highway work for him they do not merit more than a passing reference.)

Since 14th March 1996, local highway authorities have had power to contract with the Secretary of State (subject to specified conditions) to carry out maintenance works on certain trunk roads and provide technical, administrative, or professional services in connection with such trunk roads. The trunk roads which are the subject of such contracts are trunk roads which have been, or are, the subject of a DBFO scheme. (A DBFO scheme is a scheme where a contractor agrees to design, build, finance and operate and maintain a trunk road sometimes for a period of up to 30 years). These contracting powers are set out in article 3, 6 and 7 of the Local Authorities (Goods and Services) (Public Bodies) (Trunk Roads) Order 1996 S.I. 1996/342. These provisions designate the Secretary of State as a "public body" (subject to specified restrictions) under the Local Authorities (Goods and Services) Act 1970. The effect of the designation is to allow local highway authorities additional powers to contract with the Secretary of State for the purposes described above.

It may be helpful to add that as from July 1996, the Secretary of State is hoping (subject to comments received from a consultation exercise) to make a further order under the Local Authorities (Goods and Services) Act 1970. The proposed Order will further expand the contracting powers of local highway authorities by designating the Secretary of State as a "public body" once again but this time in relation to trunk roads not covered by the earlier order (which applied only in the context of DBFO schemes). The proposed Order will enable local highway authorities to enter into contracts with the Secretary of State for carrying out works of maintenance on all other trunk roads—for example, maintenance term and works contracts. In addition it will also enable local highway authorities to enter into the other types of contract permitted under the Local Authorities (Goods and Services) Act 1970 with the Secretary of State—for example, the provision of technical, administrative and professional services in connection with such other trunk roads.

A40

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to de-trunk the A40 through Cheltenham; and if he will make a statement. [24902]

Mr. Watts: It has long been the Department's intention to change the trunk road network around Cheltenham once completion and opening to traffic of the A417 Brockworth bypass had been achieved. The change envisaged is to de-trunk the A40 through Cheltenham and to trunk the A436 from the A417, air balloon roundabout, to the A40, Shipton Solers.

Following the recent opening of the A417 Brockworth bypass, the Highways Agency is now taking this proposal forward. However, those affected by the change must be given the opportunity to comment and Gloucestershire county council, which will take over responsibility for the A40, requires certain works to be done before it will accept this responsibility.

To begin the statutory process, we expect to publish draft orders later this year. Depending on the nature and weight of any objections received, a public inquiry may be necessary.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accident black spots have been identified by his Department on the A40 between Oxford and Gloucester; if he will list them; and if he will make a statement. [24909]

Mr. Watts: At each of the following locations on the length of A40 highlighted, a total of more than 12 personal injury accidents have been recorded in the last three years, as follows.

	1993	1994	1995
A40/A417 Elmbridge Court roundabout, Gloucester	7	5	6
A40/B4063 Arle Court roundabout, Cheltenham	4	3	6

A study set up to examine safety standards at the Elmbridge Court roundabout has recently been concluded. Measures such as revised road markings adjustments to kerblines and renewal of the high friction grip surfacing are proposed. Funding opportunities for all initiatives of this kind under the network enhancement programme are under severe restraint at the present time and it is unlikely that any work will be carried out in relation to these proposals in 1996–97.

In the longer term, the Arle Court roundabout will be de-trunked and, as a result, and following the trunking of the A436, traffic flows at this roundabout are expected to reduce. Temporary traffic signals are currently in operation at the roundabout, the effect of which is being carefully monitored. The lights are needed to prevent queues backing up to the M5 Golden Valley viaduct where, due to the recent discovery of structural weaknesses, a temporary 3 tonn weight limit is currently in force.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the increase in the number of heavy vehicles entering Cheltenham on the A40 (a) westbound and (b) eastbound since 1986; and if he will make a statement. [24904]

Mr. Watts: The recorded change in the number of heavy vehicles entering Cheltenham on the A40 (a) westbound and (b) eastbound since 1986 is as follows:

	1986	1995	Percentage variance
(a)	702	518	(–26 per cent.)
(b)	1,520	1,317	(–13 per cent.)

Flows: annual average daily traffic—AADT—24 hour count heavy goods vehicles over 3.5 tonnes.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the increase in the volume of traffic entering Cheltenham on the A40 (a) westbound and (b) eastbound since 1986; and if he will make a statement. [24903]

Mr. Watts: The increases in the volume of traffic entering Cheltenham on the A40 (a) westbound and (b) eastbound since 1986 is recorded as follows:

	1986	1995	Percentage variance
(a)	5,539	6,329	(+14)
(b)	13,993	17,711	(+27)

Flows: annual average daily traffic—AADT—24 hour count

Between 1986 and 1995, the national average growth in motor vehicle traffic was 31.8 per cent. To a measurable degree, the lower than average rate of traffic flow increase on the M40 entering Cheltenham in either direction can be ascribed to the opening in 1991 of the extended M40 between London, M25, and Birmingham, M5.

Railway Disputes Resolution Committees

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in appointing chairmen for the rail access disputes resolution committee and the railway industry disputes resolution committee; how many applications were received for each post; and what salaries and costs are involved. [25452]

Mr. Watts: These committees have been established by the railway industry and the Department is not responsible for them or appointments to them. However, I understand that 45 applications were received for the post of part-time chairman of the access disputes resolution committee. A chairman was appointed on 1 April 1996. A total of 89 applications have been received for the post of part-time chairman of the railway industry disputes resolution committee. A chairman is expected to be appointed towards the end of April. Salaries of the chairmen and costs of the committees are matters for the committees.

Air Safety

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations are currently in place to control the use of air space by amateur flying clubs above residential areas; and if he will make a statement. [25477]

Mr. Norris: The regulations governing the use of air space above residential areas can be found in the Air Navigation Order (No.2) 1995 and the Rules of the Air 1991.

Crash Barriers and Cushions

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has made of the cost of each of the accidents in the last two years where errant vehicles have left, via the near-side verge, roads, motorways and dual carriageways on which there is (a) a traffic flow of greater than 10,000 vehicles per day and (b) an accident incidence rate of more than 1.5 times the average for that class of road. [25147]

Mr. Norris: The valuation attributed to the total number of road accidents, using the standard safety valuation method, in 1993 and 1994 in which a vehicle left the carriageway on the near-side is (i) motorways £227 million; (ii) dual carriageways £419 million; (iii) other roads £241 million.

It is not possible to provide these figures for roads with a traffic flow of greater than 10,000 vehicles per day, or for roads with a higher than average accident rate.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will commission the Transport Research Laboratory to carry out a full-scale assessment of the effectiveness of crash cushions. [25151]

Mr. Watts: No. A study into the situations where there may be a need to deploy crash cushions on the highway network has already been carried out. Generally, their widespread use is not cost effective because of the unpredictability and infrequent occurrence of the type of accidents they prevent.

The Highways Agency has developed an effective prototype crash cushion, and other proprietary systems exist. They can be installed at particular sites on trunk roads if, in the light of the specific circumstances, they provide an appropriate solution.

Foreign Aircraft (Safety)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what additional resources he has committed for increased safety checks of foreign aircraft. [25524]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport may ask the Civil Aviation Authority to conduct a physical check of a foreign aircraft if there is any doubt about its safe operation. If this check reveals serious problems, the Department may ask the authority to carry out an audit of the foreign aviation authority with responsibility for the safety oversight of the aircraft. The Department has increased the funding available for these activities by 20 per cent. to £120,000 in 1996–97.

In addition, the Department has pledged up to £150,000 to support the new safety oversight programme set up by the International Civil Aviation Organisation—ICAO. This support will involve funding the provision of Civil Aviation Authority experts as members of ICAO assessment teams, which will be helping foreign aviation authorities improve their safety oversight procedures.

Both these programmes will be kept under review.

Railtrack

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 26, if he will make a statement on the arrangements made to write off Railtrack debt prior to flotation. [25528]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack's debt to the national loans fund—£1,299,418,952.48—was extinguished by means of the Railways Act 1993 (Extinguishment of Relevant Loans) (Railtrack plc) Order 1996, which came into effect on 29 March 1996. Railtrack's remaining debt to passenger transport executives—£230.5 million—was transferred to the British Railways Board on the same date. Finally, on the same date, Railtrack issued two debentures to Her Majesty's Treasury totalling £585 million, also on the same date.

New Driving Licence

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he proposes to introduce the new style driving licence incorporating a photograph of the licence holder; and what assessment he has made of its impact on the work of the Driver and Vehicle Licence Agency at Swansea. [25591]

Mr. Norris: Our preparations for the introduction of the new plastic photocard driving licences are well advanced and the way is now clear for their introduction in the early part of 1997.

A full assessment of the impact of the new procedures on the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency is being carried out in conjunction with EDS and Polaroid, who will be responsible for producing the plastic cards. This cannot be finalised until the European Union directive on plastic card driving licences as been formally adopted.

European Football Championships

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has taken to ensure adequate transport provision for the increased number of visitors during the European football championships. [25500]

Mr. Norris: How best to cater for increased passenger demand is a matter for the commercial judgment of transport service operators. I am confident that they will not miss the opportunity this important event will offer. I understand that plans are being made to provide the necessary public transport information and additional capacity.

Arrangements are in hand for providing comprehensive temporary directional signing on both the trunk and local road network. It is for local authorities to consider whether special temporary traffic management and parking arrangements are needed in the vicinity of the football stadiums involved.

Mr. William Sneddon

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons Mr. William Sneddon, of 50 Polkemnet drive, Greenrigg, Harthill has been denied by his Department's policy division, zone 209, Great Minster house, 76 Marsham street, London SW1P 4DR, renewal of licence number SNEDD/407/019/WGGFF, valid from 4 December 1974 until 3 December 1977; and for what reasons no conclusion has been reached since March 1995 on his application. [25537]

Mr. Norris: Mr. Sneddon held a short period licence issued by a local licensing authority before the introduction in 1976 of car licences valid until 70 years of age. Because the then Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre did not have records of such licences, holders were required to return their licences on expiry to the DVLC for their details to be registered and to be issued with a full "till 70" licence. The legislation provided for licence holders to be given until the end of 1985 to convert their licences, after which the entitlement would lapse and any former licence holder would need to pass a driving test to regain the entitlement. There is no scope for waiving the requirements in individual cases. As Mr. Sneddon is one of those whose short period licence was not converted within the prescribed time, it is not possible to issue him with a new licence solely on the strength of the old one.

We are, however, considering a change in the law—under the powers conferred by the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994—to enable those who can prove that they held a licence prior to 1976 to be issued with a new licence without the need to pass a further driving test.

Sea Empress

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the organisations and local authorities who have made representations (a) in favour of and (b) against a public inquiry into the Sea Empress disaster; and if he will make a statement. [25185]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Some 74 organisations have made representations in favour of a public inquiry. As far as I am aware, none have made representations against. Nonetheless, we believe that the investigation by the marine accident investigation branch into the grounding of the Sea Empress and the subsequent salvage operations is the most effective and rapid means of determining the facts and any lessons which need to be learnt.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Life Sentences

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners serving life sentences were released on licence in each of the years 1990 to 1995; and what proportion of those prisoners in each year were released beyond the expiry of the tariff recommended by the sentencing court. [24621]

Miss Widdecombe: The number of life sentence prisoners released on licence for the first time in each of the years 1990 to 1995 is set out in the following table.

Year	Number
1990	74
1991	71
1992	90
1993	126
1994	107
1995	90

Information about the proportion of those released after the expiry of tariff recommended by the sentencing court is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Random Mandatory Drugs Tests (Prisons)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many refusals in the pilot programme of random mandatory drugs testing in prison for the male pilot prisons were recorded (a) in February to May 1995 and (b) in June to December 1995; and how many of the class A positives in (a) and (b) also tested positive for cannabis. [25385]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 18 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question concerning the number of refusals of random drug tests and the number of prisoners testing positive for both cannabis and class A drugs.

Establishments' returns do not differentiate between refusals of random and other forms of mandatory drug test. Laboratory returns only record the number the multiple positive tests and not the combinations of drugs misused. The information requested in both parts of this Question could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mental Illness (Prisoners)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) remand and (b) convicted but not sentenced (i) men and (ii) women were received into the prison system during 1994 and 1995 with identified mental health problems, broken down by age. [25199]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number and ages of unsentenced men and women received into the prison system during 1994 and 1995 with identified mental health problems.

This information is not available in the form requested. However, researchers from the Institute of Psychiatry recently undertook for the Prison Service a study aimed principally at measuring the prevalence of mental disorder amongst the remand population in England and Wales. They considered that 66 per cent of the adult males, 53 per cent of the young men and 77 per cent of the women in a large and broadly representative sample could be diagnosed as suffering from some form of mental disorder, a term which includes in this context harmful or dependent substance misuse.

Medical Research (Fraud)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost to public funds of investigating cases of fraud involving medical research studies in the United Kingdom for each of the last 10 years. [24992]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available centrally.

Police Searches

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will issue guidance to the police relating to the Prevention of Terrorism (Additional Powers) Bill to ensure (a) that women pedestrians are where possible stopped and searched by woman police officers in uniform,. (b) places of religious worship are not classed as non-residential accommodation which may be searched and (c) religious Sikhs are not required to remove their turbans; and if he will make a statement. [25370]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Guidance on the new police powers contained in the Prevention of Terrorism (Additional Powers) Act 1996 was issued to police forces immediately upon the Act's coming into force. Further guidance is being prepared in consultation with the police and will be issued in due course but, as I made clear during the debates on 2 April, it would not be realistic to require women pedestrians to be searched only by women police officers. While sensitivities of sex and religious practice will be taken into account in the exercise of the powers contained in the Act, they do not provide justification for exemption from any of its provisions. The relevant Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 codes of practice will be formally applied as appropriate to the new powers.

Computers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the problem of non-recognition by computers of the year 2000 with regard to his Department's computers and those for which it is responsible. [24406]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 3 April 1996]: My Department is aware of the problem. An audit of Home Office computer systems is currently being carried out by the Department's information technology service provider—Sema Group—to establish what systems will be affected and what needs to be done to correct any problems revealed by the audit. Concurrently, third party software suppliers are being approached to establish how their products cater for the century change.

Cannabis Offences

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the total number of people who have been fined the maximum amount of £2,500 for cannibis offences since that penalty was introduced. [25390]

Mr. Maclean: Information on court proceedings for 1993 and 1994, the latest available, is given in the table. For years prior to 1993, the exact drug, including class type, cannot be identified separately.

Number and percentage of persons given the maximum fine at Magistrates's courts[1] for cannabis offences under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 by type of offence

	1994	60	—	—

[1] The magistrates' court may fine an offender for any offence which it can deal with, but the amount of the fine is limited according to the offence. There is no limit on the amount of the fine which the Crown Court may impose.

Immigration Appeal Tribunal

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions Home Office Ministers have overturned considered verdicts of the Immigration Appeal Tribunal; and if he will put in the Library the conveniently available details of such occasions. [25498]

Mr. Kirkhope: Home Office Ministers have no powers to overturn determinations of the Immigration Appeal Tribunal. Determinations may, however, be challenged on appeal to the Court of Appeal or the Court of Session in Scotland.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Office Employees (Dog Attacks)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many Post Office employees received injuries caused by dog attacks while delivering letters and parcels in 1995; and how many work days were lost as a result. [24599]

Mr. Oppenheim: I understand from the Post Office, that during the 12 months to 31 December 1995, there were 5,891 animal attacks on Royal Mail letter delivery staff, with 4,817 working days lost, and that there were 143 animal attacks on Parcelforce delivery staff, with 63 working days lost. Around 99 per cent. of all animal attacks are by dogs.

Stamp Prices

Mr. Khabra: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what factors underlay the decision by the Government to direct the Post Office to raise the price of stamps. [25326]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Government have issued no such direction to the Post Office.

Overseas Trade Board

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 475, what reasons were given for the resignation of each of the two members of the Overseas Trade Board who resigned in March 1995, the four members who resigned in May 1995 and the member who resigned in September 1995. [25255]

Mr. Nelson: Sir Alan Cockshaw, Professor Fleming, Mr. Gillibrand, Mr. Dewe Matthews and Mr. Reeves had each served more than the usual three-year term. Sir Michael Bett and Sir Desmond Pitcher resigned because of extensive commitments elsewhere.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of the project to examine whether to contract out the work of the Insolvency Service. [25540]

Mr. Oppenheim: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mrs. Jackson) on 5 March 1996, Official Report, column 132.

Wolfendale Report

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant ot his letter of 4 March what action he has taken to implement the Wolfendale report; and if he will make a statement on the authorship of the best practice guide. [25495]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The two recommendations of the Wolfendale report addressed to the Office of Science and Technology are being implemented. The contract for the "Best Practice Guide" has been awarded to Mr. Michael Kenward, and the survey into existing levels of public understanding of science and technology is being undertaken by Professor John Durant of Imperial college, London. The latter project is being co-sponsored by the Nuffield Foundation.

My Department has drawn the report's other recommendation to the attention of the relevant organisations.

Hubble Space Telescope

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State's letter of 2 April to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, if he will make a statement on the European Space Agency—NASA—agreement negotiations in relation to the Hubble space telescope. [25496]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The European Space Agency, ESA, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, have yet to begin formal discussions on Europe's contribution to the refurbishment of the Hubble space telescope, planned for 1999. These are, however, due to take place in the next few months.

Patent Office

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many contractors are employed in the Patent Office information technology services department; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [24267]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 2 April 1996]: There are 36 specialist contract staff in information technology services employed to supplement existing permanent civil servants and to make good deficiencies in the Patent Office's IT skills base. Their individual costs reflect the market rate for particular specialisms but, in 1995–96, the average cost was £61,000. They are supplied on short-term renewable contracts by a range of organisations selected through competitive tender.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the manufacturing balance of trade for each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country for each year since 1979. [24779]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The answer is in the table.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the United Kingdom manufactured balance of trade for each year since 1979; and what was, in each year, the percentage change from the previous year. [24778]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The balance of trade for manufactured goods is published by the Central Statistical Office in the monthly review of external trade statistics, which is available in the Library of the House. It is also available on the central shared database, which can be accessed from the Library of the House.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the level of manufacturing capital investment in (a) the west midlands and (b) the United Kingdom for each year since 1979; and if he will express the figures in (i) real terms and (ii) percentage change on the previous year. [24780]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Figures for capital investment in manufacturing industry in the west midlands are not available in real terms. Figures for the United Kingdom are shown in the table.

PRIME MINISTER

Brixham

10. Mr. Steen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will pay an official visit to Brixham. [24330]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend hopes to have an opportunity to do so in the near future.

Intelligence and Security (Committee Report)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 107, for what reasons some necessary evidence is not available in relation to the Ames case. [25515]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

As the hon. Member will realise, in a case as complex and far reaching as that of Ames, evidence of the full extent of his activities only becomes available over time. My right hon. Friend looks forward to receiving the further conclusions of the Intelligence and Security Committee on this issue.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hosting for Overseas Students

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many students in each year since 1987 have taken advantage of his Department's Hosting for Overseas Students organisation; what has been the cost; and if he will make a statement. [25464]

Mr. Hanley: The number and cost of placements arranged by Hosting for Overseas Students—HOST—a charity supported by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the British Council, is as follows:

	Number of student visits to families	Total costs £
1987–88	n/a	76,821
1988–89	1,708	176,133
1989–90	2,145	101,888
1990–91	3,577	135,552
1991–92	4,012	123,678
1992–93	4,031	189,327
1993–94	5,253	197,436
1994–95	5,705	199,587
1995–96	[1]—	212,863

[1] Number not yet known.

HOST performs a very valuable service in providing overseas students with experience of life in British families and we hope it will continue to expand, in particular by attracting new host families.

Turks and Caicos Islands

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conclusions he has reached on the petition from the elected parties of the Turks and Caicos Islands concerning Governor Bourke; and if he will make a statement. [25389]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given in the House on 3 April by my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary, Official Report, columns 384–85.

Baltic States

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received from the Baltic states; and if he will make a statement. [25391]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have frequent contacts with the Baltic states and exchange views on a wide variety of issues. Our bilateral relations are close and friendly, based on our strong support for Baltic independence, democratic and economic reform, and integration into European structures.

HEALTH

Nurses

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many diabetic nurses and paediatric nurses there are (a) by region and (b) nationally. [25527]

Mr. Horam: The number of nurses holding specialist qualifications in diabetic care is not available centrally.

The information relating to nurses working in the paediatric area of work is shown in the table.

Learners[1]	350

Notes:
[1] Learners are nurses on traditional training courses in the paediatric area of work. Project 2000 training was introduced in 1989 and has gradually replaced traditional pre-registration nurse training. There were 2,360 Project 2000 students at May 1994 on childrens nursing courses; these figures are headcounts and cannot be added to other figures in the table which are whole-time equivalents at September 1994.
Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Drug and Alcohol Addiction

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people per thousand of the population who are addicted to (a) heroin and (b) alcohol; and what are the equivalent figures for (i) France, (ii) Italy, (iii) Spain and (iv) Holland. [25388]

Mr. Bowis: The estimated rate of people addicted to heroin per thousand population for 1994 was 0.41[1], based on a United Kingdom population aged 16 to 64. The overall rate of alcohol dependency per 1,000 population was 47[2], based on a survey of psychiatric morbidity of 16 to 64-year-olds in Great Britain. The two figures are estimated on different bases and are not comparable.

Equivalent figures are not available for France, Italy, Spain and Holland. The European monitoring centre for drugs and drug addiction is currently working to produce comparable information on drugs misuse in member states of the European Union.

Community Care (Direct Payments) Bill

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to make the responses to his Department's consultation paper on the Community Care (Direct Payments) Bill available to members of the technical advisory group which advised the Government on technical issues about implementation of direct payments. [25533]

Mr. Bowis: Copies have been sent to members who requested them.

Mr. Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a summary of responses to his Department's consultation paper on the Community Care (Direct Payments) Bill; and what other steps he will take to fulfil the undertaking given in that document in respect of copies of responses being made available to the public. [25534]

Mr. Bowis: No, I have published them in full. Copies of the responses are in the Library and are available to members of the public on request.

Mr. Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many responses he has received to his Department's consultation paper on the Community Care (Direct Payments) Bill from (a) disabled people, (b) organisations representing disabled people, (c) local authorities, (d) other groups or individuals providing care and (e) other organisations and individuals. [25535]

Mr. Bowis: A total of 284 responses were received in England, 49 were received in Scotland, 49 were received in Wales and 36 were received in Northern Ireland.

Of the English responses, 79 were from local authorities. The consultation paper did not ask people to provide any information about themselves in their responses, so information on the remaining responses is not available in the form requested. Thirty-four responses were from individuals, some of whom indicated that they were disabled; others said that they were providing informal care, but others did not give the reason for their interest. Similarly, many of the responses from organisations were representing disabled people and others were representing providers of care, but in many cases it is not clear whether the organisations would consider themselves to be in either category.

DEFENCE

Cyprus (Discipline)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the Commander-in-Chief of the British military forces based in Cyprus on incidents involving British military personnel and Greek Cypriot personnel. [22884]

Mr. Soames: Matters of discipline are taken very seriously by Ministers and by the services. Regular meetings take place to monitor standards of discipline and ensure that they are enforced. All service personnel serve under strictly enforced disciplinary regulations. British forces serving in Cyprus are subject to the same very high disciplinary standards.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of whether the Army's disciplinary procedures were followed in relation to the rifleman from the 1 Battalion, the Royal Green Jackets, who assaulted Mr. Kevin Remmer, in Ayia Napa in August 1994; [24077]

(2) what action was taken by the commanding officer of 1 Battalion, the Royal Green Jackets, against a rifleman of that battalion who allegedly assaulted Mr. Kevin Remmer in August 1994 in Ayia Napa, Cyprus. [24073]

Mr. Soames: Where it is alleged that service men have committed offences under Cypriot law within the Republic of Cyprus, jurisdiction lies entirely with the Cypriot authorities under the terms of the treaty concerning the establishment of the Republic of Cyprus, Cm 1252 or 1960.

At the time of the assault on Miss Jensen the rifleman had not been found guilty of any charges resulting from the earlier incident and was bailed by the Cypriot authorities to appear in court at a later date. As the civil authorities found no reason to hold the accused soldier in custody before the matter came to court, there appeared to be no justification for the commanding officer to restrict the soldier's movements. It is a matter of deep regret that the soldier was later involved in the assault on Miss Jensen. However, neither the Cypriot courts nor the commanding officer could have expected such a development.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what forms of Government support are provided to British arms exports; and what is the level of bonuses to be paid for the financial year 1995–96 to the (a) head of Defence Export Services Organisation, (b) offset adviser and (c) international financial adviser. [24080]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Within the Ministry of Defence, support for Defence exports is provided, primarily, by the Defence Export Services Organisation, which exists to help British manufacturers market and sell their products abroad, complementing the wide range of services offered by the Department of Trade and Industry. In addition to DESO/DTI support, the Export Credits Guarantee Department makes available its range of export credit facilities to support defence sales. The head of defence export services may be awarded a "bonus" of up to 15 per cent. of his annual salary depending on performance. The offset adviser and international financial adviser, who are civil servants, were eligible for the performance-related pay awards which applied to their grades. These were up to 4 per cent. from 1 April 1995, with a further award of up to 4 per cent. from 30 November 1995 for the offset adviser and up to 3 per cent. from 1 August 1995 for the international financial adviser; no specific bonuses attach to these posts.

LSD

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what occasions since 1966 his Department has investigated LSD at the chemical and biological defence establishment, Porton Down; what were the total number of service volunteers used for these experiments; and if he will make a statement. [24622]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. David Clark, dated 16 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked me as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency to reply to your question about investigation of LSD since 1966 at the then Chemical Defence Experimental Establishment, Porton Down.

We have undertaken a comprehensive search of the summary books recording the involvement of all volunteers in experimental work at Porton Down since 1966. In that year 16 of the service volunteers who participated in the field trial Recount were given LSD and an additional 4 service volunteers took part in laboratory based studies. In 1967 further laboratory based studies were carried out involving 28 service volunteers. In January 1968 13 of the service volunteers who participated in field trial Small Change were given LSD. We have no indication of any administration of LSD to volunteers after the completion of Small Change in 1968.

When he replied to your Parliamentary Question about the number of volunteers involved in studies with LSD on 21 November 1994, Dr. Graham Pearson, then the Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, stated that 72 volunteers had participated in the whole programme of work on LSD which continued until 1972. More information has recently been uncovered which has caused us to reassess this. From the records now available we now believe the total number of all exposures to LSD in the programme was 136. A small number of these were second exposures of the same individual. We also now believe that work on LSD ceased in 1968 when the results of trial Small Change confirmed that it was not a serious threat. I am sorry if the earlier information provided to you as inaccurate. I think this occurred because the information available to Dr. Pearson was incomplete and we obviously regret that should have occurred.

I hope this letter clarifies matters.

Low Flying

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) dates, (b) locations, (c) numbers, types and nationalities of aircraft involved, (d) nature of breach, (e) disciplinary actions taken against aircrew and (f) lessons learned from each of the confirmed breaches of low flying regulations during 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24583]

Mr. Soames: Details of breaches of military low flying regulations during 1995 confirmed to date by RAF police investigations are as follows. A number of alleged breaches during the year are still under investigation. Unless stated otherwise a lateral breach of the avoidance area listed occurred in each case.

In cases where the nationality of the aircraft is shown as TTTE, the aircraft came from the tri-national Tornado training establishment at RAF Cottesmore which trains aircrew of the Royal Air Force, German air force and Italian air force using aircraft provided by all three nations.

Formal disciplinary action under the service discipline acts has, to date, been taken in one case. The pilot of the RAF Hawk responsible for the breach at Staple, Kent on 29 June was found guilty by general court martial of one charge, contrary to section 52 of the Air Force Act 1955, of flying an aircraft in a manner causing or likely to cause unnecessary annoyance for which he was severely reprimanded and fined. The finding and sentence are subject to confirmation.

In cases involving UK aircrew where formal disciplinary action is not appropriate, aircrew who have breached regulations may be interviewed by their station commander or other appropriate senior officer. Such action could be recorded on individual's career records and affect flying status and promotion prospects. It is not our policy to release details of such action. It is also the responsibility of senior officers to ascertain what lessons there are to be learnt from such incidents; central records are not maintained.

Reports on breaches by foreign aircrew are passed to their relevant national authorities, with whom responsibility for any further action rests.

Kaymar Telephone Numbers

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what inquiries he has received about the Kaymar telephone numbers; and if he will place the substantive replies from his Department in the Library. [25342]

Mr. Soames: My Department has recently been asked about a certain telephone number which the inquirer suggested may have been associated with a photographic studio known as Kaymar Studios. It appears that this inquiry is related to a pending appeal against a conviction for a criminal offence, evidence relating to which should be handled by the relevant solicitors. Such information as is available to my Department has therefore been passed to the Crown Prosecution Service.

Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the expenditure by his Department in each of the last 10 years on studies on the decommissioning of facilities at AWE Aldermaston. [25396]

Mr. Arbuthnot : Individual studies are not conducted; decommissioning planning follows standard procedures designed to ensure the safe and complete implementation of the process. Such planning costs are not required to be separately identified.

Trident

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what conditions apply to the nationality of consortiums seeking to become project managers for the nuclear fitting of Trident submarines. [25356]

Mr. Arbuthnot: To optimise control of nuclear licensing and safety requirements, project management of the construction of nuclear submarine refitting facilities at Devonport will be controlled by the dockyard operator, Devonport Royal Dockyard plc. The Secretary of State for Defence will retain a special share in DRD plc, a UK registered company, which will enable the Government to protect essential national security interests in the dockyard facilities, including those associated with nuclear submarine refitting. Company personnel working in sensitive areas are subject to appropriate security clearance.

Joint Air Reconnaissance Intelligence Centre

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the defence agency status for the Joint Air Reconnaissance Intelligence Centre. [25999]

Mr. Soames: I announced on 19 July 1995, Official Report, column 1345 that the joint air reconnaissance intelligence centre was a candidate for defence agency status. Since then, we have carried out a detailed business analysis of the organisation under the leadership of the chief executive designate to confirm its suitability to become an agency.

I have agreed to the launch of JARIC as a defence agency from 19 April 1996. The agency will remain fully part of the Department but the chief executive will have delegated executive powers to discharge his responsibilities. These powers are described in the framework document, copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House.

JARIC is based at RAF Brampton, near Huntingdon. It has a total staff of 500, comprising service personnel from all three services and approximately 144 civil servants. It acts as the Department's centre of excellence for the production of imagery intelligence.

It provides this intelligence to military commanders and the Government, in support of current military operations, defence planning and wider intelligence matters.

JARIC has been set demanding targets in an era where the requirement for its expertise is continuing to increase. The targets for the 12 months from April 1996 are:

Key target 1: The completion of approved tasks, within agreed time frame, as follows:

Priority 1: 98 per cent.

Priority 2: 90 per cent.

Priority 3: 85 per cent.

Priority 4: 70 per cent.

Key target 2: By 1 October 1996 to determine a method of measuring Customer Satisfaction to reflect their quality requirements, and make proposals for its implementation.

Key target 3: Achieve a 2.5 per cent improvement in efficiency.

Key target 4: Provide specified support to a major project to upgrade JARIC's technical capabilities.

Key target 5: Introduce systems to meet the HM Treasury Accounts Direction to 1996–97.

These targets will ensure that JARIC meets defence needs for timely intelligence, and will provide for continuous improvement in services and efficiency.

Defence Equipment Exports

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Government will continue to support the export of defence equipment. [25910]

Mr. Arbuthnot: UK defence exports have been a major success story for this country.

With a reducing home defence budget it is vital that we export if we are to maintain our defence industry which supports around 400,000 jobs. Between a third and half of the industry's output, by value, is for exports.

Selling more abroad also brings down the cost of equipment for our own forces and enables us to sustain our essential technology base.

In 1995, despite vigorous international competition from the US and France in particular, the UK won defence equipment contracts worth approximately £5 billion. This gave Britain the second highest market share ever. In no other major industrial sector have we managed to achieve nearly 20 per cent. of the world export market.

Maintaining a strong British defence industry is important for our national security, for the economy and for jobs. The responsible exporting of defence equipment to our friends and allies makes an important contribution to world peace and stability through deterring the expansionist aspirations of unfriendly and aggressive regimes. Article 51 of the UN charter clearly states the right of all nations to self-defence.

Moreover, the UK has a very strict policy on the control of exports of defence equipment. We promote the sale of British defence equipment overseas only in support of our national and international obligations and only where it is compatible with out political, strategic and security interests.

Devonport Royal Dockyard

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Devonport royal dockyard will retain its status as a royal dockyard following privatisation; and what its title will be. [25307]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The subject of the proposed privatisation is the existing company Devonport Royal Dockyard plc, in which the assets of Devonport royal dockyard would be vested at the date of any sale. Her Majesty the Queen has graciously signified that she would be content for the royal title to continue to be used by the dockyard if it is privatised, subject to the use of the royal title being kept under constant review lest the activities of the dockyard develop in such a way as to make the further use of the title inappropriate. Subject to that proviso, the use and continuation of the royal title will be a matter for the purchaser.

Works of Art

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will (a) identify the print missing since 1991 from Admiralty house, (b) place a value on the missing work and (c) name the Minister described by the National Audit Office as a former Secretary of State. [20830]

Mr. Sproat: I have been asked to reply.

The missing picture is a view of Admiralty house drawn in 1970 by Alan Dyson. As the work of an amateur artist it is particularly difficult to give it a commercial value. Our best estimate, given that its purchase price in 1970 was £10, is that its current value may be around £50 to £80. The drawing was placed on display in Admiralty house in 1970. The National Audit Office reference to a Secretary of State—who happened to be my right hon. Friend the member for Bridgwater (Mr. King) in 1991—is irrelevant to the loss of the drawing, which had been of unknown whereabouts since 1982.

ENVIRONMENT

Organic Pollutants

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy at the UN Commission on Sustainable Development to be party to a global, legally binding treaty to ban the most dangerous identified persistent organic pollutants. [25414]

Mr. Clappison: The Washington global conference on the protection of the marine environment from land-based activities agreed in November 1995 that international action is needed to develop a global, legally binding instrument concerning certain persistent organic pollutants. The United Kingdom supported that conclusion and will work to take it forward through the intergovernmental forum on chemical safety. Our stance at the Commission on Sustainable Development will be based on that approach.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the most dangerous persistent organic pollutants that enter inland and coastal waters; and what action he intends to take in respect of the adoption of the United Nations environment programme programme of action on land-based sources of marine pollution. [25413]

Mr. Clappison: The Washington global programme of action for the protection of the marine environment from land-based activities reflects generally the approaches adopted by the United Kingdom and other states bordering the north-east Atlantic. Pursuing our present policies will therefore lead to its implementation.

The global programme of action notes the need for a legally binding global instrument to address certain persistent organic pollutants or groups of such substances. On the basis of work under the convention on long-range transport of air pollution of the UN Economic Commission for Europe—UNECE/LRTAP—these are identified as aldrin, dieldrin, DDT, endrin, chlordane, hexachlorobenzene, Mirex, toxaphene, heptachlor, polychlorinated biphenyls, dioxins and furans.

The United Kingdom is supporting the negotiation of such an instrument through the intergovernmental forum on chemical safety.

WALES

Fish (Pollution)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what factors underlay the exclusion of migratory edible fish species, other than salmon and sea trout, from the provisions of the Food Protection (Emergency Prohibitions) Oil and Chemical Pollution orders; and if he will make a statement. [25164]

Mr. Hague: The catching of eels, including elvers, is prohibited up to the high water mark in the area covered by the Food Protection (Emergency Prohibitions) (Oil and Chemical Pollution of Fish and Plants) Order 1996. The close season for eel angling in the freshwater area beyond runs from 14 March to June, when anglers are prohibited from taking them. There are no commercial eel interests in that area.

The allis shad is protected under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; the twaite shad and sea lamprey are listed species under the EC habitats directive and neither is targeted by anglers.

Farm Accidents

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many accidents were reported on farms in Wales in 1994–95; and what measures he has taken to increase awareness of accident prevention among farm workers. [25015]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In the agriculture and horticulture industry in Wales, in 1994–95, a provisional total of seven fatal and 80 non-fatal occupational injuries to all workers along with five major injuries to members of the public were reported to enforcing authorities. Information on the number of injuries which occurred on farms is not available separately.

The Health and Safety Executive carries out a number of initiatives to increase awareness of health and safety in the agriculture industry. In 1994–95, these measures included campaigns on tractor safety, working near overhead power cables and using all-terrain vehicles, aimed particularly at farm workers. In addition, the HSE produces free publications in English and Welsh and seeks to raise awareness through information at shows such as the Royal Welsh and through liaison with a range of other organisations in the industry. It also carries out inspections on those workplaces that present the greatest risk.

Agricultural Employment

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) full-time farmers, (b) part-time farmers, (c) full-time agricultural tenants, (d) part-time agricultural tenants there are currently in (i) Wales and (ii) each district and county council area in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [25019]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is shown for the old counties and districts in the table.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the underspending on the allocation of funds from European structural funds during the 1995–96 financial year; what provision he will make to carry over the funds involved; and what consultation he has had with his counterparts in the European Commission concerning approval for a carry-over provision. [24921]

Mr. Hague: Despite the late approval by the Commission of the objective 2 and 5(b) programmes in Wales and a number of community initiative programmes, it is expected that all the resources under these programmes will be allocated to projects on time.

A465

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) deaths, (b) injuries and (c) accidents there have been on the A465 Aberdulais to Glyn Neath since 1985; and if he will make a statement. [25006]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is shown in the table. The data cover personal injury accidents recorded by the police on the A465 between Aberdulais and Glyn Neath.

Planning Policy Guidance

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) when he expects to publish planning draft technical advice notes for consultation; and if these will be published before planning policy guidance for Wales is issued in a definitive form; [25412]

(2) if he will make a statement about the development of planning policy as reflected in letters from his Department to (a) Ms M. Williams on 13 October 1995 and (b) Ms J. Toms on 14 March 1996; and if technical advice notes will be issued before the final version of his planning policy guidance. [25417]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) by my right hon. Friend on 25 March, Official Report, column 452.

Road Signage

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the cost of replacing road signage to take account of the changes in local government implemented on 1 April. [25415]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No such estimate has been made. The cost of replacing boundary signs falls to the relevant unitary authority.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what procedures have to be followed to change motorway signs to take account of the local government changes brought into effect on 1 April; and what estimate he has made of the cost of such changes. [25416]

Mr. Jones: The Welsh Office has to approve the design and location of any boundary signs prior to their installation on the motorway. The costs fall to the relevant unitary authority.

Children's Homes

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much of the Jillings report to Clwyd county council he will require to be published. [25343]

Mr. Hague: The Government's overriding objective is to ensure the safety and well-being of children in care in north Wales. It was for this reason that my predecessor, in the light of the child abuse trials in Clwyd, asked Miss Nicola Davies QC in May 1995 to consider whether a public inquiry was needed and, if so, what form it should take. Miss Davies reported to me in November 1995 and I published her conclusions and recommendations in December.

At the same time, I announced the appointment of a team headed by Ms Adrianne Jones to undertake the examination of management practices and procedures in social service departments in north Wales that Miss Davies had recommended. Ms Jones is due to report to me at the end of May. I shall publish her findings and will seek to ensure that the new local authorities adopt procedures that conform with current best practice.

Quite separately, Clwyd county council commissioned its own independent panel of inquiry in March 1994. It comprised a team of social work professionals chaired by Mr. John Jillings. In exercising its statutory powers, Clwyd county council did not need to consult my Department about this decision or about the procedures the inquiry would adopt.

I understand from a press release that Clwyd county council considered Mr. Jillings' report, or a draft of it, at its meeting on 26 March. My Department subsequently received from Flintshire county council, one of the successor authorities, a version of the Jillings report which, it was told, did not incorporate all of the 200 or so factual corrections which Clwyd county council had requested. At the same time, it received a copy of legal advice commissioned by Clwyd county council which concluded that the report could not be published.

I believe that it would be in the public interest for the successor local authorities to seek urgently to produce a version of the report that can safely be published. It is a matter of regret that those who commissioned the inquiry apparently failed to ensure that it would be undertaken in a way which would make its conclusions publishable. I have therefore written today to the leaders or chairmen of the five successor authorities to Clwyd county council requesting that they:

(1) Let me know whether the version of the independent panel's report, which my Department currently holds, incorporates all the 200 or so corrections that Clwyd county council requested, and is the final version formally signed and presented by the panel members;

(2) Let me know at once what, if any, action Clwyd county council formally resolved to take on the report, and whether any such resolution may now be taken as representing the wishes of its authorities;

(3) In consultation with the independent panel, seek urgently to produce a version of the report that can safely be published;

(4) Make a final and full version of the report available to the investigating and the prosecuting authorities so that they can consider whether it contains sufficient grounds to justify reopening investigations, and to Ms Adrianne Jones so that she can consider its relevance to the review of existing systems that she is undertaking for me.

I am placing a copy of my letter to the local authorities in the Library of the House.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Zimbabwe Environmental Conference

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the letter from the Minister of Overseas Development on 2 April, who will represent the United Kingdom at the environmental conference in Zimbabwe later this year; and if land pollution is on the agenda. [25499]

Mr. Hanley: Participants from the UK are expected to include experts from the academic and private sectors concerned with best environmental practice in the mining industry. Land pollution will be discussed under various themes on the agenda.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what budget was allocated for the assisted places scheme in 1995–96; what was the actual spending on the assisted places scheme in that year; and what budget has been allocated to the assisted places scheme for 1996–97. [25513]

Mrs. Gillan: Provision in the supply estimates for the assisted places scheme in the financial year 1995–96 was £104.4 million. Final outturn expenditure has yet to be confirmed through the usual appropriation accounts procedures. The planned spending for the financial year 1996–97 is £118.3 million.

Departmental Budget

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in what areas of her departmental budget actual spending in 1995–96 fell short of projected spending; if she will indicate the relevant budget headings and amount in each case; and if she will make a statement. [25481]

Mr. Robin Squire: Net outturn expenditure figures for 1995–96 have yet to be confirmed through the usual appropriation accounts procedures. Final figures for each of the Department's votes will be included in a public expenditure outturn White Paper to be published in the summer. I shall send the hon. Member the detail he requests on individual budget headings at that time.

Independent Schools (Inspections)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reason the number of Office for Standards in Education inspections of independent schools is being reduced. [25306]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Government Art Collection

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the 20 most valuable pictures in the Government's art collection which are made available to be displayed in public buildings and embassies overseas, together with the names of the artist, most recent valuation and current location. [24875]

Mr. Sproat: It is not possible to state which 20 of the Government's art collection of some 14,000 works of art are the most valuable in monetary terms. The monetary value of a picture can be assessed only at the time of purchase or sale and thereafter by professional valuation. It would not be a justifiable expenditure of public funds to have the whole collection valued professionally. As a general rule, the most highly esteemed pictures are placed where they will best serve the national interest, that is to say, in prestige locations at home and abroad.

Violence Chip Technology

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on (i) the adoption by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission of a programme of action to introduce V chip technology and encode television programmes, (ii) the Shaw-Rogers V chip trials, (iii) the Edmonton trials of V chip technology by Shaw Cablesystems and Superchannel in 1994, (iv) the Rogers Cablesystem V chip trials in Toronto and Ottawa in 1995, (v) Canadian Television broadcasting companies' trails of V chip technology in Montreal in 1995 and (vi) the third round of V chip trials by Shaw Cable and Rogers Cablesystems in Canada in February 1996; [24974]

(2) what reports she has received on the Shaw Communications V chip cable converter box; [24983]

(3) what reports she has received on the discussions, research and trials which preceded the passing of the recent US Telecommunications Act; [24979]

(4) what contacts her Department has had with Shaw Cablesystems concerning V chip technology; [24985]

(5) if her Department holds a copy of the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission's policy on programme classification for V chip technology; [24981]

(6) what discussions her Department has had with the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission concerning the V chip; [24984]

(7) what reports she has received on the work of the US Electronic Industries Association Group since 1992 on the application of V chip technology. [24982]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 April 1996]: My Department is paying close attention to the full range of broadcasting issues arising from the V chip, in conjunction with broadcasters, regulators, consumer groups and other interested parties. Should technological implications ensue, these would of course be a matter for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

As part of the review of the issues, we shall be taking full account of the experience in the USA and Canada. Last month the Secretary of State met Dr. Arthur Pober, executive director of the Entertainment Software Rating Board, and Professor Jeffrey Bernstein, an expert in studies on violence in the media from Utrecht university, who gave a detailed account of the experience in the USA. They also addressed a seminar hosted by my Department and organised by the Advertising Association, at which my noble Friend Lord Inglewood was also present and which was well attended by representatives of the broadcasting industry, consumer groups and others.

The Secretary of State is considering what specific research on V chip related matters to commission and will be interested to receive any information that the hon. Member offers to provide.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if officials from her Department attended the V chip display at the technology exposition of the G7 meeting in Brussels in February 1994. [24986]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 April 1996]: No.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what reports she has received on the V chip amendment to the European directive, "Television Without Frontiers", 89/552/EEC. [24980]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The Secretary of State has been notified of the European Parliament's amendments, adopted on 14 February, including amendment 55. The United Kingdom, along with all member states, awaits the modified proposal from the European Commission, which may or may not include this amendment.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many compliance cost assessments were produced by her Department in 1995; and if she will place copies in the Library. [25272]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 April 1996]: No such assessments were produced by my Department during 1995.

National Audit Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage How many files marked "Not for National Audit Office Eyes" are currently held by her Department. [24854]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 17 April 1996]: There are 43 files in my Department out of a total of approximately 170,000 marked "Not to be seen by NAO without reference to the appropriate Head of Division", sometimes abbreviated to "Not for NAO Eyes".

The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the NAO and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the NAO while they are current.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Regulations

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library a copy of the response made by the Council on Tribunals to the proposed Social Security (Adjudication) and Child Support Amendment Regulations 1996. [24824]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: A copy has been placed in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to improve response times by the Child Support Agency to public correspondence and to ensure that all correspondence receives a reply. [24127]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Hinchliffe, dated 17 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency response times to public correspondence.

The Agency has a charter standard to respond to written enquiries within 10 working days. For written complaints, the standard is that they should be acknowledged within 2 working days, and a full response given within 10 working days. Currently, the Agency is responding to 40% of written enquiries within 10 working days; for complaints, current performance is that 87% are acknowledged within 2 working days, with 42% receiving a full response within 10 working days.

The Agency is looking at ways to improve performance in this important area. Working practices within the Agency's six Centres have been altered, and greater emphasis has been put on responding quickly to clients' enquiries. Each Centre has also introduced a tracking system specifically to handle complaints.

All items of mail received in the Agency's six Centres are promptly sorted, recorded on the Child Support Computer System and distributed to the relevant sections who will then take the necessary action. A diary system ensures tasks are prioritised and the progress of work is monitored until completion.

If an item of post is received and staff are unable to identify which case it relates to because, for example, there is insufficient information, the Agency writes to the correspondent asking for more details. At 31 March 1996, there were a total of 127 such items in the Agency's six Centres.

It is worth noting that all correspondence received by the Agency from clients does not require a written response; often it is the case that letters are received reporting changes in circumstances or requesting action to be taken. Where this is the case, the Agency takes whatever action is appropriate and no written response is necessary.

On a more general note, during the next few months all the Centres will introduce Complete Action Service Teams which will deal with cases across a wide range of activities which had previously been undertaken by different sections. These teams will also help to provide a better service to our customers by keeping cases up to date and will cut down the transfer of cases within the Centres.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total Child Support Agency budget for (a) paper and (b) printing in each year of its operation. [24064]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 17 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about paper and printing costs within the Child Support Agency.

Individual costs for paper and printing are not readily obtainable as they both form part of a larger account entitled "Printing & Stationery", which includes printing, stationery and other miscellaneous stationery items.

The total costs for "Printing & Stationery" for the three financial years since the launch of the Agency are as follows:

1993/94: £518,823

1994/95: £1,160,842

1995/96: £2,235,698 (subject to end of year adjustment)

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of items of correspondence issued annually by the Child Support Agency; and at what total cost, for each year of activity. [24063]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 17 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency correspondence.

I cannot provide you with a meaningful estimate of the number of items of correspondence issued annually by the Agency. This information is not recorded by the Agency as there is no business need to do so.

However, I can confirm that the total costs of General Postage were as follows:

(i) During the financial year 1993–94: £1,041,851

(ii) During the financial year 1994–95: £1,607,747

(iii) During the financial year 1995–96: £1,537,482 (subject to final confirmation)

I hope this is helpful.

Statutory Maternity Pay

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to implement the European Court of Justice judgment in the case of Gillespie and Others v. Northern Health and Social Services Board and Others (C-342/93) where it effects the calculation of statutory maternity pay. [25928]

Mr. Heald: I will shortly be laying regulations to amend the rules for calculating the earnings-related element of statutory maternity pay, SMP, to bring the calculation into line with the European Court of Justice judgment.

In its judgment of 13 February 1996, the court stated that where a woman's maternity pay is calculated on the basis of pay received before her maternity leave starts, that calculation must take account of any backdated pay rises subsequently awarded and which take effect in the period used to work out her maternity pay. Not to allow a woman on maternity leave to benefit from a pay rise would be to discriminate against her on the ground of her pregnancy.

One of the qualifying conditions for SMP is that a woman's normal weekly earnings must be at least equal to the lower earnings limit for the payment of national insurance contributions. If this condition is satisfied, SMP is payable at 90 per cent. of her normal weekly earnings for the first six weeks of her 18-week maternity pay period. The woman's normal weekly earnings are calculated using payments actually made to her by her employer in the eight weeks immediately preceding the 14th week before the week in which her baby is expected. At present, no account is taken of backdated pay rises awarded after this period.

The new rules will mean that employers must revise the earnings-related element of SMP if a backdated pay rise is awarded that effects payments made in the period used to calculate the amount of SMP due.

Sickness Benefit

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what responses he has received from small businesses to his proposals for them to pay sickness benefits claims; and if he will make a statement. [24319]

Mr. Heald: All employers have been responsible for administering statutory sick pay, SSP, since its introduction in 1983. The costs of SSP were transferred to employers in April 1994 to give them an incentive to tackle high sick absences. The cost to business was more than offset by the reduction in employers' national insurance contributions. In addition, there were measures taken to protect small businesses faced with a large proportion of their work force off sick at any one time.

The Department has recently sought views from both sides of industry on a proposal which would allow employers exemption from operating the rules of the SSP scheme where, and for as long as, they pay wages or occupational sick pay at or above the SSP rate for any day of incapacity for work. Employers could choose whether to take advantage of the easement, and employees' rights would not be affected. Responses to the proposal, a number of which are from small businesses, are currently being examined.

SCOTLAND

Initial Healthcare

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what penalties have been applied as a result of Initial Healthcare being in default in relation to staffing levels within the contract for hotel services at Hairmyers/Stonehouse trust. [25202]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The trust has withheld appropriate sums from some of the monthly payments due to the company.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the standards met by Initial Healthcare in respect of domestic services at Edinburgh Royal Infirmary trust. [25242]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Deficiencies identified early in 1995 in the delivery of domestic services at the royal infirmary have been resolved to the satisfaction of the trust.

Dental Services

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (i) children, (ii) adults and (iii) people in total were registered with dentists in each health board in (a) February 1993, (b) July 1993, (c) February 1994, (d) July 1994, (e) February 1995, (f) July 1995 and (g) February 1996. [25228]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is contained in the tables.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date dentists were first required to register their patients; and when his Department first received information on (a) total registrations which dentists and (b) total deregistrations by dentists from each health board or equivalent body. [25227]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Dentists have been able to register patients since 1 October 1990. The Department has received information from the dental practice division on the total number of patients registered in Scotland since October 1990. Information about de-regulations has been supplied by each health board since 17 July 1992.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 420, if the statistical basis for calculating the number of people deregistered by their dentists is the same as that applied by the Department of Health; and what changes in the method of calculation have been made in the last 18 months. [25229]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information provided by health boards is simply recorded and aggregated to produce the all-Scotland figures and cumulative totals; the procedure has not been changed.

Iron Age Site (Outer Hebrides)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what resources he is providing to Historic Scotland and the University of Edinburgh to undertake a rescue operation to prevent destruction and erosion of the iron age site on Greater Bernera in the Outer Hebrides; and if he will make a statement. [25536]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend provides resources to his executive agency, Historic Scotland, to fund its rescue archaeology programme and other activities. The sum of £1.8 million has been allocated in 1996–97 for rescue archaeology. It is for the agency to decide on relative priorities, including whether and to what extent to fund individual projects. The agency's chief executive is writing to the hon. Member to explain Historic Scotland's involvement in the excavation at Bosta, Great Bernera.

Letter from Graeme Munro to Mr. Tam Dalyell, dated 18 April 1996:

I refer to your Parliamentary Question of 16 April to the Secretary of State for Scotland. As you will know from the reply from Lord James Douglas-Hamilton I have been asked to reply on the particular project at Bosta.

The excavation at Bosta, Great Bernera, Outer Hebrides, is a research project being undertaken by the University of Edinburgh's Centre for Field Archaeology with the assistance of a grant from Historic Scotland. Initially the University requested a grant of £23,500 which was provided. Following a site visit by one of our Ancient Monument Inspectors to the important new discoveries made in recent weeks, Historic Scotland has allocated a further £45,000 to ensure that these are properly investigated and recorded. Digging will recommence at the end of April for a four-week period, and there will probably be a third episode of excavation in September. In due course financial support will be provided for the all-important process of analysis and publication of the discoveries.

The archaeological site contains the remains of several houses of late Iron Age date. It is at threat from active marine erosion (hence the dig), but urgent investigations are being made by the Western Isles Islands Council into the feasibility of saving the site, possibly enlisting help from major private sector concerns working locally. There is keen interest in Great Bernera and beyond in attempting to preserve or reconstruct at least part of the excavated remains, preferably on-site. This will be physically difficult, but Historic Scotland will provide technical advice on this aspect. The archaeological excavation work is a necessary precursor to any such preservation effort. An on-site meeting of all concerned will take place in early May, once the next phase of excavation has begun.

Historic Scotland are well aware of the public interest in this site, and our staff are doing everything they can, but it must be borne in mind that this is but one of many dozens of archaeological sites known to be under threat from marine erosion. To put the recent discovery into context it is certainly of national interest in relation to the archaeological evidence we can hope to obtain from the excavations, but the stonework is in poor condition and would be difficult to consolidate. The site would not, on present evidence, be a contender for bringing into State care.

I hope this information is helpful.

Sheriffs

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many court days were undertaken by (a) temporary and (b) permanent sheriffs in Scotland for each of the last 20 years; and what proportion each represents of the total number of court days worked; [25472]

(2) how many court days the duties of the sheriff in sheriff courts have been undertaken by temporary sheriffs in each of the last 15 years. [25471]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Information in the form requested is not available for the years prior to 1989–90. The figures for the years since then are set out in the table:

	Total sitting days	Number and percentage of days undertaken by permanent sheriffs	Number and percentage of days undertaken by temporary sheriffs
1989–90	22,954	18,753 (81.7 per cent.)	4,201 (18.3 per cent.)
1990–91	23,189	18,842 (81.3 per cent.)	4,237 (18.7 per cent.)
1991–92	24,568	19,105 (77.8 per cent.)	5,463 (22.2 per cent.)
1992–93	25,087	18,847 (75.1 per cent.)	6,240 (24.9 per cent.)
1993–94	25,644	19,111 (74.5 per cent.)	6,533 (25.5 per cent.)
1994–95	25,821	19,053 (73.8 per cent.)	6,768 (26.2 per cent.)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria govern the selection process for appointments as temporary sheriffs; and if he will make a statement. [25469]

Mr. Forsyth [holding answer 16 April 1996]: All applicants for temporary sheriff appointment must have been legally qualified for at least five years. All candidates complete a standard application form and are asked to provide two referees. Comments are sought from the dean of the Faculty of Advocates and from the president and secretary of the Law Society depending on whether the candidate is an advocate or a solicitor. Interviews are carried out by the sheriffs principal, who make recommendations to the Lord Advocate.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) permanent sheriffs and (b) temporary sheriffs there were in each of the last 20 years, how many of each were appointed in each year, and how many left each position; and if he will make a statement. [25467]

Mr. Forsyth [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The information requested is available from 1985 only and is given in the table. Between 1985 and 1996 a total of 31 sheriffs left their positions, mainly on retiral. Comparable information for temporary sheriffs is not readily available. The use of temporary sheriffs when permanent sheriffs are unavailable for court work serves to avoid increases in court waiting periods and inconvenience to court users which would result from cancelled sittings. Their use also makes an important contribution to dealing efficiently with temporary increases in court business. The balance between the respective contributions of permanent and temporary sheriffs is kept under regular review.

Year	Number of temporary sheriffs	Number of permanent sheriffs
1985	61	88
1986	67	92
1987	84	95
1988	100	96
1989	101	96
1990	102	97
1991	110	99
1992	108	99
1993	117	101
1994	124	101
1995	119	104
1996	110	104

Mrs Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the present salary of (a) permanent sheriffs and (b) sheriffs principal; and if he will make a statement. [25468]

Mr. Forsyth [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Salaries of permanent sheriffs and sheriffs principal fall within the remit of the Senior Salaries Review Body. Following this year's review rates are £75,978 and £88,266 per annum respectively with effect from 1 April 1996 increasing to £76,716 and £89,123 per annum respectively with effect from 1 December 1996.

Ministerial Visits

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the (a) travel, (b) accommodation and (c) policing and security costs of (i) the Prime Minister's and (ii) the Chancellor's most recent visit to Scotland. [25492]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The cost of travel and accommodation incurred in visiting Scotland are matters for my right hon. and right hon. and learned Friends. The policing of such visits is a matter for the appropriate chief constable; costs are met from the budget of the police authority or joint board and attract police specific grant at 51 per cent.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Fair Employment Tribunals

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases have been heard by fair employment tribunals since 1 January 1990. [25230]

Mr. Ancram: During the period 1 January 1990 to 31 March 1996, 207 complaints were determined after full hearings by the fair employment tribunal.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions since January 1990 the Court of Appeal has altered an award on the ground that the Fair Employment Tribunal misdirected itself in assessing compensation. [25236]

Mr. Ancram: None.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions (a) the president and (b) the vice-president of the fair employment tribunals have imposed cash penalties on employers who were in breach of tribunal orders; what has been the amount of the penalties imposed; and how many such breaches have been referred to the High Court for enforcement or committal. [25232]

Mr. Ancram: No orders have been issued by the tribunal.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many appeals to the fair employment tribunals have been dismissed since January 1990. [25235]

Mr. Ancram: There have been no appeals.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases have been heard by the industrial tribunals in Northern Ireland since 1 January 1990. [24988]

Mr. Ancram: During the period 1 January 1990 to 31 March 1996, 3,029 complaints were determined after full hearings by industrial tribunals.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what research he has evaluated into the contribution of badgers to bovine TB; and if he will make a statement. [25380]

Mr. Ancram: A study of the distribution and abundance of badgers in Northern Ireland has been carried out under the auspices of Queen's university, Belfast. Antigen development and stain typing research is continuing at the Department of Agriculture's veterinary science division to help establish the significance of the badger in the transmission of TB.

A feasibility study on the development of a vaccine for use in badgers was undertaken in 1994–95 in conjunction with the Republic of Ireland. This concluded that a long-term programme would be required to develop an effective vaccine. A joint submission for EU funding was made by six member states, including the UK. This has so far been unsuccessful.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has begun a project independently to develop such a vaccine.

Northern Ireland Federation of Clubs

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will meet the Northern Ireland Federation of Clubs to seek agreement (a) on protecting legitimate clubs and (b) on controlling illegal activity in other clubs. [25379]

Mr. Moss: The proposals for a draft Registration of Clubs Order (Northern Ireland) 1996 which I published on 30 January contained, among other things, new provisions to deal effectively with illegal activity in clubs. These provisions were introduced at the express request of the police who, I understand, have written to the Federation of Clubs setting out the reasons why they regard their introduction as essential. I am satisfied that the draft order strikes the right balance between protecting clubs that commit minor or irregular offences and providing the courts with the powers to deal adequately and effectively with clubs that commit serious and persistent breaches of the law. In the circumstances, therefore, I see nothing to be gained from a meeting with the federation to discuss these issues.

TREASURY

Taxation

14. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the average annual amounts of indirect taxation per citizen; what was the figure for 1979; and if he will make a statement. [24334]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The average amount of indirect tax paid per United Kingdom citizen is estimated to be £1,300 in 1995 and to have been £750 in 1979, at 1995 prices.

Economic Growth

15. Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his current estimate for growth in the UK for the current year; and what are the equivalent rates in other EU countries. [24335]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government's last forecast was set out in the November "Financial Statement and Budget Report", which showed the UK economy growing by 3 per cent. and Europe growing by 2½ per cent. in 1996.

Government Deficit

16. Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what ratio of Government deficit to gross domestic product he assesses to be necessary to ensure budgetary discipline. [24336]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government's fiscal objective is to bring the public sector borrowing requirement back towards balance over the medium term and, in particular, to ensure that, when the economy is on trend, the public sector borrows no more than is required to finance its net capital spending.

The PSBR has fallen sharply in the past couple of years. As it returns towards balance, the ratio of net public sector debt to gross domestic product will stabilise and then begin to fall.

Personal Allowances

17. Mr. Gallie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy for personal allowances. [24337]

Mr. Jack: The Government's overall objectives for the tax system are set out at paragraph 5.02 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1996–97". Our policy is to maintain a broad tax base and reduce marginal tax rates. Personal allowances are an integral part of achieving those objectives and are considered each year in the run-up to the Budget.

Value Added Tax

18. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will act to simplify value added tax and other taxes administered by HM Customs and Excise. [24338]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith), on 1 March 1996, Official Report, columns 777–78.

Inflation

19. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his target for the level of inflation in April 1997. [24339]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The aim of this Government is to achieve underlying inflation, as measured by the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments, of 2½ per cent. or less by the end of the present Parliament. Beyond this Parliament, the Government's aim is to continue to achieve underlying inflation at or below 2½ per cent.

Investment

20. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to promote an increase in the level of investment. [24340]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Industry is expanding capacity as needed. In 1995, manufacturing investment was over 7½ per cent. up on a year earlier, and almost 15 per cent. higher than in 1993. Most independent forecasters expect whole economy investment to rise significantly faster in 1996 than in 1995.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

22. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate for the public sector borrowing requirement in the current year; and if he will make a statement. [24342]

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the public sector borrowing requirement in the current financial year. [24331]

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane).

Debtor Countries

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further action he has taken at meetings of the International Monetary Fund to press for debt cancellation in the poorest countries. [24341]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Chancellor will be attending the spring meetings of the International Monetary Fund and the World bank on 22 and 23 April. The United Kingdom has ensured that the multilateral debt problems of the poorest, most heavily indebted will be high on the agenda. At the institutions' annual meetings in October 1995, the Chancellor, supported by other finance Ministers, called on the IMF and the World bank to assess the scope of the multilateral debt problem and to propose a solution. That work will be discussed at the spring meetings. The UK will continue to press for practical solutions to the multilateral debt problems which will be able to deliver an early exit for eligible countries from their unsustainable debt burdens.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were classified as economically inactive in each year since 1979; and what was the percentage change in each year over the previous year. [25000]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information for Great Britain available from the labour force survey is shown in the table.

Seasonally adjusted

Spring (March to May)	Economically inactive[1] (aged 16 and above)	Annual percentage change
1979	15,310
1981	15,654	+1.5
1983	16,399	+2.2
1984	16,130	–1.6

1994	16,424	+0.7
1995	16,543

[1] The definition of economic inactivity was brought into line with internationally standard definitions in 1984. Therefore, data above the line are not comparable with data below it.

Oral Cancer and Glaucoma

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new cases of (a) oral cancer and (b) glaucoma were detected in each family health service authority area in each of the last 20 years. [25257]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Statistics are not collected centrally on glaucoma. The information requested on oral cancer for each of the last 20 years could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, provisional numbers of oral cancers diagnosed in 1990 for each regional health authority in England and Wales are given in the table.

Regional health authority as of 1990

Figures for earlier years are contained in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys annual reference volumes "Cancer statistics, registrations", series MBI numbers 1, 2, 4, 5, 7, 8, 10–16 and 18–22, copies of which are available in the Members' Library.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received in the past nine months on the variation of rates of value added tax; and if he will make a statement. [24325]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Representations have been received from many individuals and organisations proposing different variations to VAT rates.

Mortgage Repayments

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the figure for the average monthly mortgage repayment at the end of 1990; and what it is currently. [24328]

Mrs. Angela Knight: In October 1990, mortgage interest payments on an average mortgage were around £320 a month. They are now about half that level, at around £160 a month.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fisheries Conservation

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to the letter from the Minister of State to all hon. Members on 2 April concerning, inter alia, fisheries conservation and science, what discussions will take place on the second report of the House of the Lords

Science and Technology Committee on fish stock conservation and management—HL25, Session 1995–96—during the regular contacts to which he refers between MAFF scientists and the industry. [25497]

Mr. Baldry: The recommendations of the House of Lords Committee on Science and Technology concerning technical conservation measures have already been discussed in meetings between fishermen, scientists and other Government experts. Other aspects of the Committee's report can readily be raised by either party in future contacts between Ministry scientists and the industry.

Pesticides Safety Directorate

Mr. Coe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what targets have been set for the Pesticides Safety Directorate in 1996–97. [25929]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have set the Pesticides Safety Directorate the following targets relating to financial performance, efficiency, the delivery of pesticides approval services and policy advice in 1996–97.

To achieve 100 per cent. recovery of costs.

To comply with budgetary controls resulting from the public expenditure survey and the supply estimates.

To achieve an overall efficiency gain of 3 per cent.

To meet the targets for delivery of services as follows:

Application stream	Applications completed	Maximum processing time (working weeks)
Technical secretariat[1]
Normal	255	43
Administrative fast	400	4
Fast	325	21

[1] The processing time targets apply to 85 per cent. of applications received except the EC and UK sifts for new substances, where the figure is 100 per cent.

1. The quality of the directorate's scientific and policy work will be subject to separate quality audits.

2. Details of performance in 1995–96 will be set out in the agency's annual report and accounts to be published during July 1996.

Beef Industry

Mr. Coe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what financial support will be provided to the United Kingdom beef producers and slaughtering sector. [25930]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made on 16 April 1996, Official Report, columns 513–16.

In addition to the support measures previously announced, particularly for the rendering industry and for the slaughter of young bull calves, the measures set out below have now been implemented. Parliamentary approval for additional provision and for the funding of new services will be sought in supplementary estimates for class III vote 1, intervention board—executive agency: common agricultural policy market support and administration, and class III vote 2, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food: operational expenditure, agencies and departmental administration. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £190 million will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

1. Supplementary compensation payments on steers and heifers—older beef cattle whose market value is greater than cull cows.

Cost: £80 million on class III vote 1. An advance from the Contingencies Fund of the full amount is required.

2. Emergency aid to the slaughtering industry, comprising two elements:

(i) immediate payment to slaughterhouses calculated on the basis of bovines slaughtered during 1995–96. Cost: £30 million on class III vote 2.

(ii) purchase of unsaleable stocks of beef held by licensed slaughterhouses and cutting premises. Cost: £80 million on class III vote 1.

An advance from the Contingencies Fund of the full amount—£110 million—is required.

3. Scheme to purchase beasts over 30 months old and to dispose of their carcases safely to prevent beef from these cattle from entering the human food chain.

Cost: £550 million on class III vote 1, 70 per cent. of compensation payments to be funded by the EU.

Deregulation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce further deregulation regarding food hygiene and public health regulations. [24925]

Mr. Boswell: Hygiene legislation is very largely harmonised at the level of the European Community, and is under review by the European Commission. In anticipation of EC proposals, the Government have consulted widely about possible simplification and rationalisation of food hygiene legislation. This revealed widespread support for consolidation of the large number of directives involved, providing necessary public health protection is not diluted. EC proposals are expected shortly.

Lindane

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if his Department has yet located the container of lindane that was washed overboard in the English channel in 1991; [25453]

(2) what estimates he has made of when the container of lindane lost overboard in the English channel in 1991 will corrode and release lindane into the sea; and what assessment he has made of the consequences of that release upon fish and marine life. [25454]

Mr. Baldry: We are not aware of the loss of a container of lindane in 1991, but a quantity of this insecticide was lost when the vessel MV Perintis sank in the channel on 13 March 1989. Despite considerable efforts by the UK and French authorities, location and retrieval of the cargo container in which the lindane was being transported was not possible. The container was believed to be undamaged when it sank which, together with the type of packaging used, indicates that any seepage into the sea would be at a very slow rate. This would rapidly dilute and disperse and not give rise to any food safety or environmental concerns. Water samples are taken from the area each year and these continue to show that concentrations of lindane have remained at background levels.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Ministerial Visit (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on how many occasions since 1992 the Secretary of State with responsibility for employment matters has visited Coventry on official business. [25168]

Mr. Robin Squire: Twice.

Dyslexia

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans she has to increase funding for promoting awareness of dyslexia in education; and if she will make a statement; [25770]

(2) what plans she has to increase awareness of dyslexia among education professionals. [25773]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department's code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs, which came into force on 1 September 1994, offers statutory guidance to schools and local education authorities on their responsibilities towards all pupils with special educational needs. It includes a section on specific learning difficulties, such as dyslexia. The Department has recently funded, or is continuing to fund, four dyslexia research projects at a total cost of some £440,000.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures she is taking to ensure that students at teacher training colleges are made aware of the problems of dyslexia. [25774]

Mr. Squire: The Secretary of State's criteria for initial teacher training—ITT—require new teachers to be able to identify and respond appropriately to relevant individual differences between pupils. The Teacher Training Agency accredits ITT course providers to ensure that they meet the criteria. The Office for Standards in Education inspects ITT courses, and the results of the inspections are published.

Local Education Authorities

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list, for each education authority in England, the number of (a) secondary, (b) primary and (c) special schools with a deficit in their balances, and the total deficit per authority, for each year since 1990. [25742]

Mr. Robin Squire: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Teachers' Pensions

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which company has been awarded the contract to operate the schoolteachers' pension scheme; and what is the value of the contract. [25881]

Mr. Robin Squire: I announced on 1 April that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State had decided to let a contract to Capita Managed Services Ltd. The value of the contract is £72.2 million over seven years. That is in cash terms, but subject to adjustment if inflation as measured by the gross domestic product deflator exceeds 3 per cent. in any year.

Student Loans Scheme

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions her Department has held with the Capita Group about taking part in the privatisation of the student loans scheme. [25885]

Mr. Forth: My officials have held discussions with a number of companies about our plans for the provision of private sector student loans. The names of those involved are "commercial in confidence" at this stage. An announcement of those companies making successful tenders for involvement in the private loans scheme will be made in due course.

Unemployed Women (Child Care Costs)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice she has evaluated on the legal consequences of refusing to pay child care costs to unemployed women under the pilot project work scheme. [25880]

Mr. Forth: I have considered advice from officials on legal and policy aspects of the matter.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans her Department has to pay the child care costs of unemployed women who are unable to attend the new pilot project work scheme because of lack of help with child care. [25882]

Mr. Forth: I have no such plans. The evaluation of the pilots will cover this and all other aspects of the pilot process.

Devon and Cornwall Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will place in the Library a copy of the minutes of the business and education board of the Devon and Cornwall TEC meetings from 1 January 1990. [25608]

Mr. Paice: No. Training and enterprise councils are private companies. This is a matter for Devon and Cornwall training and enterprise council.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list the members of the business and education board of the Devon and Cornwall training and enterprise council since its foundation; [25302]

(2) what inquiries are undertaken into the background of directors before the granting of financial assistance to companies by the business and education board of regional training and enterprise councils; and if he will make a statement; [25303]

(3) if she will list those members of the business and education board of the Devon and Cornwall training and enterprise council who were involved in (a) advising on and (b) awarding financial assistance to Rom Data Corporation Ltd., Falmouth; [25304]

(4) if she will list the companies that have received financial assistance from the business and education board of the Devon and Cornwall training and enterprise council since its foundation by (a) year, (b) scheme and (c) the number of these companies still trading. [25305]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 18 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 16 April, Official Report, column 396. These are matters for training and enterprise councils, as private companies, and for Devon and Cornwall training and enterprise council in particular.

Nursery Education

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements have been made to allow the Office for Standards in Education to undertake preparatory work on establishing an inspection system for funded nursery education, prior to the Nursery Education and Grant-maintained Schools Bill receiving Royal Assent. [26294]

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which I gave on 7 March 1996, Official Report, column 348. During the first few months of 1996–97, Ofsted will need to set up a contracting system for nursery education inspections, and to recruit, train and register the inspectors needed for inspections to begin in the autumn term.

Parliamentary approval to this new service is subject to the passage of the Bill to Royal Assent. Pending that approval, urgent essential expenditure in 1996–97 estimated at £1 million will be met by advances from the Contingencies Fund, to be repaid from the 1996–97 Ofsted vote—class IX, vote 4.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement about the level of parental contribution to the fees of pupils on the assisted places scheme for the next academic year. [26295]

Mrs. Gillan: Remission of tuition fees under the assisted places scheme is dependent on the level of fees at participating schools and the amount parents can afford to contribute. Subject to parliamentary approval of regulations to be laid in due course, the parental contribution scales will be adjusted for the school year 1996–97 to allow for inflation so that the cost to parents remains broadly the same in real terms. Where the relevant income for the appropriate financial year does not exceed £9,873, the tuition fees will be wholly remitted so that the pupil receives a free place. The new scales are set out in the table.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Social Security Agency

Sir John Cope: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the review of the Social Security Agency. [26415]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: On 19 October 1994, I announced the review of the Social Security Agency—SSA—in the House of Commons. Each next steps agency undergoes a periodic review to evaluate performance, to reconsider in a prior options study whether agency status is the best way of doing the job and to revise the framework within which it operates.

I am pleased to announce that the evaluation report of the agency's performance since it was established in July 1991 has been published today. The overall conclusion of the evaluation is that, in keeping with the principles of next steps, the quality of service to the public has improved and social benefits have been delivered in a more efficient and effective way.

The main conclusions of the prior options report are that the SSA should remain a next steps agency within the Department of Health and Social Services. There is no scope for abolition or privatisation, nor is there any evidence to suggest that wholesale contractorisation of its functions is at present feasible or likely to improve value for money for the taxpayer.

The conclusion on wholesale contractorisation does not mean that there are no opportunities for increasing competition within the organisation. The agency is already involved with the private sector in a number of areas, such as encashment services, management training, information technology and ancillary services. In particular, it is involved as co-sponsor with the Benefits Agency and Post Office Counters Ltd. in a private finance initiative to replace existing methods of payment at post offices with a benefit card. The agency also has a market-testing strategy, which will result in its support functions being subject to the market-testing process in line with recommendations of a consultancy report.

The review goes on to recommend a number of further steps which the agency should take to improve its efficiency and effectiveness, consistent with the Government reform initiative and the Northern Ireland civil service programme for continual improvement. These include the development of a comprehensive strategy for achieving efficiency improvements through involving the private sector in all aspects of its business, including benefit administration; the continued implementation of its market-testing strategy, pending more comprehensive strategy for involving the private sector; and the examination of the scope for developing internal competition, including benchmarking and purchaser/provider relationships.

In conclusion, the review has highlighted the significant improvements in customer service and efficiency which the agency has achieved since its establishment in 1991. The chief executive and his staff are to be commended for these achievements. The recommendations of the review are designed to build on these successes. I am placing a copy of the evaluation report and a copy of the executive summary of the prior options report in the Library today. Work is continuing on a revised framework document, and I shall arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library in due course.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government (Negligence Claims)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with the local authority associations and the Association of British Insurers concerning the adequacy of insurance cover against local authority negligence claims in connection with the publication of independent reports commissioned by local authorities. [25888]

Sir Paul Beresford: None.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Employment Rights (Immigration Applicants)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if people who are given exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom are also given permission to seek employment. [25571]

Mr. Kirkhope: Yes.

Consultancy Contract (Probation Qualification)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 April, Official Report, column 365, if he will list the other organisations that were invited to tender for the contract to advise on the competences required for probation officers on appointment; who was responsible for awarding the contract to KPMG; which civil servants were involved in the evaluation of the tenders; and if the contract was awarded to the lowest cost tender. [25908]

Mr. Sackville: The following firms were invited to tender for the probation officers' competences contract: Gaby Braun; Christie Associates; Shirley Fletcher Associates; KPMG; Prime Research; and Glenda Taylor Associates.

Staff for the probation training unit in the then C6 division of the Home Office evaluated the tenders received. The head of the unit, with the agreement of the head of the division, authorised the award of the contract of KPMG, which submitted the lowest cost tender.

Law of Murder (Review)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conclusions he has reached following the review of the law of murder; and if he will make a statement. [26479]

Mr. Maclean: The review has been completed and a copy of the report from the interdepartmental steering group has been placed in the Library. The steering group comprised officials from the Home Office, the Scottish Office, the Northern Ireland Office, the Ministry of Defence, the legal secretariat to the Law Officers and the Crown Office.

The review's task was to consider whether there should be an intermediate verdict, between murder and aquittal, where a defendant had killed in self-defence or to prevent a crime. It was also asked to consider whether any such intermediate verdict, or any other change to the law, should apply only to members of the police and armed forces.

The review came down firmly against any separate provision for the police and armed forces. It would be objectionable in principle and very difficult to achieve in practice in any defensible and coherent way. The review did not consider it desirable or practicable for guidance on the use of lethal force—the yellow card—to be given legislative status. These views were supported by those members of the police and armed forces whom the review consulted. The Government agree with these conclusions of the review.

The review identified three broad options for a change in the law, but concluded that only one, a verdict of manslaughter where a defendant had overreacted and used unreasonable force, might provide a way forward. That is the option which previous studies have proposed, except that the review considered a refinement that a murder verdict could remain available for a grossly unreasonable overreaction. The review recognised that this option would not necessarily ensure better justice and did not itself come to a firm conclusion.

We have considered carefully the arguments for and against the options identified by the review, but have concluded that the case has not been made that they would improve either the certainty or quality of the criminal law. The police representative associations that the review consulted did not suggest a change in the law in this area. If the option identified by the review as providing a possible way forward were adopted, the difference between a manslaughter and murder verdict would depend on an assessment of whether the defendant honestly believed that the level of force which he used was justified. Where the court or jury were satisfied that the defendant honestly believed that the force he or she used was justified, the defendant could be convicted only of manslaughter, no matter how unreasonable the force. We do not believe that this would be satisfactory. Equally, however, adopting the refinement considered by the review, and retaining a verdict of murder for those who had used grossly unreasonable force, would risk overcomplicating the law and requiring juries to draw unrealistically narrow distinctions.

For these reasons, we are not persuaded that an adequate case has been made to change the law.

DEFENCE

Land Mines

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated in the last five years into (i) the military utility and (ii) the effects of land mines; what proposals he has for future research on this subject; and if he will make a statement. [12760]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department has commissioned a number of studies into the military utility and effects of both anti-tank and anti-personnel land mines. Future such studies will be carried out as appropriate. Recent operational analysis has not identified any weapon system which could act as an effective alternative to anti-tank or anti-personnel land mines.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to answer the question of 29 January from the hon. Member for Leyton relating to land mines. [26268]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Today.

Nuclear Reporting Centres

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what nuclear reporting centres have been (a) established and (b) operated in Scotland since 1970; what the purpose of each such centre is or was; and which nuclear reporting centres are currently in operation. [25544]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 18 April 1996]: The term nuclear reporting centre is not recognised by the Ministry of Defence and I am not aware of any facility which might fit this description.

Non-British Recruits

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many individuals of foreign nationality have been accepted into (a) the Army, (b) the Royal Navy and (c) Royal Air Force in each of the past five years other than citizens of the Kingdom of Nepal; and what steps he is taking to establish the British status of applicants before admitting them to the armed forces. [25826]

Mr. Soames: The numbers of individuals of foreign nationality who have been accepted into the Army and the RAF are shown in the table. Figures for the Army are available only for the past three years. This information is not recorded centrally by the Royal Navy and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nationality	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995
Commonwealth	10	6	4	3	2	10
Dual nationality (UK and other)	4	6	1	2	3	2
Other	5	2	1	1	1	0

The procedures for establishing the nationality of applicants varies for each service. In essence, however, an applicant and his/her parents must at all times since birth have been a Commonwealth citizen—British, British dependent territories, British subject under the British Nationality Act 1981, or citizen of a country which is, or then was, an independent Commonwealth country—or a citizen of the Republic of Ireland. A waiver of these requirements may be granted in exceptional circumstances. Additionally, applicants must have resided in the UK for more than five years. An applicant's birth certificate and passport are checked at the application stage and nationality is recorded on the application form. Nationality is recorded again on the security questionnaire when appropriate. Any applicant holding dual nationality is required to surrender his/her alien nationality.

Married Quarters Estate

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the response to the invitation of indicative bids for the married quarters estate. [26293]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We have had a substantial and encouraging response from a large number of bidders. We are now evaluating those bids with a view to selecting a smaller number of bidders who will be invited to proceed to the next round of the sale process. It remains our aim, subject to achieving satisfactory price and terms, to complete the transfer of the estate to the private sector on the basis of final offers to be submitted this summer.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

British Steel

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total value of regional development grants paid to the British Steel Corporation in each year between 1979 and 1988. [25822]

Mr. Page: Information relating to regional development grants over £25,000 paid to BSC was published quarterly in "British Business", copies of which are held in the British library.

Steel Exporters

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the value to United Kingdom steel exporters since autumn 1992 of the devaluation of the pound; and if he will make a statement. [25823]

Mr. Page: It is not possible to isolate the effects of currency movements from other influences on the price and quantity of United Kingdom steel exports since the autumn of 1992. The quantity and value of the United Kingdom's annual steel exports since 1992 are given in the table.

United Kingdom exports of all steel products 1992 to 1995

Year	Value £ million	Tonnes (000s)
1992	2,874.6	8,346.6
1993	2,955.1	8,203.5
1994	3,419.8	8,825.5
1995	4,141.4	8,807.3

Note:
All steel products are defined as European Coal and Steel Community products, other UK steel industry products—tubes, cold rolled strip, electrical strip, coated strip, cold finished bars, forged semis, bars and sections—wire and other steel products.
Source: UK Steel Exports 6/1 column 30, ISSB Ltd.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had since autumn 1992 regarding the value of the pound and exports with (a) British Steel plc and (b) the British Iron and Steel Producers Association; and if he will make a statement. [25824]

Mr. Page: Since 1992, DTI Ministers have had numerous meetings with both British Steel and the British Iron and Steel Producers Association—BISPA. Issues discussed have included international trade and competitiveness. Most recently, my right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Energy met BISPA officials and industry representatives, including British Steel, in December 1995. In addition, my officials have very frequent contact with both British Steel and BISPA.

Vehicle Batteries

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many vehicle batteries are imported into the United Kingdom each year. [25740]

Mr. Page: The information is published by the Office of National Statistics in business monitors MM20 and MQ20, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Vehicle batteries are found in section 778.12 of the standard international trade classification.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many car and other vehicle batteries are manufactured in the United Kingdom each year. [25752]

Mr. Page: In 1994, 2.7 million car and vehicle batteries[1] were manufactured in the UK.

Source:
ONS UK Markets, annual report number 64.
Note:
[1] Car and vehicle batteries are defined as lead-acid accumulators for starting piston engines, of a weight exceeding 5 kg.

Financial Assistance

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list what financial assistance has been given since 1980 by his Department to (a) Moderntask Ltd., Redruth, (b) Digitize Ltd., Truro, (c) Thimbles Ltd., Redruth, (d) South West Leisure Products Ltd., Redruth, (e) Van Pieters plc, Pewsey, (f) Pan Atlantic (UK) plc, Birmingham, (g) CSL Group by (i) type of grant and (ii) date. [15775]

Mr. Oppenheim [pursuant to his reply, 29 February 1996, c. 676]: I regret that the figure for regional development grant made to Moderntask Ltd. should have stated £78,288, not £78,228. Additionally, my answer should have referred to consultancy assistance of £2,399 given to the same company in 1991.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Archaeological Heritage Convention

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when Her Majesty's Government plan to ratify the European convention on the protection of the archaeological heritage; and if she will make a statement. [25626]

Mr. Sproat: The United Kingdom supports the principle of a convention to provide a standard for the protection of archaeological sites throughout Europe, and the UK ratified the first European convention on the protection of the archaeological heritage on 20 April 1971. A revised convention was signed in 1992 and its ratification is currently under consideration.

TREASURY

West Sutherland Fisheries Trust

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the charitable purpose served by the West Sutherland Fisheries Trust. [25451]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: As with any Scottish charity, the hon. Gentleman can obtain information about the West Sutherland Fisheries Trust by applying to it directly for its explanatory document. This describes the nature of the body and its charitable purposes.

National Lottery

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue the Treasury (a) received up to the end of the 1995–96 tax year and (b) has estimated it will receive in 1996–97 from (i) duty on sales of national lottery tickets and (ii) other taxes paid in respect of lottery activities; and if he will make a statement about the use to which these additional tax revenues have been applied. [25868]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In the financial year 1995–96, the total amount of lottery duty received by HM Customs and Excise was £612 million. The projection of lottery ticket sales in the Budget forecast implies receipts of lottery duty of £660 million in 1996–97.

Figures for other tax receipts in respect of lottery activities are not available. Total tax receipts do not include the net inflows to the national lottery distribution fund, which are scored as non-tax receipts in the Government accounts.

Lottery spending will displace other consumer spending, which would have been taxable. The rate of lottery duty was set so as to be broadly neutral with respect to tax receipts.

Gross Domestic Fixed Capital

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the different methods of analysis of gross domestic fixed capital formation used by (a) the Treasury and (b) the Central Statistical Office in the national accounts. [25551]

Mr. Waldegrave: The breakdown of the whole economy gross domestic fixed capital formation used by the Treasury in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report"—FSBR—and the "Summer Economic Forecast" documents seeks to remove discontinuities arising from privatisation and other asset sales or sectoral transfers. The Government intend that year-on-year comparisons based on the FSBR should compare like with like, and so be more meaningful. Table 3.2 of the 1996–97 FSBR shows the Treasury breakdown into business investment, investment in private dwellings and land, and general Government investment. Business investment includes public corporations' investment, except national health trust hospitals, and so is unaffected by privatisations, while general Government investment is defined to exclude net purchases of land and existing buildings so as to remove the effect of asset sales, including sales of council houses. National health trust hospitals are grouped with general Government investment. In contrast, standard national accounts breakdowns of whole economy investment by industry or sector are affected by such transfer of ownership.

Special Dividend Payments

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer upon what grounds his Department has given clearance under section 703 of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 for the use of special dividend payments in takeover bids. [24185]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Clearance from the anti-avoidance provisions at section 703(a) of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 in respect of a specified transaction is considered by the Inland Revenue in response to a formal application. Clearance is given only if it is satisfied that the transaction will not give rise to a tax advantage as defined in the Act or that any such tax advantage is an accidental by-product of transactions which have a genuine commercial purpose and that the way in which they have been carried out is not motivated by the wish to obtain a tax advantage.

All applications for clearance, including cases of special dividends in takeover bids, are subject to detailed scrutiny by the Inland Revenue, who decision will be based on the facts and circumstances of the individual case.

SCOTLAND

Fisheries Protection Orders

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list all the protection orders in force under the Freshwater and Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1976, indicating in each case the names of all the rivers and lochs covered by the order; [25501]

(2) what is the total length of rivers and of banks and the total surface area of lochs which are subject to protection orders under the Freshwater and Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1976. [25502]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The following protection orders made under the Freshwater and Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1976 are currently in force:

The Rivers Tweed and Eye Protection Order 1980

The Upper Spey and Associated Waters Protection Order 1982

The River Lunan Catchment Area Protection Order 1983

The River Tummel Catchment Area Protection Order 1983

The River Tay Catchment Area Protection Order 1986

The West Strathclyde Protection Order 1988

The River Earn Catchment Area Protection Order 1990

The River Don Catchment Area (Part) Protection Order 1990

The Loch Morar and River Morar Protection Order 1992

The Loch Awe and Associated Waters Protection Order 1992

The River Clyde Catchment Area (Part) Protection Order 1994

The North West Sutherland Protection Order 1994

The River Arkaig, Loch Arkaig and Associated Waters Protection Order 1995

Naming all the rivers and tributaries, including detailing their lengths as well as calculating the surface areas of the lochs involved, could be done only at disproportionate cost. Detailed maps of the area covered by each order are held, and are available for inspection in the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department, Pentland house, Edinburgh for anyone wishing to make such estimates.

Forestry Commission Lands (Sales)

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many sales of forestry commission lands have taken place (a) in Scotland and (b) in England and Wales in each of the last three years; and how many of these included public access agreements. [23994]

Mr. Kynoch: [holding answer 1 April 1996]: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Neil McKerrow, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Neil A. H. McKerrow to Sir David Steel, dated 19 April 1996:

You asked the Secretary of State for Scotland the following question:-

"how many sales of Forestry Commission lands have taken place (a) in Scotland and (b) in England and Wales in each of the last three years, and how many of these included public access agreements."

As this question relates to matters that are undertaken by Forest Enterprise, I have been asked to reply.

The information is as follows:

	Number of disposals	Number including public access agreements
Year ended 31 December 1993
Scotland	84	—
England	41	—
Wales	79	1
Year ended 31 December 1994
Scotland	53	—
England	66	6
Wales	85	13
Year ended 31 December 1995
Scotland	57	6
England	49	—
Wales	52	8

A list of these cases is placed in the Library of the House each year.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Human Rights (Turkey)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's proposals to the UN Commission on Human Rights in respect of human rights in Turkey. [25447]

Mr. David Davis: We have contributed to the presidency statement at the UN Commission on Human Rights which will convey to the Turkish Government the depth of our continuing concern about a number of human rights issues in Turkey.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has recently received from independent human rights organisations regarding human rights violations in Turkey. [25448]

Mr. Davis: We receive regular reports from Amnesty International and other non-governmental organisations, both in the UK and elsewhere, working in the field of human rights. Many of these organisations make representations to us on the situation in Turkey.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Turkey's human rights record. [25446]

Mr. Davis: We remain concerned about the human rights situation in Turkey. During 1995, there were some welcome reforms, but much remains to be done. We are encouraging the Turkish Government to sustain progress, in accordance with the international agreements to which they are a signatory.

SOCIAL SECURITY

War Widows (Housing Benefit)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many local authorities have withdrawn the war widows pension disregard from housing benefit calculations. [24924]

Mr. Roger Evans: None. All local authorities must disregard the first £10 of a war widow's pension in housing benefit and council tax benefit calculations. In addition, the whole of any war widows supplementary pension, currently worth £51.71, is also disregarded.

TRANSPORT

Rail Services (Disabled Access)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all Network SouthEast Stations which are inaccessible to wheelchair users. [23188]

Mr. Watts: Twelve operating companies—TOCS—serve the former Network South East area. There is no detailed information available centrally about the accessibility of individual stations.

However, following the restructuring of the railways, as a condition of their licences, the TOCs are required to seek the Rail Regulator's approval for their disabled persons protection policies, which should contain a description of the current facilities, both for stations and for rolling stock. The Rail Regulator plans to use that data to form the benchmark against which station and rolling stock improvements will be measured.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to ensure that Railtrack does not levy financial penalties on train operating companies if train services are late due to disabled passengers requiring extra assistance. [25483]

Mr. Watts: None. I have no reason to believe that meeting the needs of disabled passengers causes significant delays to services.

National Road Schemes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new starts he expects to be made on national road schemes in the financial year 1996–97; and if he will list each of these schemes indicating which will be managed by the Highways Agency and which through design, build, finance and operate arrangements. [24776]

Mr. Watts: For the financial year 1996–97, the Highways Agency plans to start work on 13 schemes. Of these, eight will be conventionally funded and five, subject to tenders representing value for money, will be managed design, build, finance and operate projects.

These are as follows:

Award of Contract 1996–97

(conventionally funded)

A12 Hackney Wick—M11 link contract 1

A12 Hackney Wick—M11 contract 3

A13 Wennington—Mar Kyke

A13 west of Heathway—Thames avenue improvement

A34 Newbury bypass

A40 Gypsy corner improvement

A40 West circus junction improvement

London primary route signing project

DBFO Contract Awards 1996–97

(subject to tenders representing value for money)

A168/A19: Dishford to Tyne tunnel DBFO project, which includes A19 Norton to Parkway interchange improvement scheme.

A30/A35: Exeter to Bere Regis DBFO project, which includes A30 Honiton to Exeter improvement scheme A35 Tolpuddle to Puddletown bypass scheme.

A50/A564: Stoke to Derby link DBFO project, which includes A564 Doveridge bypass scheme.

M40 Junctions 1 to 15 DBFO project, which includes M40 junctions 1A to 3 widening scheme.

Railtrack (Asset Maintenance)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates for Railtrack's maintenance work, other than that referred to in his answer of 13 March, Official Report, column 609, were made available to W. S. Atkins; and if he will make a statement. [25456]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack prepared an initial desktop assessment of its asset maintenance plan for track and route structures for the preparation of its 1994–95 annual report and accounts. W. S. Atkins reviewed this estimate and concluded that it had been professionally prepared in a responsible manner and with reference to both long-term and recent experience of the operation and maintenance of the assets.

Since this initial assessment was prepared, Railtrack has undertaken further extensive investigations into the condition of these assets, based on statistical analyses of data gained from sample surveys and the application of techniques which update and refine the asset maintenance plan as more data become available. This work has given rise to the central estimate for the 10 years from 1 April 1994 of £3,250 million at 1994–95 prices.

British Steel

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total value of commercial orders placed by his Department with British Steel plc in each year from 1988 to 1995. [25817]

Mr. Norris: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Holyhead to Dun Laoghaire Service

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the HSS—high-speed ship—Stena vessel that is due to operate from Holyhead to Dun Laoghaire has been subjected to a safety case assessment; and if he will make a statement. [25392]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 19 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about the High Speed Ship (HSS) Stena vessel which is operating from Holyhead to Dun Laoghaire.

STENA EXPLORER has been build to the International Code of Safety for High Speed Craft and Stena Line have carried out their own safety case assessment. Proper testing of the vessel's design has been undertaken and her performance has been assessed during sea trials.

The Marine Safety Agency (MSA) has been closely involved in approving the special equipment and operational requirements of this revolutionary craft in the United Kingdom's capacity as port State and, more recently, in the role of flag State. The vessel has been surveyed to ensure compliance with the Code and has been issued with a Permit to Operate and other certification necessary for this vessel to operate a passenger service from a UK port.

WALES

Beef

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the current guidelines on the supply of (a) cow beef and (b) prime beef for use in (i) school meals, (ii) meals on wheels, (iii) NHS hospitals supplied by in-house caterers, (iv) NHS hospitals supplied by private caterers, (v) old people's homes and (vi) private nursing homes. [25165]

Mr. Hague: The latest guidance on the safety of beef for human consumption is provided in statements to the House on 20 March, Official Report, columns 375-96, on 25 March, Official Report, columns 709-37 and on 28 March, Official Report, columns 1229-90.

Health Service Budgets

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairmen of national health service trusts and health authorities concerning the carrying over into 1996–97, under year-end flexibility arrangements, unspent money from the 1995–96 budget; if those national health service trusts and general practitioner fundholders who underspent their 1995–96 allocation will receive the same budget allocation in 1996–97; if he will list the general practitioner fundholders and national health service trusts concerned; and if he will make a statement. [24920]

Mr. Hague: I have not had any consultations with the chairmen of national health service trusts or health authorities concerning the carrying over of unspent money from the 1995–96 budget into 1996–97 under year-end flexibility arrangements. National health service trusts do not receive an allocation. Instead, they receive their income from contracts with health commissioners. Arrangements have been made for trust which underspend on capital in 1995–96 to carry forward the amount to 1996–97. The allocation to general practitioner fundholders in 1996–97 is not affected by planned savings in previous years. I am unable to list those general practitioner fundholders or NHS trusts that have underspent in 1995–96 until final accounts for the year are produced and audited.

Dental Services

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) children, (b) adults and (c) people in total were registered with dentists in each family health services authority in (i) February 1993, (ii) July 1993, (iii) February 1994, (iv) July 1994, (v) February 1995, (vi) July 1995 and (vii) February 1996. [25223]

Mr. Richards: The information is given in the table.

Theatr Clwyd, Mold

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he plans to respond to Flintshire county council's proposals for future funding of Theatr Clwyd, Mold; and if he will make a statement. [25827]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend wrote to the leader of Flintshire county council about the package of support proposed for Theatr Clwyd on 19 April 1996.

Local Authorities (Negligence Claims)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he (a) has issued and (b) plans to issue to local authorities on the quality of insurance cover required by them to cover negligence claims arising from the compiling and publication of independent reports commissioned by them. [25890]

Mr. Hague: I have issued no such guidelines and have no immediate plans to do so. However, in the light of the recent developments in north Wales, I have asked my officials, in collaboration with those of other Government Departments, to look at this issue further.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer on 2 April, Official Report, column 207, (1) if he will list the numbers of cattle affected by each outbreak of BSE, broken down by (a) year, (b) county and (c) type of herd; [25404]

(2) if he will list the figures for BSE outbreaks by cases and farms affected by (a) county and (b) year of notification. [25403]

Children's Homes

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, how many visits members of his social services inspectorate made to children's homes in Clwyd (a) during the period covered by the John Jillings report and (b) thereafter. [25405]

Mr. Hague: The social services inspectorate for Wales—until 1989, the social work service—made 37 visits to childrens' homes in Clwyd between 1974 and 1995. The visits covered a range of matters, including premises, staffing and the homes' daily routine.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he received the amended version of the John Jillings report into child sex and physical abuse in north Wales children's homes; what further independent advice he has sought; and what further actions he proposes to take to assess its contents. [25891]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley) on 18 April, Official Report, columns 592-93. My Department received an amended version of this report on 1 April 1996. I am seeking legal advice on a range of issues relating to this report.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning (a) the placing in the Library of the John Jillings report commissioned by Clwyd county council into child abuse, (b) its publication in a full or expurgated form and (c) the conducting of an inquiry under the terms indicated by the Welsh Office ministerial press release of 7 September 1992. [25889]

Mr. Hague: Since 22 March 1996, there have been 15 letters to the Department calling for publication of the report of the independent panel of inquiry chaired by Mr. John Jillings. In three of these letters, parliamentary publication in some form was suggested. One further correspondent was not in favour of the report being published, but supported the holding of a public inquiry.

HEALTH

Children in Care

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average annual cost for a child in local authority care; and what is the average annual cost of a child in a foster home. [24815]

Mr. Bowis: The average annual gross cost of a child looked after by a local authority is £14,800. For a child in a foster home, the figure is £8,000.

Financial Data

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what in-year financial data his Department will publish on trusts and health authorities. [25879]

Mr. Horam: In-year financial data are not subject to audit and are used for internal management purposes only. They are not therefore suitable for publication.

Extra-contractual Referrals

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what data his Department (a) collects and (b) will publish on extra-contractual referrals. [25886]

Mr. Malone: Information on the number of extra-contractual referrals—ECRs—has not been collected centrally.

Figures for total expenditure on ECRs by health authority are collected on a "management in confidence" basis as a prompt for investigation if necessary and are not suitable for publication.

Termination Payments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 174, if he will itemise each termination payment made by each trust and health authority. [25907]

Mr. Malone: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations his Department has received on the impact of the advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines relating to third generation oral contraceptives on the number of unplanned pregnancies and abortions which have occurred since last October and which are forecast for the future; and if he will make a statement; [25610]

(2) what assessments his Department has made of the number of unplanned pregnancies and abortions which have occurred since last October and which are forecast for the future, following the advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines relating to third generation oral contraceptives; and if he will make a statement; [25611]

(3) what estimates his Department has (a) made and (b) evaluated of the financial cost of the unplanned pregnancies and abortions which have occurred since last October and which are forecast for the future, following the advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines relating to third generation oral contraceptives; and if he will make a statement. [25612]

Mr. Malone: Official figures on any increase in the number of abortions and unplanned pregnancies since October 1995 are not yet available. It is not possible to estimate the financial costs that might be involved or the impact that the findings of the recent epidemiological studies on the safety of third generation oral contraceptives have had on the number of pregnancies and abortions.

The Department has received representations on this subject from a number of sources, including correspondence from doctors and other health professionals, and a report from the British Pregnancy Advisory Service on the findings of its recent survey.

Benzodiazepines

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what quantity of each individual type of benzodiazepine was prescribed via community pharmacists in England and Wales in each of the last four years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [20621]

Mr. Malone [pursuant to his reply, 18 March 1996, c. 80]: I regret that the information provided was incorrect due to a computing error. I am arranging for the revised calculation and an addition to the explanatory notes to be placed in the Library.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 275

SESSION 1995–96

1st April—19th April 1996

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
